PREFACE.

The Third Volume of "The Landmarks of Toronto" requires no introduction to the reader. A preface of some kind is considered the conventional form in which a publication may be ushered into life, and, although the Third Volume of "The Landmarks of Toronto" needs no introduction to the reader, this occasion naturally gives to the publisher an opportunity of calling attention to the fact that the book is valuable, and unique in some regards.

The first and second volumes of the series have already found favor. Not, perhaps, to the full measure of the publisher's desire, but sufficient to prove that there are half a thousand readers yet to the fore who treasure the early history of Toronto.

Perhaps no city in the world, Old London excepted, has had eighteen hundred pages of reading matter devoted to its history. Certainly, no books of the kind have ever contained within covers the one thousand engravings of familiar spots in and about the town for which John Graves Simcoe, staff in hand, went "a city hunting" over a century ago.

This third volume contains the history of many landmarks, each chapter being complete in itself. The endeavor has been to make every line interesting, and at the same time to compile an accurate record for the guidance of those who by birth or residence claim Toronto as home.

The engravings were all made specially for the publication, and are faithful copies of originals or reproductions in half-tone.

In general the landmarks call for no specific mention. Some, however, are worthy of particular note. The history of the Cathedral Church of St. James, the first Anglican church of the Town of York, in which for a century the Holy Writings have been read, must be attractive to every Torontonians. No such collection of facts about the old church has ever been given before. In this volume is included an accurate list of every baptism and marriage in the church from the earliest date of record to 1896, the MSS. of which in their original form contain some thousands of written pages.

This volume, as with those preceding it, is submitted to the reader in hope that some of the spare time of life may be pleasantly filled by the perusal of a story which will be interesting even in competition with an entertaining novel or a modern newspaper.

The reading of history, some one has said, commends itself to many as the pleasant occupation of stray half-hours, and, as the mental labor involved in mastering these chapters is at the command of all, it follows that the reader, at a very small cost, may herein find entertainment that will not only be pleasurable but knowledge-giving.

This is the third volume of the series. The fourth, with a complete history of each church from its foundation, will be issued in the spring of 1899.

Five hundred copies of this volume have been printed. The price is $2.00. The book will not be reprinted.

CHAPTER I. CHANGES AND IMPROVEMENTS.

Spadina Avenue as It Was—Yonge and Grenville Streets—Vanished Scenes—Some Old-time Residents.

When one passes now, along Spadina avenue from Queen street to Bloor street there is little or nothing left in the buildings on either side of the road to call to mind what the now splendidly paved and at night brilliantly illuminated thoroughfare was like only twenty-five years since, in 1870.

Everyone is familiar with the appearance of the north-west corner of College street and Spadina avenue as it is today. Yet there are many thousands of Torontonians who have but the faintest idea of what it was like in 1870. Where handsome houses now are and where thriving businesses are conducted stood three or four rough-cast cottages, in every stage of dilapidation. The fences were tumbling down, the stucco was falling off each house by square yards, the Venetian blinds in many cases hung by one hinge, and in others were wholly missing. One house had quite lost its chimneys, and on another they were partly blown down. The sidewalks were of three feet planks, and they, too, in many places were sadly in need of repair.

Nor was this an isolated case by any means, though perhaps it was the worst. With very few exceptions the houses in Spadina avenue, north of Queen street, were of the commonest order and poorest construction, and in every case lacked all the conveniences that in 1895 can be found in those that are rented for $3 and $10 a month.

The picture given is no fancy one. It is not drawn from imagination, as will be seen by the accompanying cut of the locality as it was just a quarter of a century since. No better evidence can be given of the wonderful progress made by the city than comparing Spadina avenue as it is now with what it was at the period referred to.

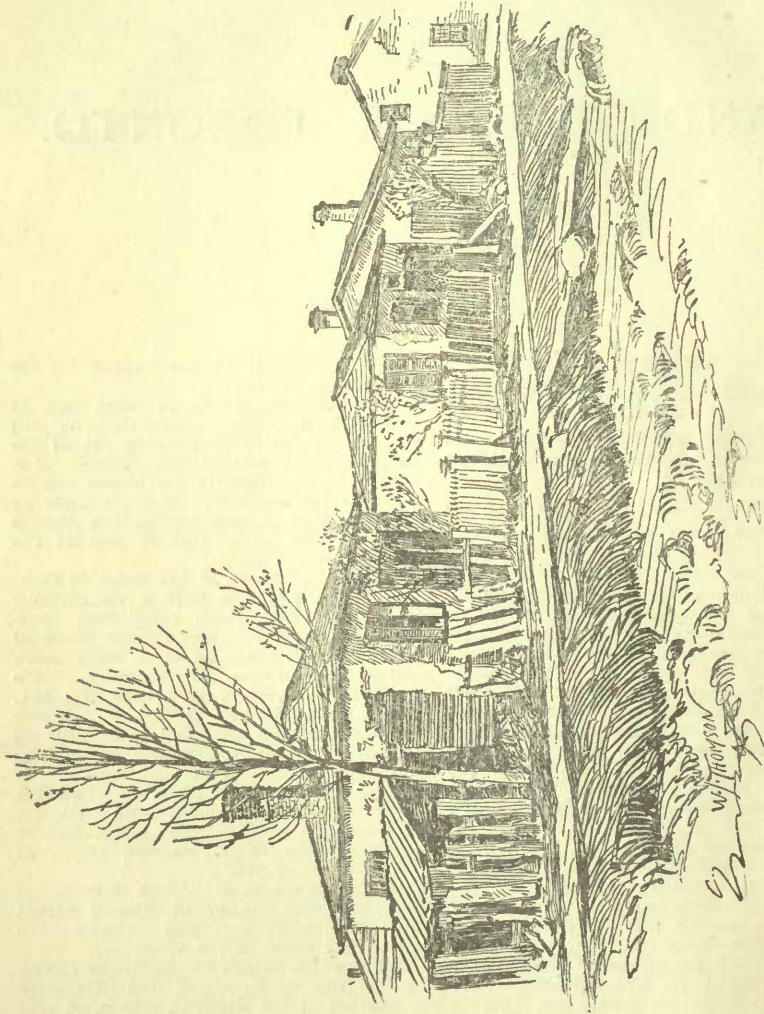

Where the branch of the Bank of Commerce is now was in 1870 a vacant lot; there were four small rough-cast cottages north of the corner, the third of which is still standing in a very much improved condition. The building of the Y. M. C. A. on Spadina avenue, No. 484, occupied the site of the first of the four cottages, private dwelling houses fill up the space occupied by the second, and the third is now No. 498. The fourth was just on the westerly bend of Spadina Crescent, and was pulled down with the others about fifteen years since. Robert Mansfield, the florist, resided there, as his widow does yet.

The residence of Sir Adam Wilson, on the north-east corner of Russell street and Spadina avenue, was almost the only other house in the vicinity.

The land on which the cottages shown in the illustration stood was originally a portion of the Baldwin estate. It was purchased and these cottages erected by the late John Smith, a prosperous man of business in the city. Many years since, in the "forties," John Smith was in partnership in the provision trade with his namesake, the lately deceased Alexander Mortimer Smith, on the eastern side of Yonge street, just south of Richmond street. Afterwards he was in business on the south side of Front street, near Church street, in the same trade. He was a man who was universally respected. He was Spadina avenue in the later "sixties," and the same place as it now appears. It was a new neighbourhood, and great changes were naturally to be looked for as time progressed. But the con-killed by an accident on the street railway on Church street, near Isabella street, where he resided.

It is not so surprising that there should be such a marked contrast between trasts presented between the older parts of the city then and now are almost as great. Take, for instance, the west side of Yonge street in 1865, between College avenue as it was then, College street as it is now, and Grenville street. On the last day of December, 1894, there were fourteen houses and shops on that portion of the thoroughfare numbered from 450 to 470 there being in addition 450 1-2, 452 1-2, and 454 1-2. There was in 1865 no street railway, no electric lighting, no asphalted roads or sidewalks, the former was of macadam, the latter of planks, not in the best of repair at most times, but it must be said in justice to the former, that it was always, excepting just when the frost was breaking up, in excellent condition, as far north as Bloor street, fairly level and during the summer well watered. Of course, it was very dusty, but not nearly so bad as other portions of the city's thoroughfares.

Where now exists a long row of excellent stores and houses was one single, substantial brick house, No. 432, owned and occupied by J. B. Caulkins, of the firm of Smith & Caulkins, brush and broom manufacturers, the manufactory itself being No. 434. As will be seen from the illustration, the whole place had a country aspect, though the firm did a very extensive business. Later the firm became Caulkins & Sanderson, but as late as 1870 no additions had been made to the buildings between the two streets, College and Grenville on Yonge's western side.

The land upon which Mr. Caulkins' house was erected formerly belonged to James Macaulay. At his death it was sold to Dr. Clark, of Yonge street, father of Capt. C. J. Clark, 100th Regiment, and of Allister M. Clark, who built the house which he sold almost as soon as he had put it up, to J. B. Caulkins.

To proceed further north, still on the western side of Yonge street, between Grenville and Grosvenor streets, was the small dairy farm of William Forbes. He had several cows, and pastured them in a field, certainly of no very extensive dimensions, close to his house. There were no other occupiers between Grenville and the next street, Grosvenor, excepting Forbes. When the latter street was passed came the Victoria Hotel, kept by one Robert Hancock; then came Dr. Page's surgery and residence, and the premises occupied by an all but forgotten worthy, T. F. Roome, the organ builder. Passing Breadalbane street, at No. 504, lived Martin Malone, the well-known mail officer, and, with the exception of his house, all was waste or garden ground until St. Alban's street was reached. Three well-known men were among the occupants of that side of the street; they were B. Woodsworth, who had an extensive lumber yard on the north-west corner of St. Alban and Yonge streets; Charles Durand, who lived at 538, and who practiced and still practices (1895) as a barrister; and John Wickson, one of the same family as Professor Wickson, some time head master of Toronto Grammar school, and who now, though long past the "three score years and ten" of the Psalmist, is hale, hearty and actively engaged in philanthropic work in London, Eng. Passing St. Joseph, between that and St. Clements street, were some half dozen residences of a very second-rate description. The latter street is now known as Irwin avenue, and it was all vacant land from there to Albany, now called St. Mary's street. Czar street did not exist then. The houses between Albany and Bloor streets were for the most part occupied by small trades people, though the residences of Amos Bostwick, No. 642, and that of the wholesale clothiers, the Lumleys, Edward, Benjamin and Morris, next door, were of a more pretentious character. On the south-west corner of Bloor and Yonge streets was Robert Brampton, the druggist and grocer. His store was a favourite resort of many of the old-time residents in Yorkville, as Brampton could not only tell a very good story, but also enjoyed listening to one.

Returning to College avenue, on the eastern side of Yonge street, on the south-east corner of Yonge and Gloucester streets, No. 547, was Mr. George Michie's substantial residence, still standing. South of it was James Stitts, and on the corner of Wellesley street lived Mr. Robert Cassels, cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada. Mr. B. M. Worthington occupied rooms at 483 Yonge street. He was principal of what was then known (1863-64) as the Commercial College. Reaching Carlton street, opposite the point from which we started, several small houses and shops were passed, none of any importance, nor do any of those who resided there call for special notice in this retrospective sketch of Yonge street from College avenue to Yorkville thirty years ago.

CHAPTER II.

TRINITY UNIVERSITY.

Its Rise and Progress—The First Provost and Professors—The Early Governing Body—The Benefactors.

Of the many educational establishments and institutions which are happily now scattered throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion, and not a few of which have their home in Toronto, there are none which have been so closely interwoven with the political history of the country and with the careers of some of its statesmen than Toronto University and that also of Trinity.

To give even the most condensed history of Trinity University without referring to King's College, now known as Toronto University, or more popularly as the 'Varsity, would be impossible. So it will be necessary to go back for many years to a period of which there are now few, if any, survivors, and show how from the events which led to the abolition of King's College, Trinity University came to be established.

