VANCOUVER.—This progressive city is situated at the western terminus of the C.P.R. 15 miles north of the mouth of the Fraser River, in the Strait of Georgia. The principal part of the city occupies a peninsula, bounded on the north by the waters of Burrard Inlet, south by a small indentation called False Creek, and west by English Bay, of which the other two are arms. The city is extending to the east, and to the south across False Creek.

The site of Vancouver could scarcely have been better chosen for a large city. Burrard Inlet is always safely navigable for the deepest draft vessels, and is one of the finest harbors in the world. The passage at the narrows or mouth of the inlet is about half a mile wide. Opposite the city front, however, it is more than 2 miles wide, with a depth varying from 6 to 20 fathoms, and extends inland about 20 miles, affording access to a considerable area of rich country, the products of which Vancouver governs, in this respect serving the commercial purpose of a large river. On the west and south, English Bay and False Creek also afford accommodation for shipping.

It was incorporated under the name "Vancouver" on April 6, 1886, the population then being about 600. The name is in honor of Capt. Geo. Vancouver, R.N., who, over a hundred years ago, discovered, explored and named Burrard Inlet.

Twenty years ago, nine-tenths of the present area of the city was a dense unbroken forest of high firs, with but a single street and a few rough logging roads leading into the forest; one of these in the direction of New Westminster. While the timber was being removed from the site and Vancouver was in process of being transformed from a wilderness to a first-class modern city, a fire swept over it (June 13, 1886), and left but a few buildings standing. Phoenix-like it has since sprung from its own ashes, for on the completion in May, 1887, of the C.P.R. into Vancouver, and the arrival of the first through train from Montreal, an impetus was given the growth of the city, and the advancement made has been marvellous.

The climate is temperate, the thermometer seldom registering above 90° in the summer, and lower than 10° in winter. The rainy season may be considered from November till March. The driest months in the year are June, July, August and September.

The city is laid out on a magnificent scale, and is being built up in a style fully in accordance with the plan. Nearly all the streets are graded, the more important business ones being planked and macadamized. Electric street cars are in operation, and the streets are well lighted with electric arc lights.

The several churches are represented as follows: Episcopalian, 6; Roman Catholic, 2; Presbyterian, 6; Methodist, 5; Baptist, 4; Congregational, 2; Lutheran, 1, besides a Y. M. C. A. building, the barracks of the Salvation Army, and Chinese Mission. It has 3 daily papers: the "News Advertiser" (morning), the "World" (evening), and "Province" (evening), besides weekly and monthly periodicals. It has also 12 banks, agencies of the chief eastern monetary institutions.

The banking returns of the city, as indicated at the Vancouver Clearing House for the year ending February 28, 1906, amounted to a total of $92,548,818, an increase over the total of the previous year of close upon 17 million dollars. The custom returns of the port for the year 1905 show a revenue derived from imports of $1,652,582, while the appraised value of the city's exports amounted to $3,052,200. In the following year, ending March 31, 1906, the value of the exports increased nearly 1½ millions: this, of course, is in addition to the value of the year's exports of the neighboring City of New Westminster, amounting to nearly $5,000,000. The bulk of these exports were, it is understood, to the United States, and consisted of timber, fish, minerals (including coal and the precious metals), building stone, and agricultural products and fruit. It has a good school system, with 115 teachers and 5,678 pupils, the cost of which, covering the 12 schools in the city, was, for the year 1905, $170,562. It is also well equipped with hospitals, water works, fire halls, a police force, and a free public library. The value in 1905 of the city property was, in buildings $547,040, and in lands $603,550. Added to these figures are the value of its waterworks, fire halls, sewers, drains, septic tanks, and other civic property, bringing up the total to over 4 million dollars. Vancouver's shipping industries keep pace with its general expansion: though manufacturing is as yet not a strong feature, its lumber mills, coast and interior mining, deep sea fishing, keep the docks and shipping activities active. For extending the area of the docks and for manufacturing purposes, the city has recently obtained from the Dominion Government rights over 500 acres of tidal flats at the east end of False Creek. The harbor is always interesting with its array of steamers and shipping plying between Vancouver and its coast and foreign ports. Among the former will be found the steamships of the Canadian Pacific Royal Mail and Steamship Company, plying in connection with its transcontinental railway service to China and Japan and to the provincial ports on the coast. These are in addition to the fleet of other steamship lines in the Australian trade, as well as those plying between Vancouver and Victoria, between the former and Montreal, and those of the Northern Express service to and from Skagway and the water approaches to the Yukon.

For recreation purposes, Vancouver is more-over supplying itself well with a system of public parks, in addition to the delights afforded by pleasure boats on Burrard Inlet and in the waterways adjacent to the city.