So far back as 1797, almost a century since, the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of Upper Canada petitioned King George III. that "His Majesty would be graciously pleased to direct his Government in this province (Upper Canada) to appropriate a certain portion of the waste lands of the Crown as a fund for the establishment and support of a respectable Grammar school in each district thereof, and also of a College or University for the instruction of youth in the different branches of liberal knowledge." To this petition the Duke of Portland, who was then acting as Secretary of State for the Colonies, on November 4th, 1797, thus replied in a despatch addressed to President Russell:

"His Majesty * * * has condescended to express his most gracious intention to comply with the wishes of the Legislature of his Province of Upper Canada in such manner as shall be judged to be most effectual."

Nothing further was done until a year later, when President Russell, on November 6th, 1798, addressed a circular to the Executive Council and judges of Upper Canada asking them for their opinion as to the best means to be adopted so that some of the waste Crown lands might "be appropriated and rendered productive towards the formation of a fund for the establishment of free grammar schools in those districts in which they are called for."

The report made by the Council and judges was a very lengthy one, and was signed by Chief Justice Elmsley, for himself and his colleagues. Its first recommendation was as follows:

"That an appropriation of 500,000 acres, or ten townships, after deducting the Crown and clergy seventh, will be a sufficient fund for the establishment and maintenance of the Royal foundation of four Grammar Schools and an University in the Province of Upper Canada."

The report stated that in the judgment of its compilers £180 provincial currency, or $720, would be a sufficient annual allowance, and that "the provision for the establishment and maintenance of the University should be at least equal to that of four schools taken together."

Very shortly after this date, December, 1798, the District Grammar schools came into existence, but not until March 16th, 1828, was the Royal charter granted which, among other things, set forth:

"That there shall be established at or near our town of York, in our said Province of Upper Canada, from this time one college, with the style and privileges of an University, as hereinafter directed, for the education and instruction of youth and students in arts and faculties, to continue for ever to be called King's College."

The charter further set forth that the president of the college "shall be," note, not may be, "a clergyman in holy orders of the Church of England." Further, it appointed the then Archdeacon of York, Dr. John Strachan, the first president, and it enacted that the archdeacon of York should always be ex-officio president of the college.

The governing body was to be called the "College Council." It was to consist of the chancellor, the president and seven of the professors. These were all compelled to be members of the Anglican church, and the charter especially set forth, should "previously to their admission into the said College Council, severally sign and subscribe the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, as declared and set forth in the Book of Common Prayer."

More than the foregoing, though, was enacted, for if there were not professors enough to make up the requisite seven who were members of the Church of England, the Chancellor had the power to appoint outsiders who had graduated at the University to the vacancies in the Council.

No test was required from matriculants who only pursued an arts course. They could take their degrees entirely unfettered; but divinity students were subject to the same regulations as then obtained in the University of Oxford, which were religious tests of the most stringent order in regard to the Church of England.

To all intents and purposes the first Upper Canadian University, King's College, was to be an Anglican institution, maintained by public money.

Very great dissatisfaction was soon manifested throughout the province when the provisions of the charter became known, and despite the fact that the then Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Peregrine Maitland, had formed the College Council as soon as he received the charter, no commencement of work had been attempted.

In 1836 the opponents of the proposed college had been able to bring such pressure to bear upon both the Colonial and Home Governments that an act was passed in the Imperial Parliament making certain alterations and amendments in the charter of the university. These were certainly not in the interest of the Anglican body, but, on the other hand, they were not in the interest of any other religious denomination; while they absolutely debarred either Unitarians or Jews from being professors in or members of the governing body of the college. Dr. Strachan was to retain office as president during his life, and his successor was to be appointed by the Crown.

In due time King's College was opened, the corner stone being laid with great ceremony by Sir Charles Bagot, the Governor-General of Canada, on St. George's Day, 1842. The work of the college began June 8th, 1843, and soon began to exercise through its scholars an influence for good among the people of the province. Among the first of its undergraduates were: Walter Stennett, afterwards the fourth principal of Upper Canada College; William Wedd, for forty years one of the classical masters at the same institution; and Alexander Dixon, now Anglican rector of St. George's church, Guelph, and also an honorary official of Trinity College.

What has been written will clearly show the state of affairs regarding King's College up to 1842. Just prior to the laying of the corner stone of the university, the Reverends A. N. Bethune, H. J. Grasett and Henry Seadding, chaplains to Dr. Strachan, Bishop of Toronto, met together for the purpose of devising a scheme by which the students in Divinity in the diocese of Toronto, which meant the whole of Upper Canada, could be brought under a systematic course of instruction in theology before they were admitted into holy orders. This meeting was the result of the dissatisfaction felt by Anglicans at the Royal Charter given to King's College being interfered with, and it was also evidence of the fear they felt, that further changes still less in the interest of the Anglican body might be brought about.

The three clergymen who have been named deliberated carefully, as any one who ever had any acquaintance with either of them will know they were likely to do. It is hard even to imagine any one of the three acting without the greatest deliberation at all times, and the result of their deliberations was a recommendation from them that it would be in the interest of the Anglican body to establish a theological college in the diocese. The Church of England clergy and laity in Upper Canada found that they could not have a State aided sec-ularian university governed by men all of whom were compelled to be Anglicans, and though Bishop Strachan was still president of King's College, the most far-seeing and sagacious men amongst the Anglicans felt that the day was not far distant when the last vestige of denominationalism would be swept out of King's College. Amongst those who thought thus was Bishop Strachan, and while he was prepared to fight to the bitter end for all that he thought worth fighting for as a Churchman in the control of King's College, he was prepared for the worst, and was determined that when the remnant of Anglican influence vanished from King's College, the former body must have a university of its own, controlled by and in the interest of that church.

Once having made up his mind on any subject Dr. Strachan was not slow to act. The three clergymen named had held their meeting in October, 1841, and on November 27th, in the same year, the following notice appeared in the Church, a newspaper published in the interest of the Anglican body.

"The Lord Bishop of Toronto has been pleased to appoint the Rev. A. N. Bethune rector of Cobourg and one of his Lordship's chaplains, to be professor of theology in this diocese. Candidates for Holy Orders will in future be expected to place themselves under the instructions of the professor for the purpose of passing through a prescribed course of theological study, but they must previously pass an examination before one of the Bishop's chaplains to ascertain their competency to enter with advantage on the appointed line of reading. At the end of the course such students as are approved by the professor, and can produce the necessary testimonials will be permitted to present themselves as candidates for ordination."

This was practically the birth of the theological department of Trinity University, though that institution itself was not actually called into existence until some nine years later. No blame is sought to be attached to Dr. Strachan for doing what he considered his best for the Anglican church. He had hoped to secure and thought he had secured, King's College in that body's interest, and was disappointed. He foresaw that ere long that college would be no longer in any sense a religious training school, and like the statesman he was, he prepared to put himself in a position to meet the evil day when it arrived.

Dr. Bethune commenced his lectures at Cobourg on January 10th, 1842, and there were seven students in the first term, which number was increased to seventeen before the end of the year. The course was a classical and theological one and lasted three years. There was of course no endowment to work with, the income being made up from the fees of the pupils and by a grant of £100 sterling from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in England. During the existence of this school until it was merged with Trinity University in 1851, forty-five students availed themselves of the opportunities for study it afforded them. Amongst them were the following well-known men: Revs. C. L. Ingles, whose son is now rector of St. Mark's, Parkdale; Canon Logan; J. G. D. McKenzie, formerly of Yorkville; James Mockridge; J. B. Worrell, now of Oakville; Charles Ruttan, the first rector of St. George's, Toronto, now of Norway, and the well-known antiquarian, G. A. Bull, of St. Catharines.

King's College pursued its career, but it was greatly opposed by many of the politicians in the province, and in the year 1849 the end came. By an act passed by the Provincial Legislature on May 30th, 1849, remodelling the university, under the style, no longer of King's College, but of Toronto University, it was enacted, by clause xii.: "That there shall be no Faculty of Divinity in the said University, nor shall there be any Professorship, Lectureship or Teachership of Divinity in the same."

The re-modelled University was to be an absolutely secular institution, so it became and so it has remained ever since.

The new act came into operation on January 1st, 1850, and then Dr. Strachan felt the time for decisive measures had arrived. King's College as a divinity school, even if a poor one, was a thing of the past, and he must take steps to supply the deficiency created. The Bishop at once issued a letter to Anglicans throughout the province, in which, after lamenting the extinction of King's College "as a Christian Institution," he asked:

"Deprived of her University, what is the Church to do? She has now no seminary in which to give a liberal education to her youth. What is enjoyed by all the other large denominations in the province is denied to her." The Bishop then proceeded to dwell on the importance of religious education, and told his readers that "it was surely the duty as well as the privilege, of every churchman in the diocese, to assist as far as he is able in supplying the want which the church now feels in the destruction of her University, and which, if not supplied, will in a short time arrest the happy progress she is making through all parts of the country." He then proceeded in the most emphatic language to sketch out what he believed was required. "The church ought to do nothing by halves," wrote the Bishop, adding, "Her University must comprise an entire system of education, based on religion." Proceeding, he gave a description of what he considered the proposed new University should be, and announced his intention of proceeding to England to obtain help and additional contributions to those already promised in furtherance of the project. There is a touch of true pathos in the concluding words of the Bishop's letter, reading thus:

"I shall have completed my seventy-second year before I can reach London, of which more than fifty years have been spent in Upper Canada, and one of my chief objects during all that time, was to bring King's College into active operation; and now after more than six years of increasing prosperity to see it destroyed * * is a calamity not easy to bear.

"I shall not rest satisfied till I have laboured to the utmost to restore the college under a holier and more perfect form. The result is with a Higher Power, and I may still be doomed to disappointment; but it is God's work, and I feel confident that it will be restored, although I may not be the happy instrument or live to behold it.

"Having done all in my power, I shall acquiesce submissively to the result, whatever it may be; and I shall then and not till then, consider my mission on this behalf ended."

The Bishop was to sail for England early in April, and to bear with him a petition to the Queen, praying that her Majesty would "be graciously pleased to grant your Royal charter for the incorporation of an University, to be established on this clear and unequivocal principle," that of adherence to the Church of England, "to be supported by means which the members of the church will contribute from their own resources."

This petition was signed by 11,731 persons, a vast proportion of whom were heads of families.

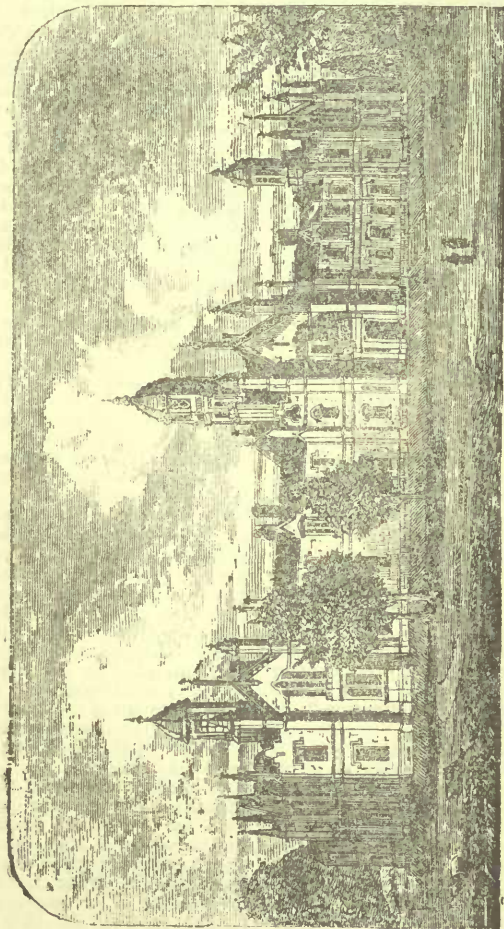

On Wednesday, April 10th, 1850, Bishop Strachan left Toronto by the steamboat America en route to England. He reached London early in May, and at once put himself in communication with Earl Grey, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the subject of his mission. He was courteously received by that statesman, and received a promise that his arguments in favour of a Royal charter being granted should receive every consideration. Sir Robert Peel, the then Prime Minister, also afforded the Bishop more than one interview, as also did the Duke of Wellington and other well-known public men. The Bishop, though, did not succeed at the time in obtaining a Royal charter, the Imperial authorities considering it impolitic for the time being at any rate to grant such a request. It was, though, granted two years later.

While the Bishop was in England a Provisional Council was appointed at a largely attended meeting of the friends of the proposed new university, to secure the time of very small value or of no value at all. Among those who contributed in money were the following :

*Dr. Alexander Burnside	$24,000

Those named are only a very few of the hundreds who subscribed. The donors of land included Chief Justice Robinson, Bishop Strachan, Sir Alan N. McNab, Judge Draper, Alexander Dixon, P. M. Vankoughnet, Enoch Turner and scores of others.

In the summer of 1850 Drs. E. M. Hodder and James Bovell organized a school of medicine and with them were associated Drs. Badgley, Bethune, Hollowell and Melville. This school was announced as the "Upper Canada School of Medicine." As soon as Bishop Strachan returned from England in November, 1850, a deputation from this body waited upon him and tendered their services as the Medical Faculty of the proposed university should it be proposed to have a medical school. They also promised to give their services gratuitously until there were sufficient funds in the hands of the governing body to warrant them in paying suitable remuneration for the services rendered. This offer was accepted and on November 7th, 1850, in the lecture hall of the Mechanics' Institute on Court street the inaugural lectures were delivered in public, by Dr. Hodder on Obstetrics, Dr. Bethune on Anatomy, Dr. Melville on Surgery, Dr. Bovell on Medicine, and Dr. Hollowell on Materia Medica. The Bishop presided and there was a good attendance of the public. This event may be regarded as the first in the educational history of the university.

On January 23rd, 1851, at a meeting of the Provisional Committee held at the Church Society's House, 5 King street west, now No. 10, Mr. Kivas Tully and Messrs. Cumberland and Ridout, architects, were requested to prepare plans and designs for the proposed University buildings, the cost of which was not to exceed £8,000 currency, or $32,000.

The designs submitted by Kivas Tully were adopted, and the contract for the building was given to the firm of builders, Metcalfe, Wilson & Forbes. The amount of the contract was £7,845 currency ($31,380).

On St. Patrick's Day, 1851, the first sod was turned by Bishop Strachan in the presence of a large number of sympathizers and spectators. Amongst others who were present on the occasion was the Rev. J. T. Lewis, the present Archbishop of Ontario. Rev. Stephen Lett, LL.D., at the time rector of St. George's in Toronto, was another who was there, and he, true to his nationality, wore in his buttonhole a shamrock, in honour of the day.

Six weeks later was laid with imposing ceremony the corner stone of the building—of course by Bishop Strachan—and there were several thousands of people present, among them great numbers of ladies. The inscription on the brass plate which was let into the stone was in Latin. The following is a translation:

In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

On the 30th of April, 1851, in the 14th year of the reign of Victoria, by the Grace of God, Queen, Defender of the Faith, and while the Right Honourable the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine was Governor-General of British North America, the Foundation Stone of Trinity College, Toronto, an Institution established for the furtherance of the Christian Religion and all the Liberal Sciences, was laid by the Honourable and Right Reverend John Strachan, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Toronto.

The College, now commenced, is built by the munificence of those who, at his earnest instigation, both in Britain and in this Diocese, gave with willing minds, as to the Lord, gifts of money and lands, for the accomplishment of this object.

To this devoted and persevering prelate, who, throughout an extended life, labours that the youth of Canada may at all times be trained in Christian principles, let posterity render grateful thanks.

With the Bishop, who is deservedly the first President of the College, have been associated the following, as the Council of the College:

The Ven. G. O. Stuart, D.D., LL.D., Archdeacon of Kingston.

The Ven. A. N. Bethune, D.D., Archdeacon of York.

Alexander Burnside, Esq. Hon. J. B. Robinson.

Rev. H. J. Grasett, M.A. Hon. J. B. Macaulay.

J. Arnold, Esq. L. Moffatt, Esq.

Hon. J. Gordon. Hon. J. G. Spragge.

Philip M. Vankoughnet, Esq. Hon. R. S. Jameson.

TRUSTEES.

Rev. H. J. Grasett, M.A., G. W. Allan, Esq., L. Moffatt, Esq.

TREASURERS.

Hon. G. Crookshank, Hon. W. Allan, Hon. J. Gordon.

Thomas Champion, Secretary.

Kivas Tully, Architect.

Metcalfe, Wilson & Forbes, Builders.

God grant a prosperous issue to the begun labour. May He who is at once the Founder and Foundation Stone of His Church be ever present with those who shall, within these walls, devote themselves to Christian learning and the liberal sciences.

The foregoing inscription was composed by the Rev. Henry Scadding, at that time incumbent of Holy Trinity church, Toronto, and first classical master at Upper Canada College. By him it was rendered into Latin, as it is inscribed upon the brass plate.

The corner stone was then duly laid, and afterwards Sir A. N. McNab addressed the assembled clergy and spectators in complimentary language, dwelling on the success which had so far attended the labours of the Bishop in promoting the University.

An address in Latin from the pupils of St. Paul's Church Grammar School was presented to the Bishop by John Bethune, a son of the Archdeacon, and replied to by the aged prelate in the same tongue. This school carried in the procession a handsome white silk banner, not of very large dimensions, bearing on it the name of the school. The school itself was under the principalship of Rev. John George Dalhousie McKenzie, assisted by his brother Valentine, and for some time also by a Mr. Evans. Miss Crombie, a sister-in-law of Mr. McKenzie, had charge of a few of the younger boys. The school was conducted in the basement of the private house occupied by its principal. It was the second house east of St. Paul's church, and though it has been very greatly enlarged, is still standing. It was intended that St. Paul's Grammar School should be a training school for Trinity University, but about 1854 the idea was abandoned, and Mr. McKenzie gave up teaching.

The financial results of Dr. Strachan's visit to England were very encouraging. They were related by the Bishop himself on the opening of the College buildings on January 15th, 1852, in the following words:

"On the 30th April (1851), I reached London, and lost no time in addressing letters to the archbishops, bishops, clergy and laity members of the church, telling them that under the pressure of what I felt to be a great necessity, I had ceased, for a short time, my pastoral labours in the diocese of Toronto, to appeal, I hoped not in vain, to their sympathy, in behalf of their brethren in Canada. The full explanation of the causes of my visit, my object and wants, was most favourably received, and munificent donations granted."

The Bishop then gave a list of those who had contributed. Among them were: Society for Propagation of Gospel, £2,000 sterling. Also seven and a half acres of land within the limits of Toronto, valued at £2,000 sterling.

Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, £3,000 sterling.

Private subscriptions, including one of £500 from C. H. Turner, of Rook's Nest Park, Surrey, £4,000.

It has often been asserted that the land upon which Trinity University is built was presented to the Bishop as a free gift. Such was not the case. It had been purchased from Miss Cameron, of Gore Vale.

The professorial staff of the University on its opening was as follows:

Provost—Rev. George Whittaker, M.A., who was by virtue of his office professor of divinity.

Classics—Rev. E. St. John Parry, M.A.

Mathematics—Rev. Geo. C. Irving, B.A.

Faculty of Medicine—Drs. E. M. Hodder, James Bovell, Henry Melville, Norman Bethune, F. Badgley, W. Hallowell.

Faculty of Law—J. H. Hagarty, Q.C., John Hillyard Cameron, Q.C., and Philip M. Vankoughnet, Q.C.

Provost Whittaker was educated at Queen's College, Cambridge, and assumed the duties of Provost of Trinity while still a young man. For exactly thirty years he remained at his post, only resigning on account of failing health in 1881. He returned to England and devoted the short remainder of his days to parochial work, dying about ten years since. He was succeeded by the Rev. C. W. E. Body, late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Provost Body was not only an able mathematician, he having been sixth Wrangler, but also was an accomplished classic and theologian, having taken a First-Class in the Theological Tripos. Provost Body resigned in 1894, having accepted the post of lecturer on Old Testament History in the General Theological Seminary, New York. He was followed by the Rev. E. A. Welch, of King's College, Cambridge, B.A. 1882, M.A. 1886. He came out in the First-Class Classical Tripos 1882, and Second-Class Theological Tripos 1886. Was, at the date of his appointment Vicar of Church of Venerable Bede, Gateshead.

Professor Parry was a graduate of Balliol College, Oxford, and remained at Trinity until 1856, when he returned to England and became Head Master of Leamington College, in Warwickshire, which post he held for many years. He still survives, though he has abandoned teaching.

Professor Irving was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. He came to Canada shortly after taking his degree to assume the mathematical chair at Trinity, and discharged his duties until 1856, when he resigned. In 1860 he returned to Trinity as Vice-Provost, holding that office until 1863, when he went to Lennoxville. He was drowned in the Riviere du Loup two years later.

Of the medical staff, Dr. Hodder was F.R.C.S., England. He was one of the most popular and able surgeons of his time, and had resided in Toronto since 1843. He continued his connection with Trinity until his death, which occurred February 20th, 1878, in his sixty-eighth year.

Dr. James Bovell came to Toronto in 1847. He was M.R.C.P. Eng., and was looked upon as an authority on physiology and pathology. He left Canada for the West Indies, where he became an Anglican clergyman in 1870. His death took place at Nevis, W. I., January 16th, 1880.

Dr. Melville's connection with Trinity was of very brief duration, he leaving Toronto for England in 1853. He was a graduate of Edinburgh University, fully conversant with his profession, and a remarkably skillful operator. He died in England more than thirty years ago.

Dr. Norman Bethune, a nephew of Archdeacon Bethune, was educated at Edinburgh and London, taking his degree as M.R.C.S. at the latter place in 1848. He lectured at Trinity on anatomy and physiology. He died in Toronto on October 12th, 1892, aged 70.

Drs. Badgley and Hollowell lectured on Medical Jurisprudence and Materia Medica respectively, and continued to do so for some years. Dr. Badgley's connection with Trinity ceased about 1855, and that of Dr. Hollowell several years later. The latter died in Toronto in 1873.

Of those who formed the Faculty of Law it is hardly necessary to say anything. Mr. J. H. Hagarty still survives, while both the Hon. J. H. Cameron and P. M. Vankoughnet have been dead for many years.

The names of the College Council have already been given in the inscription on the corner stone. To those names were added on the opening of the college those of Provost Whittaker, Professors Parry and Irving. Thomas Champion resigned the secretaryship on January 1st, 1852, and Charles McGrath was appointed to the vacancy.

Such was the staff of Trinity when its career opened in 1851. Of all those who were associated with it on its teaching or governing staff then, only the present Chancellor, Hon. G. W. Allan, Professor Parry and Judge Hagarty are still extant. Tempora Mutantur.

Having said so much about the circumstances attending the opening of Trinity University, it is time to give some description of the building itself. The portion of it which was completed in 1852 included the whole of the front facing the lake, which was 250 feet long from east to west and fifty feet in depth on the eastern and western sides. There were the usual lecture rooms for the classical, mathematical and other professors and rooms for forty-five undergraduates. What is now the library was used as the College Chapel and the Provost resided within the precincts. The style of the architecture is of the third period, Pointed English, which obtained in the motherland just prior to and during the reign of Henry VIII.

The materials used in constructing the college were white bricks made in Yorkville and stone from Cleveland, Ohio, which, from its colour, harmonized with the bricks. The total number of apartments in the building when it was opened was about one hundred and eighty, the largest of which was in the ground floor and measured fifty by thirty feet.

Of additions made to the college since its erection there has been Convocation Hall, erected in 1877, and which contains a very fine portrait of Dr. Strachan in his Episcopal habit, one of Provost Whittaker in academics, and a third of Dr. E. M. Hodder.

In 1884 the new chapel on the eastern side was added. It has been spoken of by competent authorities as a "gem of ecclesiastical architecture," and though there is a somewhat uncomfortable air of "newness" about its interior, it is a lovely place, and such stained glass windows as it possesses are works of the highest order. The west wing was added in 1891 and the eastern in 1894. (At present (1895) the building will accommodate about ninety students in arts and divinity, the medical school being extra-mural and the students non-residential.)