Stanley Park, a peninsula of 950 acres, almost surrounded by water, is enclosed by a beautiful 10 mile driving road and intersected by drives and walks. East End Park contains 160 acres granted by the Local Government. The city has also 40 acres of land on the south side of False Creek reserved for park purposes.

The increasing population of Vancouver further emphasizes the city's progress. In January, 1887, its population was only about 2,000; in 1891, it rose to 13,709; in 1901 it had reached 26,196; and to-day (1906) it is not far short of 46,000.

VANCOUVER ISLAND, B.C., not the least important portion of British Columbia is Vancouver Island, which, from its great wealth of natural resources and its commanding position on the Pacific Coast, should become one of the richest and most prosperous districts of the province. Coal mining and lumbering are the chief industries, and fishing, quartz mining, copper smelting, ship-building, whaling and other branches are being rapidly developed, the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway, running from Victoria to Wellington, serves a section of country which it would be difficult to surpass anywhere in the world for beauty of scenery and natural wealth. There are prosperous agricultural communities along the railway and in Comox District, and several mines are being developed. There is quite a large area of agricultural land, but it is heavily timbered and costly to clear by individual effort. Area, 10 million acres.

VICTORIA, the capital of British Columbia and the seat of the Provincial Government, is one of the beautiful cities of the Pacific Coast, and is situated in the south-east part of Vancouver Island, about an irregular indenture from the Strait of Juan de Fuca on the south. The city is built on moderately undulating ground, and contains an area of about 5 square miles. The nearest mainland is about 20 miles distant south to Port Angeles, Wash. The nearest Canadian mainland is about 65 miles north-westward by the main route of travel. Vancouver is 84 miles, Seattle 80 miles, San Francisco 750 miles, and Tacoma 127 miles. Vancouver Island extends some 40 miles farther south than the 49th parallel, so Victoria faces United States Territory to the south and east.

The Hudson Bay Company established a trading post at Victoria early in the last century. In 1847 a fort was built there. Five years later the town was platted, and in 1862 it was incorporated. The first vessel arrived from England in 1845. For many years the Hudson Bay Company practically owned the entire Vancouver Island, and whatever industrial operations were engaged in were related in some manner to the company's interests. This condition of affairs prevailed to a considerable extent till about the year 1858, when the Fraser River gold excitement drew throngs of miners to British Columbia. In a few months afterwards Victoria developed into a flourishing city, though but few of the twenty-five or thirty thousand miners who spent the winter in that vicinity remained as permanent residents. Still its real growth began at that time, and it has had a gradual and healthy increase since

The population of the city has been increasing steadily. In 1874 there was a population of 4,674; in 1891, 16,841; in 1901, 20,821; to-day (1906) the population is estimated at 26,000.

The city's mercantile, manufacturing and shipping interests have been developed by the support which it commanded as one of the two chief trading points of the Province. Victoria has shared with Vancouver in being the chief trading point of the entire British possessions west of the Rocky Mountains, because it was so accessible by water, which was the great highway for all commerce.

Until the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Victoria was the only place of importance in British Columbia. It is the ocean gateway to the Province, and must ever command and receive a large portion of the interior and coast trade.

It is, with Vancouver, the commercial metropolis and social centre. Shipping from all parts of the world enters the harbor, making it a notable port of the Pacific seaboard.

Victoria is increasing in size and importance from the force of its own momentum. The larger it grows the more rapid is its advancement. No limit is hazarded to the scope for industrial development on the island, which is three hundred miles in length north-west and south-east—an area of about twelve thousand miles—which territory may be considered tributary to Victoria. From this area, and from the smaller islands of the adjoining waters and from the mainland much business flows to the capital city. The government is administered here, and if no other reason existed, that alone would have a tendency to draw business. The Parliament buildings are admitted to be a great adornment of the city, to which has now to be included the palatial hostelry erected by the Canadian Pacific Ry. Company. The Victoria Custom House shows the largest business of any port of the Province, and ranks with Vancouver as fifth port of the Dominion.

There is a Gas Works, also an Electric Light Company, which furnishes the "Ball Electric Arc Light," as well as incandescent light, which is extensively used among the business houses. An efficient paid fire department, with the latest improved equipment, gives ample fire protection.

Beacon Hill Park, in the vicinity, is the favorite resort of the citizens. It occupies a large tract of ground in the eastern side of the city, being washed by the waters of the Straits of Juan de Fuca. A slight elevation, around which is a race track, gives the park its name. The park itself is a rare combination of the beauties of nature and artistic design. Three artificial lakes have been excavated, into the smaller one of which goldfish have been placed. A number of wild animals and birds are in cages or enclosures. Good roads and foot paths enable visitors to go comfortably all over the park. This is a great field for all kinds of athletic games, and a favorite one with tourists, especially as the outlook from it is grand, overlooking the broad strait, with the snow-capped Olympian Mountains plainly in view, on the mainland of Washington to the south, and the majestic peaks of the Cascades relieving the landscape to the south-east and east. From the higher points of the city can be enjoyed perhaps the finest landscape views of mountain, water and islands that are to be seen in any part of the world.