The following list of those who are or have been professors in the college, not including those of the Medical school, will be scanned with interest by many, not only in Toronto, but in different parts of Canada:

DIVINITY.

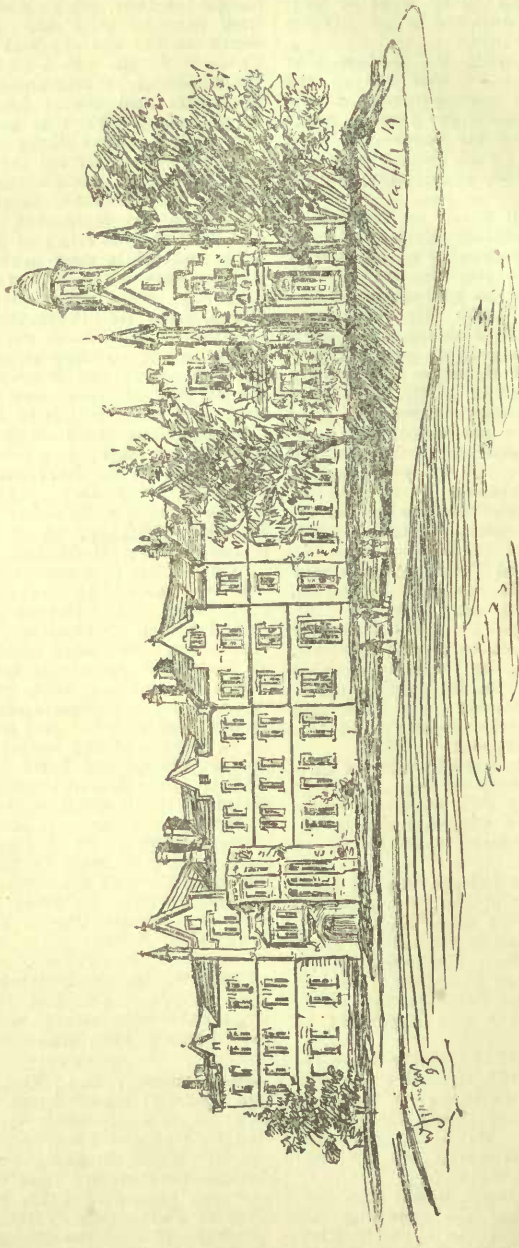

Provosts George Whittaker, C. W. E. Body and E. Ashurst Welch; these gentlemen's University careers and attainments have already been spoken of.

CLASSICAL.

John Ambrey, M.A., Brazen Nose College, Oxford; second class classical honours; appointed 1856, resigned 1875; died in England 1880.

H. E. Maddock, M.A., Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge; first class classical honours; appointed 1875, resigned 1878; vicar of Patrington, Yorkshire, England.

A. Boys, M.A., Jesus College, Cambridge; second class classical honours; appointed 1878; died in Toronto 1890.

WEST FRONT VIEW TRINITY COLLEGE, 1891.

E. W. Huntingford, M.A., Merton College, Oxford; first class in classics; appointed 1890, and is the present occupant of the chair; as were his predecessors, is in Holy Orders.

Professor Parry has been omitted from the foregoing, he having been mentioned earlier.

MATHEMATICAL.

Professor Irving; 1852 to 1856; mentioned elsewhere.

E. K. Kendall, M.A., St. John's College, Cambridge; appointed 1856; resigned 1860; died several years later.

Professor Irving; re-appointed 1860-63.
W. Jones, M.A., Upper Canada College and St. John's College, Cambridge; 20th Wrangler; appointed 1863; resigned 1895; resides in Toronto.

M. A. Mackenzie, M.A., Selwyn College, Cambridge; 25th Wrangler; present occupant of the chair.

All of the mathematical professors were in Holy Orders.

Reverend William Clark, Hertford College, Oxford, was appointed Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in 1883, and still retains his office.

The Provost of Trinity is, by virtue of his office, Professor of Divinity, but for some years past there has been an additional lecturer. They have been:

G. A. Schneider, M.A., Gonville and Cains College, Cambridge, appointed 1882, resigned 1885: is now vice-principal Ridley Hall, Cambridge.

J. C. Roper, M.A., Keble College, Oxford; appointed 1885; resigned 1888; is rector of St. Thomas' Church, Toronto.

H. Symonds, M.A., Trinity University, Toronto; appointed 1888; resigned 1892.

E. C. Cayley, M.A., Trinity University, Toronto; is a son of Rev. John Cayley, rector of St. George's, Toronto, and is now at the University.

There are also among the assistant teaching staff Fellows, as they are termed, in Divinity and in Classics. In the former have been numbered Rev. A. J. Broughall, M.A., rector of St. Stephen's, Toronto, appointed 1856; Revs. H. Symonds, 1886-88; E. E. Cayley, 1888-92, and H. H. Bedford Jones, 1892 till present time (1895).

The Classical Fellows have included Mr. J. A. Worrell, Q.C., Revs. J. S. Broughall, 1889-93; C. S. McInnes, 1893-94, and W. H. White, who was appointed 1894.

Rev. O. Rigby, St. John's College, Cambridge; Dean of Trinity; appointed 1891; is Professor of History.

In Modern Languages the lecturers have been: E. C. Pernet, 1870-81; J. C. Dunlop, 1881-92; A. H. Young, 1892.

The lecturers in Physical Science have been: E. M. Hinde, 1852-63; James Bovell, M.D., 1863-70; W. H. Ellis, M.A., M.B., 1870-79, who is now principal of the School of Applied Science, Toronto. He was followed by T. H. Smyth, M.A., who is still at his duty.

In Natural Science Rev. G. E. Haslam, Dr. O'Connor and H. Montgomery have all filled the office of Fellow, lecturing regularly.

Of the first undergraduates at Trinity, some forty in number, many have passed away, and all of those who are left are fast leaving middle age behind them. Among them were Alfred Rykert, who was a lieutenant in the 100th Regiment; he died in London, England, in 1860. J. E. O'Reilly, son of Judge O'Reilly, of Hamilton, resides in the latter city, practising as a barrister. Charles E. Thomson is rector of St. Mark's Church, Toronto Junction. John Langtry is rector of St. Luke's Church, Toronto. James J. Bogart is a rector in Ottawa. T. D. Phillips, famous as a cricketer, is in Chicago, and the remaining survivors are scattered here and there throughout the world.

In concluding this sketch it is desired to acknowledge the courteous assistance rendered in supplying information by Provost Body, Professor W. Jones, Mr. J. A. Worrell and others. That the University may continue in and extend its career of usefulness is the wish of all who, regardless of sectarian strife or political controversy, have the highest interests of "This Canada of Ours" at heart.

Note.—Professor Parry died in England in August, 1856.

CHAPTER III.

THE GWYNNE COTTAGE.

The Pleasant Home of a Well-known Medical Practitioner—Description of the House and its Surroundings.

Some three hundred yards north of the lake on the western side of Dufferin street stands, embedded in trees, a picturesque cottage, one and a half storeys in height, long the residence of the well known Dr. William Charles Gwynne.

The house resembles an Indian bungalow in appearance and in its interior arrangements. It was built by Dr. Gwynne about fifty years since, and is of mud brick, the walls being nearly two feet in thickness. The front door opens into a spacious reception hall, and four doors open into different rooms. On three sides of the cottage is a wide verandah, and the view over the lawn on the south side looking on to the lake is a very lovely one. As one stands on the lawn, with the quaint old world looking cottage before them, on either hand beds of old-fashioned flowers, while the shrubs and trees rustle in the breeze, it is hard to believe that you are within a few hundred yards of one of the largest manufacturing cities in Canada, that not far distant from you is a great railway goods and passenger depot, and that instead of being "Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," you are in the midst of a population of 200,000 people.

The Gwynne cottage is the only house left of its kind in the city. All those similar have disappeared. There are one or two on the south side of College street bearing a faint resemblance to it, but very faint. It remains a unique specimen, and to judge from appearances, will last for many a year yet to come.

Dr. Gwynne was born in 1806 in Ireland, being the son of Rev. William Gwynne, D.D., an Irish clergyman. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, incorporated militia, and was exceedingly popular with both officers and men. He was also a member of the Upper Canada Medical Board, and took an active part in the medical department of Toronto University until the year 1854. Dr. Gwynne was an earnest and energetic man in everything relating to his profession. He could not tolerate half-heartedness, and he strove to imbue his pupils at the University with a like energy.

For the last twenty years of his life Dr. Gwynne was not engaged in active professional work, but spent much of his time on his land and in entomological research. He died in September, 1875, in his seventieth year. His widow survived him for nearly eight years. She died in May, 1883.

Gwynne avenue, Parkdale, is called after the doctor, as Murray street com-and also at Edinburgh, taking his degree in 1832. Almost coincident with doing the latter he obtained an appointment as surgeon on board a sailing vessel between England and Quebec, and came out to Canada. He did not go back to Ireland, but remained here, and on July 9th, 1832, was admitted to the practice of medicine in Upper Canada. For a brief period after his arrival in this country he was in Kingstou, but very soon came to York.

Dr. Gwynne married in May, 1835, Ann Murray, the youngest daughter of Mr. W. D. Powell and a granddaughter of Chief Justice W. D. Powell. By this union there were four children, one only of whom, a daughter, survives, residing in the old home.

During the rebellion of 1837 Dr. Gwynne was surgeon to one of the regiments of

THE WELLS RESIDENCE.

Colonel Joseph Wells—His Military Services—His Family—Colonel Frederick Wells and the Crimean War.

On the top of the hill overlooking Davenport road, about two hundred yards to the north-east of Bathurst street, is the home, for now three-quarters of a century, of various members of the Wells family.

The present house occupies the site of a very much smaller building, which was erected early in the century, and was purchased by Colonel Joseph Wells, of the 43rd Mounmouthshire Regiment, in 1820. On coming into possession of the property, Colonel Wells determined to enlarge the house, and, having retired from the army, to make it his home for the rest of his life. The result of this resolve was, that the residence, as it is now, was constructed, it being, when finished, as it is still, one of the most comfortable of dwellings.

Joseph Wells was born in England, June 19th, 1773, and entered H.M. 43rd Regiment of foot at an early age. He was married at the historic church of St. Botolph, Aldersgate, London, England, by the Rev. W. Trollope, on June 10th, 1813, to Harriet King, and immediately after Waterloo was fought came out to Canada on duty. At that time Colonel and Mrs. Wells had one son, George Dupont Wells, who afterwards took an active interest in agricultural matters in this province, and was for several years secretary to the York Township Agricultural Society. He was one of the first pupils at Upper Canada College on its opening. He died in the Albany Chambers, Toronto, December 4th, 1854, in his forty-first year. Robert was the second son. He died at Davenport, July 29th, 1868, having just completed his fifty-first year. His widow married again, and continued to reside at Davenport until 1894. Charles was the third son. He was drowned in the river at Ottawa, near where he was at school, in 1828. He was only nine years old. Frederick Wells, the most distinguished member of the family, of whom more will be said presently, was born June 19th, 1822, and was entered at Upper Canada College in 1830, when he was only eight years old. He had as his contemporaries boys from the Jarvis, Boulton, Ridout, Heward, Robinson and many other well known Toronto families. Arthur Wells was the fifth son. He was born in 1824, is married and has a large family. He resides at Pueblo, Colorado. Like his brothers, Arthur was an Upper Canada College boy, where he entered in 1833, a son of Sir John Colborne entering at the same time. Colonel and Mrs. Wells had also several daughters, all of whom have passed away.

Colonel Wells served with the 43rd Regiment in the Peninsular campaign, was present at Badajoz and received the gold cross given for the famous siege. When he retired from the army he was for some time Bursar to Upper Canada College, but the most of his time was taken up with his property and its responsibilities at Davenport. He was a remarkably handsome man, the very essence of courtesy and of unsullied honour. His death took place at Davenport on February 4th, 1853. He was buried in the family vault in St. James' cemetery. Mrs. Wells died March 18th, 1851.

Frederick Wells, the fourth son, who has previously been mentioned, was destined for the army from his birth, and he obtained his first commission as Ensign in the 1st, or Royal, Regiment, October 15th, 1841, when he was a little more than nineteen years of age. His subsequent commissions bear date as follows:—Lieutenant, August 7th, 1844; Captain, November 6th, 1854; Brevet Major, November 2nd, 1855; Major, June 26th, 1866; Brevet Lieutenant Colonel, February 8th, 1866; Lieutenant-Colonel, November 18th, 1868. Wells served with his regiment at various stations both at home and abroad until 1854, when he accompanied it to the east on the breaking out of the Crimean or Russian war. He served throughout the whole campaign, was present at the battles of Alma, Inkerman, and through the fearful siege of Sebastopol, being present at the final attack upon the city and the capture of the Redan. For his services he received the brevet rank of Major, the Crimean medal, the Turkish medal and fifth class of the Medjidie and was made a companion of the French Legion of Honour. The patent conferring this distinction upon him was in these terms:

"His Majesty the Emperor, by a decree of June 16th, 1856, has named as a Knight of the Imperial Order of the Legion of Honour, Major Frederick Wells, 1st Royal Regiment, Infantry. He to have precedence from the same date."

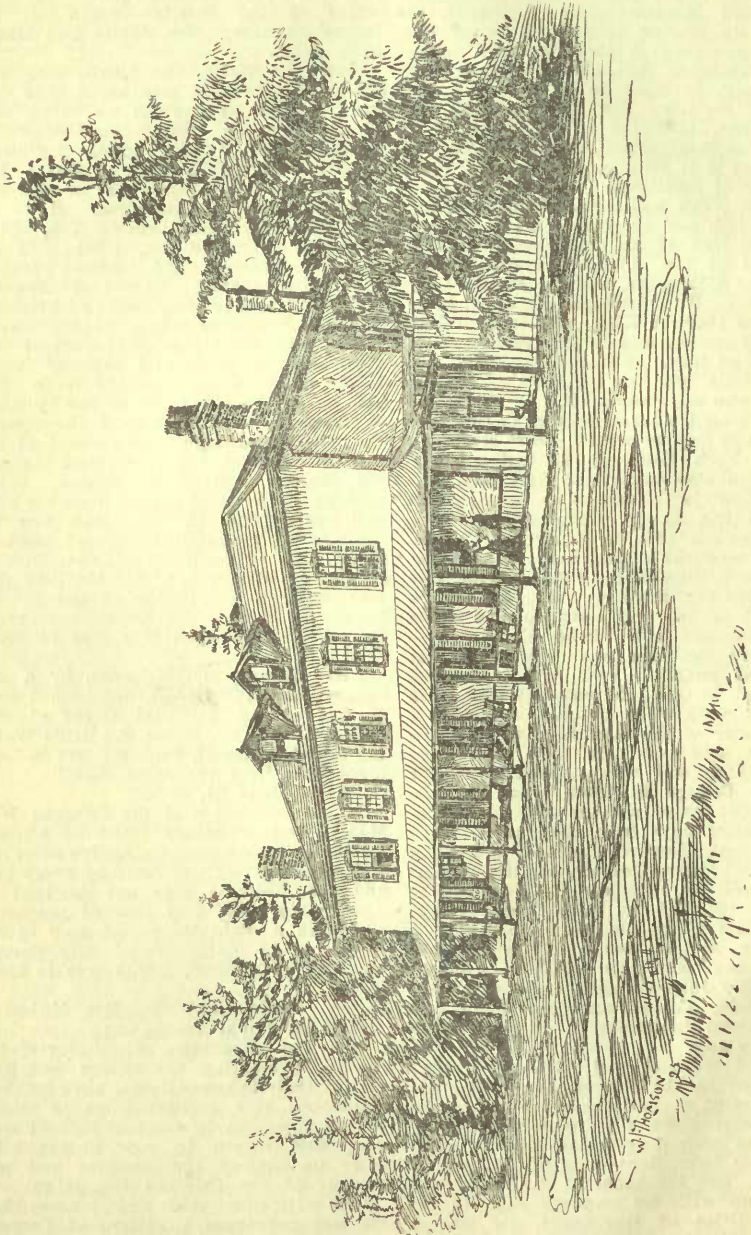

"Paris, June 21, 1856."

On the conclusion of the Crimean War Major Wells obtained leave of absence and visited Toronto, his native city. He was most warmly welcomed by every one, and the welcome was not confined to words only. The City Council presented him with a valuable sword, now in the possession of Major Wells' only daughter, and an address, which was in these words:

Major Frederick Wells, Her Majesty's First or Royal Regiment:

Sir,—The corporation of the city of Toronto, representing the wishes and feelings of their fellow-citizens, have by their unanimous vote requested me to tender to you their hearty congratulations upon your safe return to your native city, after undergoing the dangers and privations of the Crimean Campaign.

It is with equal pride and pleasure that we welcome home a citizen of Toronto whose breast displays those honourable distinctions conferred, not alone by his most gracious Sovereign, but by her august ally, the Emperor of the French, an emphatic proof that he holds no undistinguished position among the gallant troops of both nations, who united in maintaining an arduous and successful struggle for the liberties of Europe.

As inhabitants of this Province, whose boast it is to be an integral portion of the British Empire, we feel proud of the achievements of the gallant men who so successfully vindicated their country's renown at Alma, Balaclava and Inkerman, and who so triumphantly planted the flag of their country on the captured heights of Sebastopol.

As citizens of Toronto we rejoice that a fellow-townsmen so nobly braved those dreadful encounters and participated with such honour to himself in those glorious triumphs.

The Municipal Corporation of your native city desire to mark their sense of your gallant services, and to convey to you some proof of their estimation more substantial than words.

It becomes, therefore, my pleasing duty, in the name of the people of Toronto, to present you with this sword. Should the storm of war again arise and our beloved Queen require your services, we feel that it will be drawn with distinction to yourself and with honour to your Country.

JOHN BEVERLEY ROBINSON,
Mayor of the City of Toronto.

A. T. McCORD, Chamberlain.

Common Council Chamber,
Toronto, 31st October, 1856.

To the foregoing address Major Wells made a brief but courteous reply, one sentence of which must be given verbatim. It was:

"As the son of a soldier, well known to many of you, and respected by all who knew him, I feel I have done nothing more than my duty, and am convinced that every Canadian when called upon would do the same."

The sword presented with the address was of simple "regulation" pattern, The actual "presentation" weapon was forwarded to Major Wells some time later. On its receipt he sent the following letter to the Mayor:

Wednesday, 18th Feb'y, 1857.

My Dear Robinson,—I have this day received the gratifying testimonial unanimously voted me by the Corporation of the City of Toronto, viz., "The Sword," but cannot accept it without endeavouring to express my sincere thanks to yourself and the committee for the very able manner in which you have carried out the wishes of the corporation, and most undoubtedly not the least gratifying to me, is that the entire sword was made in Toronto. The design by Mr. Armstrong (truly Canadian) has been done justice to by Mr. Morrison, and would do credit and would stand competition with anything that had been ordered from the mother country, where it will very shortly be my pride to wear it as a good specimen of Canadian taste and workmanship.

And proud am I to have received it at the hands of an old Upper Canada College boy. Very faithfully yours,

F. WELLS.

In the early part of 1857 Major Wells returned to his regiment, and served with it in India and elsewhere until he retired from the army in 1871.

In 1866 Major Wells became lieutenant-colonel in the army. He had some time previously married Georgina Mary, daughter of Dr. Dartnell, Surgeon-Major in the same regiment as himself. They had several children, two only of whom survive—George, who is in Natal, South Africa, and Mrs. De Pencier, who lives in the old homestead on Davenport Hill, in the morning room of which hang the sword worn by Colonel Wells during the Crimea as well as others he used during his service. There are trophies and curiosities scattered throughout the house, each one of which has a history of its own.

Mrs. Wells died at Davenport, where Colonel Wells was residing after his retirement, on May 11, 1873, and was buried at St. James' cemetery. The Colonel then went to England, and took up his abode near Leamington, Warwickshire, where he died in 1877, aged 55 years. He was a gallant soldier and a courteous gentleman.

CHAPTER V.

YONGE STREET

The Earlier Road Makers—The German Settlers—Their Energy and Determination—The River Men.

Yonge street, as everyone now is aware, is the direct road through the Province of Ontario, leading from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay. For many years after it was first laid out it was known as Yonge street road. Only within the last half century has it been universally known as Yonge street only.

It was named after General Yonge, and many different people had a share in its construction. Among these was William Bercey, a German by birth, who came over from the State of New York to Canada in 1794, bringing with him sixty-four families of Germans, who had only a very brief period earlier left Hamburg to make their homes in New York. When Berczy reached York (Toronto) it was a hamlet and no more. There were not more than one hundred inhabitants. Yonge street only existed on paper, north of Lot street, what is now Queen street, and was a mere path from the line of Queen street to the water's edge. But Berczy was not a man who was easily daunted. He set to work with his emigrants to construct a road, and they did as is told in the following letter from him :

A. D. 1794.—During the time I was thus obliged to remain idle I had many interviews with Governor Simcoe, in which he communicated to me several plans for the improvement of the province, and among others for the plan of Mr. Rocheblave, which tended to form a new and shorter communication for the fur trade to the far distant factories in the North-west, through Yonge street, the river Holland and Lake Simcoe into Lake Huron. He endeavoured to convince me of the advantages which the completion of this new communication would afford for rendering more valuable my lands in Markham, and neglecting nothing that could animate me also in this point to co-operate in accomplishing the views of Government. Nearly midway on Yonge street, between Lake Ontario and Gwillimbury, the Provincial Government had reserved four lots of 200 acres each, situated equally on both sides of the road through which the river Don runs, to be sold for raising a fund to be employed towards the making of Yonge street a practicable road for waggons. These four lots he offered me for that purpose, and although I considered that their value was not a compensation adequate to the expense required for that object, I accepted his offer in consideration of the advantage which indirectly would arise to me from this undertaking, by enhancing my own lands the more, as I had already, besides the 64,090 not very remote from it, the township of Darlington, which was one of those purchased of Andrew Pierce by me, and that I intended to take in the vicinity also, the second township, which the Governor had promised me when I consented to devote my first operations towards the settlement of the land in the rear of York.

I resolved not only to do this, but considering myself to be the indisputable proprietor of a very extensive tract of waste land, I determined immediately to cut through the woods at my own expense a sufficiently large and comfortable road for the passage of waggons for a distance of about 30 miles through the lands to be laid out for my first settlement with all the necessary bridges over the waters which I should find in my way, and this I executed afterwards, being convinced of the truth that the making of roads is one of the most efficient means for rendering the inhabitants of any country comfortable and wealthy, and that the expectations of these accommodations would attract such a numerous concourse of people as is necessary to bring about the speedy population of a wilderness, without them even the best of such lands would never rise to a considerable pecuniary value.

In the beginning of September the Surveyor-General notified to me at last that they had sent over to York a deputy surveyor with orders to lay out the outlines of my lands, the first move immediately necessary was concession lines with the division posts for the lots. At that time I sent to you the greatest part of the grown men among my people, together with about sixty hired axemen, ordering them all to begin the work on Yonge street, and to clear out a part of the lot where York was to be built. But as my lands were not yet surveyed as much as above mentioned, I could not begin the performance of the road in it before the 24th of October, 1794, at which time the Deputy-Surveyor, Mr. Tisdell, gave me a draught of his work, and not before the middle of November I could bring any of my people to the place of their habitation. It is easy to conceive to what hardships and excessive losses I must have been subjected before I could overcome in that season of the year all the difficulties incumbent upon settling a considerable number of people in a distant part of the woods, far from habitations which could afford me assistance in any considerable degree, either of victuals or of articles of the first necessity of whatever kind.