The North Arm of the Harbor, which forms a gorge about a mile from the city, is another favorite resort, especially for boating parties.

Esquimalt is also one of the prominent resorts of the vicinity, the Government works and naval equipments adding to the attractions which the scenery affords.

Esquimalt (virtually a part of Victoria) is esteemed of such importance by the British Government (by whom, until recently, this station was maintained), that they erected strong fortifications in addition to the former means of defence. This defence is now undertaken by the Canadian Dominion.

Though located on an island, Victoria does not suffer from the lack of outside communication, as that fact might imply. The harbor is generally a lively place, especially during the summer season, for then the ships that bear the carrying trade between here and England generally arrive with large cargoes of merchandise of all kinds, for general distribution in the Province, and by them are returned those cargoes of salmon, lumber and furs, the principal exports of the Province, and for which it is noted. The Pacific Coast Steamship Co.'s boats call at Victoria direct from San Francisco, distant 750 miles, every five days, carrying the Canadian and United States mails. During the fruit season these ships bring the first supply for the Province of Victoria, and from here it is distributed. A C.P.N. Co. steamer makes tri-weekly coasting trips to New Westminster, and another monthly steamer for all points up the Northern Coast. The Alaskan steamers of the P. C. S.S. Co. make Victoria their clearing port northbound, and entry port southbound.

Esquimalt Harbor, about three miles to the westward of Victoria, is the Dominion naval station on the Pacific. It is probably the best one on the shores of Vancouver Island. It being a perfectly land-locked refuge, and naturally easy of access for vessels of the deepest draught, war vessels are stationed there frequently, and until recent years it was the general headquarters for the imperial navy in the Pacific. A dry dock 450 feet long and 27 feet deep, with an entrance 55 feet wide, has been constructed at a cost of about $900,000. The arsenal used to contain large quantities of stores and ordnance supplies of all descriptions. The Royal Naval Hospital and Cemetery are located here.

The city is amply provided with educational facilities, both public and private. There are 5 Ward schools, besides the large central and high schools. These public schools are maintained by the Government and controlled by a school board elected by popular suffrage. There is also 1 ladies' college (Anglican) and the large St. Ann's convent, besides 2 primary schools, maintained by churches.

The city has a free public library of about fifteen thousand volumes.

There are 15 churches (3 Episcopal, 1 Roman Catholic, 3 Methodist, 3 Presbyterian, 2 Baptist, 1 Reformed Episcopal, 1 Jewish Synagogue and 1 Chinese Joss House.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital, built in the outsirts of the city, cost $100,000. There is also the St. Joseph's Hospital, a private Roman Catholic institution. The press is represented by 2 dailies ("Colonist" and "Times"), also by 4 weekly newspapers and 4 monthlies. It has also 7 banking institutions (the agencies of the B. N. America, Montreal, Commerce, Royal, Imperial, Merchants and Northern). The volume of the bank clearances of the city, for 1905, totalled $36,890,464. In 1904, the value of its exports was $2,062,794 and that of its imports $2,882,000. The vessels entered and cleared during the year were 2,265 and 2,273 respectively; of these 1,185 were foreign. Victoria is the first port of call for the trans-Pacific liners and northern steamers, as well as for all the big freighters that round the Horn for Puget Sound points. It is the home port of the Victoria sealing fleet, the C.P.R. Pacific Coast Service, and of many coasting vessels. It has daily communication with Vancouver, Seattle and other points, and there is a tri-weekly service to San Francisco.

The Esquimalt & Nanaimo Ry., now owned and controlled by the C.P.R., is the only road having a track into the city. Construction was begun in October, 1884, and the road was completed in August, 1886. This line extends up the Eastern Coast of the Island, a distance of some 70 miles to the City of Nanaimo, or rather to Wellington. The first 25 miles from Victoria, the road is built through a rough country, and an elevation of nearly 1,000 feet is attained. There are several high trestles and a tunnel on this section. Lake, river, valley and mountain furnish an attractive variety of scenery. A number of prosperous settlements are on the line of this road, and several resorts that are much frequented by tourists and sportsmen. Victoria is a metropolitan city, and betrays it to the eye of the least practical observer. Its position is such that it will always be the distributing point for a vast area of territory, and its numerous banking corporations have given it a prestige as a financial centre.