Relying, however, on my grant, the land I had acquired of Andrew Pierce, and the further promises I had received as well from the Governor in Council as of him in private, I submitted cheerfully to all these difficulties in the fullest convictions, that these lands would through my exertions to improve them, cover by their acquired value all my disbursements, and procure a proportionate compensation for the difficulties which I had now to overcome, the more as I looked at this first and most difficult work only as a preparation for easier and less costly settlements. In the latter part of November the Governor came for a short time to York and as then I had already finished a great part of Yonge street and the roads through my settlement making on the whole 45 miles waggon road upon which my waggons carried out heavy loads for the supply of my people. He was extremely well pleased with my activity and rapid progress, and sent the morning after his arrival an express to my settlement where I then was, by which he notified to me his arrival and the short stay he should make, desiring that I would as soon as possible come to see him. At our meeting in York he manifested to me in the most flattering manner his satisfaction, and as a proof of his approbation he desired me to accept the commission of a magistrate in the district of York and a commission of a captain of the militia in order to embody my people, as well as the few neighbouring settlers, in a militia company. The first of these commissions I asked permission yet to decline until the laborious business of fixing my settlers should be finished in the greater part, finding it almost impossible, in the pressure of so much intricate occupation, that there should remain to me time enough to discharge so as it ought to be expected, the duties of magistrate. Respecting the militia commission, I accepted it, as it could not interfere very essentially with my other business, and I promised the Governor that until a regular commission should be made out I would embody my men and lead them to the knowledge of their militia duty. At the time when I was minutely exploring my tract of land for the purpose of laying out the roads and to fix on the most eligible spot for my first settlement, I came to a river, which afterwards was called the "Nen," at a place in a direct line eighteen miles distant from Lake Ontario, which at that place I found sufficiently deep to admit the navigation of large boats or bateaus for a considerable distance higher up to the north-west, provided there should be no considerable falls or very strong rapids in it. In order to ascertain this, I returned without delay to York, from whence I went in a bateau upon Lake Ontario to seek the outlet of that river. The third river I met along the shore of the lake appeared to be sufficiently large to be the river I wished to explore. I entered it, and found its outlet of sufficient depth to afford a harbour to the schooners which are used upon the lake; but having continued my navigation for about four miles upwards in a north-west direction, I was prevented by fallen timber and drift-wood from persisting in my navigation. I, therefore, left my bateau, and continued to follow on foot the shore of the river until I came in the evening of the second day to the very same place where at first I had met this river. Having observed all along the way that it continued in a gentle course, to keep without interruption the same depth as at first I observed, and having afterwards continued to walk along it for about 20 miles higher up to the north-west, I observed it always capable of affording a good navigation. This observation I communicated to Governor Simcoe in giving my opinion, that this river when cleared of its encumbrances of fallen timber, drift-wood and beaver dams, would admit of an uninterrupted navigation from Lake Ontario until very near Gwillimbury, from whence the River Holland begins to be navigable into Lake Simcoe, and that there would remain between these two rivers only a portage of a very few miles, which, as I conceived, could also easily be made navigable by means of a canal, that by an easy water communication goods might be carried in boats from Lake Ontario without unloading, until the Falls of Sault Ste. Marie, in the straits which separate Lake Huron from Lake Superior, a method of conveying the goods to and from the North-west greatly more advantageous than the transport over Yonge street, as proposed by Mr. de Rocheblave. The Governor being convinced of the great benefit that would result to the province from that discovery, if advantage is taken of it, very anxiously encouraged me to undertake the performance of this inland navigation, for which purpose he offered to grant me a considerable spot of land at the outlet of the River Nen, in order that I might fix there at its proper time a harbour for the vessels coming from the lake, to establish a landing and erect the necessary buildings for the reception of the goods to be shipped there for the North-west trade, and for the present and future inhabitants of that district. A great part of my lands lying along the River Nen, the Governor knew perfectly well that, my interests being so closely connected with the public benefit, it would not be difficult in persuading me to undertake this new enterprise. I consider that the enhancement of my land promised an adequate compensation for the expense and labour which it would cost me, and looked upon the land offered me by the Governor only as an absolutely necessary object and an additional advantage. I declared, therefore, to the Governor that if I should obtain the proffered spot at the mouth of the River Nen for establishing the necessary commodities as above mentioned, I would without hesitation immediately go to the expense of making that river navigable, from the lake to the uppermost end of my own lands, and that if afterwards I could agree with Government I would not desist until by an uninterrupted inland navigation through Lake Simcoe I had connected Lake Ontario with Matchedash Bay in Lake Huron. In consequence of this declaration, so congenial with the sanguine views of the Governor, we came very soon to the conclusion finally to settle this matter early in the ensuing spring, at which time the Governor promised to return to York from Oswegatchie, where he intended to pass the winter. During this time I continued to fix my settlers as comfortably as possible for the circumstances, although under great difficulties, and prepared hewn timber for a large frame house to be erected as soon as the ground should be free from frost and snow, at the very place where I had first met the river Nen, with a view that this place should serve for an intermediate stop to the projected inland navigation. I took also care to establish settlers all along the river Nen throughout my tract of land, in order to facilitate the means for clearing it for navigation. At the same time I began the building of a comfortable house and magazine in the town of York, and in my settlement on the river Don a saw-mill with a dwelling-house, in order that early in the spring my settlers might enjoy the facility of getting proper materials for building their houses, having erected only temporary huts for their first habitations during the winter.

In order to facilitate the settlement of Yonge street, I had also taken from Government a lot of land on the same about half-way between York and Gwillimbury, upon which I built a house and established two Pennsylvania Germans, who had joined me when I sent my people from Niagara over to York, one of which had a wife and seven children.

Early in the spring of 1795 Governor Simcoe returned to York, and we concluded our proposed scheme respecting the navigation of the river Nen, for which purpose I came with the Deputy Surveyor of the district to my own house, where, having with him the map of the country, we agreed about the spot of land to be allotted to me at the mouth of the river, which he ordered the surveyor to set apart for me, and having given me a location ticket for it, he urged me immediately to begin the clearing of the river, the erecting of a wharf and of some buildings for a depository to store up goods which he landed there from the vessels coming across the lake, until they could be conveyed in boats upon the river. These buildings being, however, not of so immediate urgency, I preferred delay in erecting them until the possession of this spot should be confirmed by an Order-in-Council, and having communicated this objection to the Governor, he found it but reasonable, the more as I promised to begin the clearing of the river, which I began without delay a few days after the conclusion of our agreement. In the beginning of July, when I had already cleared the river so far that I could pass upon it for about 24 miles, from the lake upwards, with a boat of about a ton burthen, I went over to Niagara, where the Governor was, for the purpose of asking by an Order-in-Council, the confirmation, first of the two townships promised and set apart for me by the Governor, when I acceded to his proposition to settle my people in the rear of York, and at the same time to take out the patent for the first grant of the 64,000 acres already settled, to which I considered myself fully entitled in conformity to the tenor of the proclamation issued in the King's name on the 7th February, 1792 (a), and more especially in consequence of which is expressed under article the fifth, viz., that six months after the settlers should have received the warrant of survey a patent should follow if desired, and twelve months having elapsed since I received the warrant of survey.

On my arrival at Niagara I communicated to the Governor the three objects which had induced me to come there, which he highly approved, but there being at that time not a sufficient number of the members of the Executive Council present to form a quorum, he advised me in the interim to present to the surveyor-general my location ticket for the lands on the river Nen, in order to receive of him a certificate after inspection of the maps and the protocols of his office, that the said lands were yet unlocated, and afterwards all the money requests should be settled at once before the Council, which he would call as soon as the absent members, whom he soon expected, should arrive.

By the Surveyor-General's examination I learned shortly that the lands given me by the Governor on the River Nen were already granted in the greatest part to another person, two years before, and especially that part lying immediately at the outlet, which he proved by showing me his docket book. He proposed, however, another unlocated spot adjoining these lands, but considerably higher up on the river. I observed to the Governor on this subject that I could decide nothing until I had examined the depth of the river where it ran through the tract of land now proposed, as it would not answer my purpose if this depth should not be sufficient to admit the entry of the vessels from the lake, but at the same time I declared that if this obstacle should be in the way I would readily accept this exchange, in order that the execution of our plans, for the navigation of Lake Simcoe, might not be obstructed, the more as there remained to me some reasonable expectation to purchase the former tract from the original grantor.

The River Nen, spoken of in the foregoing paper is now known as the Rouge. William Berczy, it is sad to say, was a great loser by his enterprise. He erected the first saw and grist mill in York County. They were built on lot 4, third concession, and were known as the German Mills.

The Gazetteer of 1799, in a note referring to Markham, speaks of its good mills, also of its "thriving settlement of Germans."

Berczy left Upper Canada in 1799, and went to Montreal. Then a year or two later went back to the United States, where he died a disheartened man in 1813.

CHAPTER VI.

CHARLES ROBERTSON'S STORE.

Some Reminiscences of the "Fifties"—Some Old-Time Business Men—The Past and the Present.

Exactly opposite Toronto street, on the south side of King street, was erected in 1850 by Charles Robertson, junior, the store with dwelling house overhead represented in the engraving. Mr. Robertson was a Scotchman, a younger brother of John Robertson, the wholesale dry goods merchant on Yonge street, and when he had built this store, which was numbered 42 King street west, he opened it as a dry goods emporium, and there carried on business for many years. After he retired he lived in Sharon. He died in 1871 and was buried in the Necropolis.

Next door west of Charles Robertson's place of business was for many years an establishment in the same business conducted by a well known man, Samuel Heakes. About 1857 this business was given up, Mr. Heakes going elsewhere. His private residence was on Adelaide street, at that time (1850-56) a good residential quarter. He died in Toronto, at an advanced age, in 1891, leaving a large number of descendants.

Below Mr. Robertson's, that is, to the east of it, was Thomas Haworth's hardware store, the sign of the circular saw, which hung suspended over King street, being as well known as the Big Padlock of Rice Lewis was on the opposite side.

Thomas Haworth was a native of Rawtenstall, Lancashire, England, where he was born in 1798. He came to Canada in 1825, and at first settled in Montreal, but shortly after his arrival removed to Brockville, where he opened the first hardware store ever established in that town. In 1835 he disposed of his Brockville business and came to Toronto, where he at once commenced work as a retail hardware dealer on the site now occupied by the restaurant on the western corner of Leader Lane and King street. The thoroughfare was in later years often spoken of and known as Post-office lane from the fact that it was the direct route from King street to the post-office. Mr. Haworth resided over his store until 1851, when he removed to a dwelling house on the north side of Richmond street, near Church street. He continued to trade on King street until 1860, when the business was transferred to the corner of Yonge and Melinia streets.

Mr. Haworth was one of the promoters and a member of the first board of directors of the Bank of Toronto. He was also a member of the first Board of Trade and one of the original directors of the Western Insurance Company. He was an Anglican, an attendant during the whole of his residence in Toronto at St. James' Cathedral. During the rebellion of 1837 he was under arms and was one of the force who marched out to Montgomery's tavern. Mr. Haworth married Frances Elliott, the daughter of a gentleman in the English civil service. By this marriage he had a large family, four sons and six daughters, all of whom it is somewhat singular to say are still alive (1895). Mrs. Haworth died in 1870 aged 65. Her husband survived her until 1878, when he too passed away after less than an hour's illness. He was in his 60th year. Both he and his wife were interred in St. James' cemetery.

Again, to the east, on the eastern corner of Leader Lane and King street, was the well-known store of Brewer & McPhail, stationers and booksellers. It was an exceedingly well-known place of business, and they were largely patronized by the boys attending the Model School, then (1850) on King street, a very little to the west, on the same side of the street where Government House now stands.

The King street of the early fifties was a widely different spot to what it is in this, the autumn of 1895. Beyond Bay street on the west, and George street on the east there was scarcely a single place of business—certainly not one in the retail trade—of any importance. Most of the store keepers, though not quite all of them, lived over their places of business. Excepting from Yonge street to Leader Lane on the southern side of the street the sidewalks were of wood. In the one spot just particularized they were stone flagged, and the roadway was of macadam. There was no delivery of letters, each tradesman having to send to the post office to obtain those that came for him. Iron shutters and plate glass was almost unknown, the former had not been introduced at all, and the latter was only just coming into use. Mr. Robertson's store created a decided change in the appearance of that portion of the street where it was situated. It was in a different style of architecture to any of its neighbours, and it was, besides, almost, if not quite, the first attempt that had been made to break through the monotonous plain brick fronts that had hitherto marked the appearance of the street. It was a building at once useful and ornamental, and when it was pulled down in 1894 by the Messrs. Catto to make room for an extension of their premises, it was, in most respects, in as good condition as when it was erected. After the store was vacated by Mr. Robertson it was occupied by J. G. Geikie, by Roll & Adam, and by Adam & Stevenson, all booksellers and stationers.

Of all those who were in business on the south side of King street in 1850, only four are now represented by men of the same name, members of the same family, and carrying on the same trade.

CHAPTER VII.

CHANGES IN YONGE STREET.

The Armstrong Foundry — The Old-Time Tradespeople — Modern Improvements — Reminiscences of the Past.

A very short time often suffices to make great changes in the appearance of certain localities. There are not many places in Toronto where the changes have been so great within a very brief period than in Yonge street, on both sides of the road, north of Adelaide street, as far as Queen street.

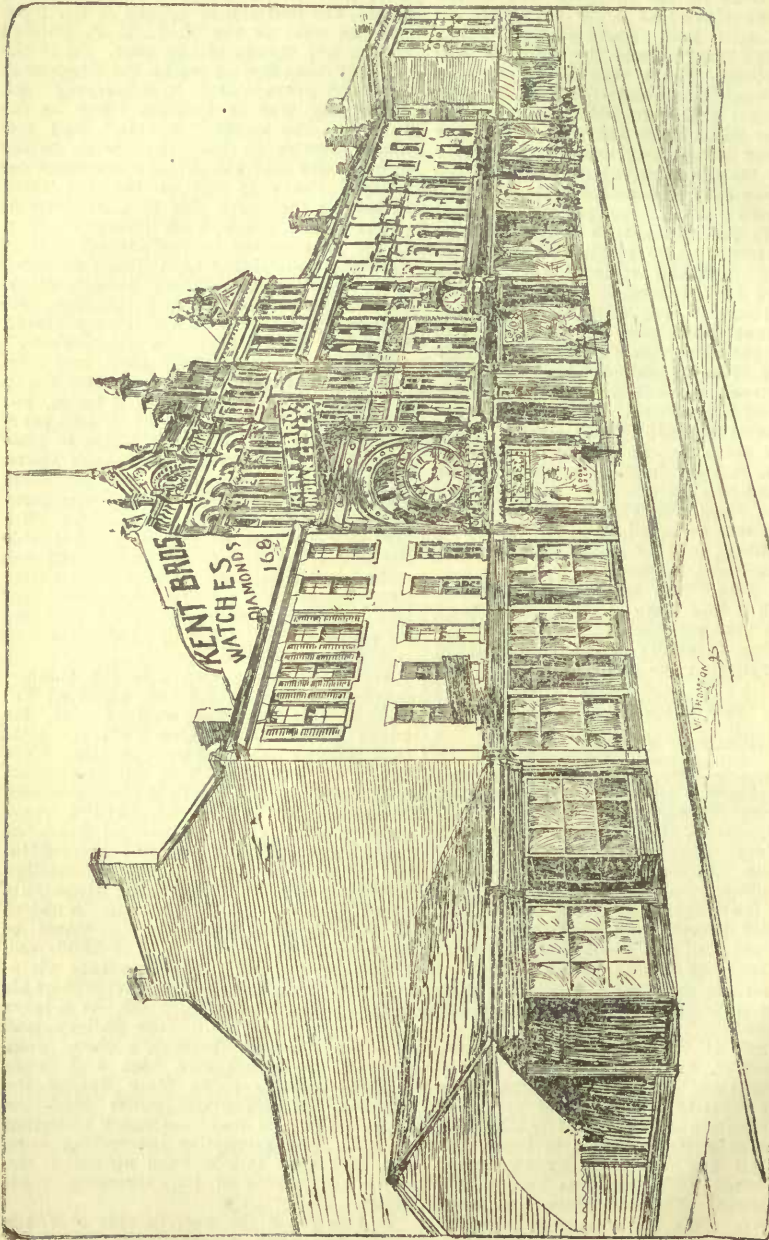

Take for instance the north-east corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, compare its appearance in the latter end of 1895 with what it was in 1888, only seven years earlier, and one is amazed at the transformation. The engravings given show the locality in 1888. Any reader of The Telegram knows what it is like now. True the Bay Horse Hotel is there, but it was all but destroyed by the great fire of March, 1895, and has been pretty well re-built. The old store for men's underwear, with its Venetian jalousies, some of them, indeed, missing even then, has been razed to the ground, and so has the furniture warehouse which was next door to it. Turning into Richmond street, the real estate agency of Mr. Bowden, as well as the X. L. C. R. billiard rooms, are things of the past. So is the old City foundry, of which the proprietor for many years was J. R. Armstrong. Mr. Armstrong was in business there as far back as the early "forties," and few manufactories in the city were better known. He had his private residence for several years in one of the red brick houses on the south side of Queen street, about three doors from Church street. Later he removed to the eastern side of Jarvis street, living in a large stuccoed three-storey house, which, though altered since his time, is still standing. He still later removed to 38 D'Arcy street, where he died about ten years since.

On the corner of Richmond and Victoria streets was a large frame building, latterly a cheap lodging house, but originally built for a hospital, and occupied as such, it being the Lying-in Hospital for a considerable number of years. It opened June 1st, 1848, and remained open until about 1860, when it was turned into a lodging-house. Mrs. Jane Winter was matron during a considerable portion of the time that the building was a hospital. In 1890 the Confederation Life Association acquired the whole of this locality, and levelled all the old houses, erected thereon the building which now adorns the site.

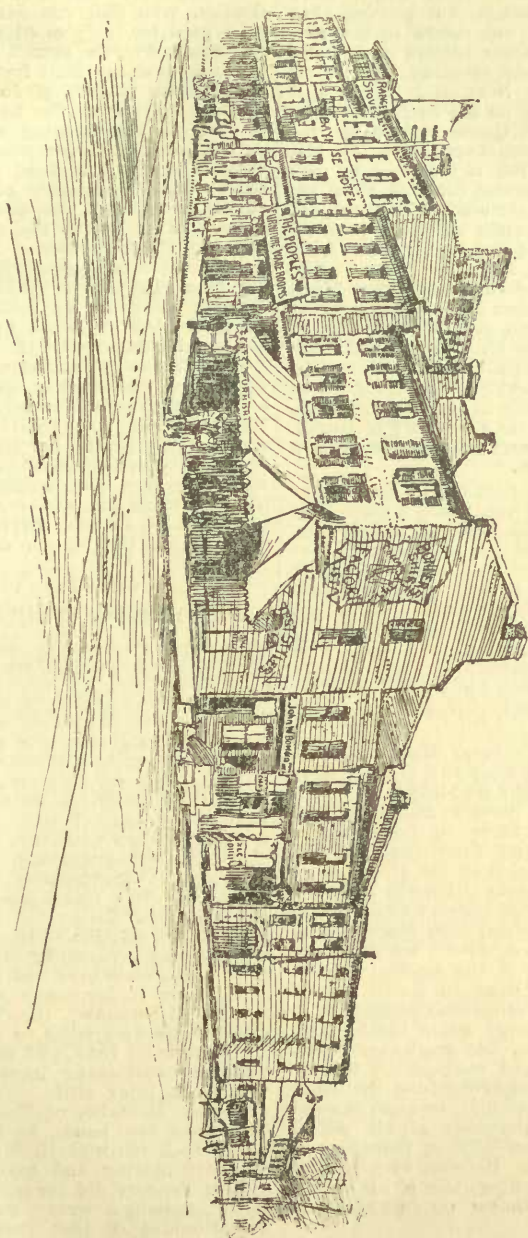

Another vanished place is the tumble-down frame building which stood at 170 Yonge street, on the western side, between Richmond and Queen streets, next to the premises then occupied by Kent Bros., as jewellers. Edward H. Grantham kept a saloon in these premises, numbered 170 in 1861, but a few years later, about 1864, he opened them as an oil and lamp store, and there continued in business until 1872, or possibly a very little later. Edward Grantham was the son of John Grantham, a native of Lincolnshire, England, who came to Toronto in the early part of 1836, and resided here, or in the immediate vicinity, until his death, which occurred at his son's residence, July 3, 1866. At a later date it was used as a rifle gallery, and also as a small stationer's shop. John Grogan, a well-known boot and shoe dealer, had his store there during the "fifties," it being one house at the time. Of late it was constantly changing tenants, and is chiefly interesting from the fact that it remained standing, despite the march of improvements, until 1890.

In two years the western side of Yonge west, has been altered over and over again. From the north-west corner of YONGE STREET, WEST SIDE, RICHMOND TO QUEEN STREET, 1890.

NORTH-EAST CORNER YONGE AND RICHMOND STREETS, 1880.

Richmond and Yonge streets to the jewelry shop of Messrs. Kent Bros., there has been little change, but passing that place of business, one comes to the palatial place of business erected on the site occupied by the old shooting gallery referred to earlier. Next to it again is a new building, and on the south-west corner of Yonge and Queen streets are the new premises in course of erection for Mr. Robert Simpson. But it must not be supposed that the present Simpson store supersedes the one pictured by the cut. It is the third first-class building for business purposes that has been on the same place within the last two years. The stores shown in the engraving were taken down by Mr. Simpson less than two years ago, in the autumn of 1893 in fact, and quickly afterwards were larger and more commodious premises erected. These had only just been finished, everything was new and apparently in the best of order, when there came the great fire of March, 1895, and Simpson's new store was a thing of the past.

Forty years ago part of this corner was and had been for ten years occupied by James Leask, who dealt in groceries, wines, spirits and dry goods. At that time the shop on the actual corner itself was unoccupied. It was a very small, unimportant building. On the south-east corner was the warehouse of A. Mc-Glashan & Co., and over it the office of the Board of Agriculture. Years later this latter institution had its habitation on the north-west corner of Queen and Yonge streets.

In 1855 William Lyon Mackenzie was editing and publishing the Weekly Messenger, in the Elgin Buildings, 79 Yonge street. Dodgson, Shields & Morton had a large grocery store on the southern corner of Yonge and Temperance streets, and on the same side of the street, some two or three doors to the north of Queen street, was a tavern known as the Franklin House, kept by one John Montgomery. To complete this retrospect, let us glance at the occupants of the eastern side of the street, from King to Queen street. The Crown Lands office was at 46 1-2. It was the second house going north. Next to it was Green's, the gunmaker. Mr. Green was a noted character. He became mail agent afterwards on the Allan line of steamers, and had the most exalted ideas of the importance of his office. He was a zealous officer, though, and did his work well. He was very fond of company and of joking. One of his standard toasts at dinners or suppers was this:

"May those who are single soon marry,
May those who are married be happy."

Mr. Green died in Quebec in 1894. Hiram Piper was next door north of Green's. Who, that can carry their memories back for forty or fifty years, do not remember Piper's store? It was a Toronto institution. Still further north was the Phoenix foundry of John McGee, and a little further on the booksellers' store of J. C. Geikie. Crossing Adelaide street, on the northern corner was the hardware store of S. Shaw & Sons, noted for their axes. Then a number of small stores, chiefly devoted to the sale of boots and shoes, and at No. 92 the Bay Horse Inn, kept by Thomas Best. That house in those days was a great resort for farmers from Toronto Township and Hogg's Hollow, as many as forty horses often being stabled at Best's in one day. On the south-east corner of Richmond and Yonge streets was Shapter & Combe's drug store, and exactly opposite F. Bethell's grocery store. Samuel Thompson kept the Globe Hotel at No. 118, and the remaining occupants up to Queen street were but small dealers. In Yonge street, as everywhere else, scarcely any of the old-time firms are now represented. Only one remains in that part of the street with which this sketch deals.

CHAPTER VIII.

BARTHOLOMEW BULL'S HOUSE.

The First Brick House Erected in the Township of York—Those Who Planned, Built and Dwelt in it.

Just outside the city limits a little north of Davenport Road, and at no very great distance from the station of the same name on the Northern, now Grand Trunk Railway, stood, for more than fifty years, a substantial brick house, the first of that material ever erected in York township, and for forty-eight years the home of one of the pioneers of the township, Bartholomew, or, as he was more popularly known, Bartley Bull.

Spring Mount, for so the residence was named, was erected by Mr. Bull in the year 1830, and there was no other brick house near it for many a year afterwards. Aikenshaw, the Thomson residence, some two miles to the west, was not built until 1844, and George Cooper's mansion overlooking Davenport station, was much later still.

Thomas Metcalfe, of Toronto, was the builder of the house, he doing all the brick work. George H. White supplied the carpentering and wood work, and Gilbert Pearcey did the painting. Each of these tradesmen were well known to Torontonians of that period, and some of Gilbert Pearcey's descendants now live in or near the city.

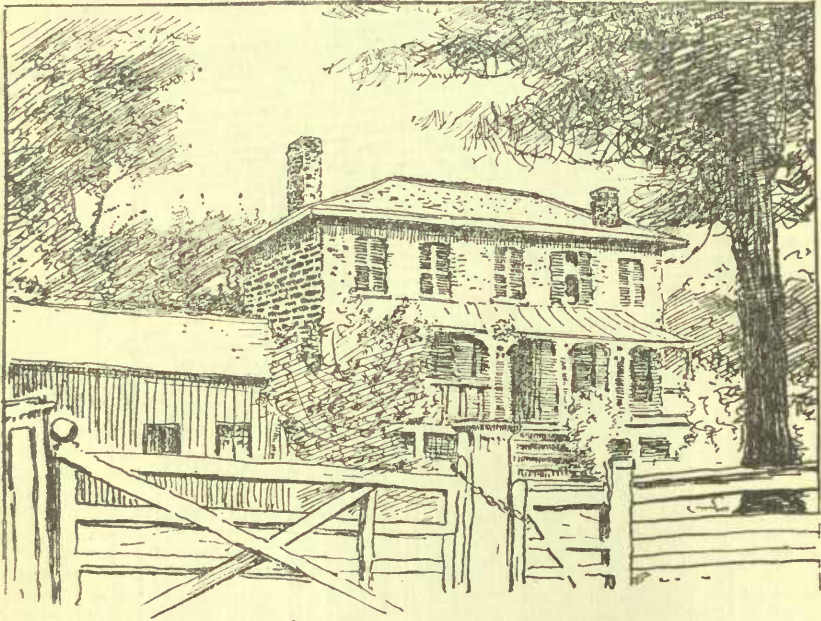

GRANTHAM'S, YONGE STREET, 1860.

Bartholomew Bull was born in Ireland, in County Tipperary, on August 17th, 1791. He was educated and spent the early years of his life in Ireland, leaving there for Canada in 1818. On arriving in this country he settled near York and commenced farming and in 1830 erected the house already spoken of. One who knew him well writes:—"Mr. Bull was well and widely known to almost every early settler in the County of York, as a man of character, industry and integrity. No name was more familiar than that of Bartley Bull."

CHAPTER IX.
PROVINCIAL LUNATIC ASYLUM.

The Laying of the Corner Stone—Names of the Commissioners—Opening and Description of the Various Apartments.

Though now surrounded by houses on all sides, and, if one takes the street cars, within an easy twenty minutes' ride from Yonge street, the massive and familiar building on Queen street west, occupied for nearly fifty years as the Provincial Lunatic Asylum, was, when erected, wholly in the country. It was

SPRING MOUNT, DAVENPORT.

Mr. Bull was a member of the Methodist body and did all that he could both in working and by donations from his means to further the progress of that denomination. It is chiefly owing to the exertions of Bartholomew Bull and Geo. Cooper that the Methodist body have obtained such a strong hold upon the people residing in or near Davenport.

Mr. Bull died in 1878, having passed his eighty-seventh birthday. One of his sons holds an official position in the county, and other of his descendants are living in various portions of the province. Spring Mount has been taken down.

in 1846 that the building was commenced, the corner stone being laid by Chief Justice Robinson with becoming ceremonial, on Saturday, August 22, 1846.

Before giving the particulars of that event, let a retrospective glance be taken at the neighbourhood of the asylum as it was half a century since, that is, in 1845. The old homestead of the Shaw family, a little to the north-east, was then the residence of Captain Alexander Shaw, he farming some fifty acres surrounding the house. The Givins' house was a little to the west of Oak Hill, and with the exception of a few houses on Queen street, one of which was a well known tavern, called the Blue Bell—afterwards destroyed by fire—another tavern on the eastern corner of Queen and Dundas streets, and Mr. Fennings Taylor's residence on the western corner, the whole of the rest of the land was either uncleared or cultivated as farms or gardens. Trinity College was not built, not even thought of, and there was no school, church or chapel within several miles north or east, and only a small place of worship belonging to the Methodists about a mile to the west. It is unnecessary in this chapter to refer to any of the families that have just been mentioned; they have all been spoken of elsewhere and full details given respecting them.

The morning of August 22nd, 1846, was dull and threatening, and it was feared that the day's proceedings would be seriously interfered with by the weather; but it cleared up, and about two o'clock the various bodies who were to take part in the day's proceedings began to assemble at the old Government House, on King street west. Mr. R. L. Denison acting as marshal. First came the band of the 81st Regiment, then stationed at the Old Fort; then the fire companies, followed by the members of the St. George's, St. Andrew's and St. Patrick's Societies, each society bearing its own banner. Then came the Home District and the City Councils, the Chief Justice and judges, the Oddfellows and a large number of citizens.

On arrival at the grounds the company proceeded to the north-eastern corner of the building. The architect, Mr. J. G. Howard, then placed in a cavity beneath the stone a copy of Rowsell's almanac for 1846, Brown's City Directory, a copy of the last issue of the city daily papers, and the following coins, a sovereign, half-sovereign, crown, half-crown, shilling, sixpence, four-penny piece, penny and half-penny of the Victorian era, two old penny pieces, a shilling each of George II. and George III., also a written account of the mid-summer examinations at Upper Canada College in 1846, and two engravings of Dr. Strachan's old school house at Cornwall.

Upon a plate which covered the cavity was engraved as follows— :

THIS CORNER STONE

OF THE FIRST BUILDING ERECTED IN WESTERN CANADA FOR THE RECEPTION OF

INSANE AND LUNATIC PERSONS,

WAS LAID BY

THE HONORABLE JOHN BEVERLEY ROBINSON, CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA.

The inscription was a very long one and gave full particulars of who laid the stone, who were present, with the names of the commissioners, architect, builder and secretary. Even the name of the marshal of the day was engraved on the plate.

The Commissioners were:—Vice-Chancellor Robert Sympson Jameson, Hamilton Hartley Killaly, Henry Sherwood, Q. C., M. P. P., Christopher Widmer, M. D., John King, M. D., John Ewart Innes, Grant Chewitt, William Henry Boulton, M. P. P., Mayor of Toronto for 1846, William R. Beaumont, M. D., F. R. C. S., England, and William Botsford Jarvis, Sheriff of the Home district.

Architect, John G. Howard.

Builder, John Ritchey.

Secretary to the Commissioners, Chas. Daly.

A silver trowel was presented to the Chief Justice by Mr. J. G. Howard, which bore on it an inscription stating that it was the gift of the Commissioners for erecting the building. The Chief Justice duly laid the stone and then delivered an address to the company. After that was concluded the band played "Rule Britannia" and the assembly dispersed.

The building was opened in June, 1848, and contained in all apartments for 204 patients. Males were on the west and females on the east. In the basement there were the larders and dairies, all the necessary offices and dormitories for 20 male and 20 female patients.

FIRST FLOOR ABOVE THE BASEMENT

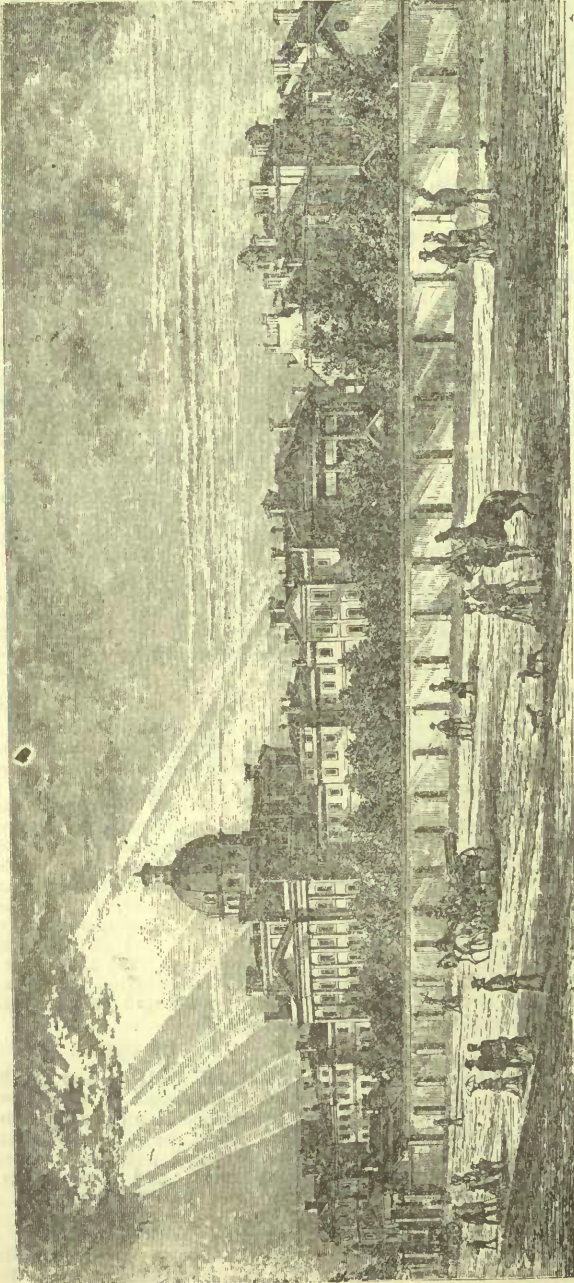

were verandahs, rooms for four patients with separate attendants, dormitories for 36 patients, dining rooms, etc., and separate sleeping rooms for 20 patients, besides parlours for convalescent male and female patients. Then there was the matron's chamber and private room, with similar apartments for the house steward and the assistant physician.

In the principal and in the upper storey the accommodation was precisely similar to that on the first floor, with this addition, that there was a hall room and accommodation for 10 paying patients each, male and female. In the upper storey of were the Anglican and the Roman Catholic chapels and a chapel which was to be common to all denominations, anatomical room and museum attached, room for working patients, ten separate sleeping rooms and two large dormitories for two patients each.

The dome of the asylum was covered at first with bright tin, and it was possible on a clear, sunny afternoon to see the glittering tower from Oakville, which was more than twenty miles distant.

In concluding this article, one amusing story may be told in connection with the Lunatic Asylum. It is this: A second-hand bookseller in Albany, N.Y., published a catalogue of his wares, and in a footnote to the list of Canadian books remarked "that it appeared that the principal building in Upper Canada was for the reception of lunatics, something which was well suited to the inhabitants."

Kind of the bookseller; flattering to Canadians!

CHAPTER X. KNOX COLLEGE.

The Origin of the College—Its Rise and Progress—Some of the Earlier Professors—The Buildings which have been Occupied.

In 1843, just 52 years since, occurred in the Church of Scotland what is always spoken of now as the "disruption." In that year, owing to the vexed question of patronage, a great number of the clergy as well as of the laity belonging to the established Church of Scotland seceded from that body and formed themselves into what has been known ever since in Great Britain as the Free Church of Scotland.

This division unhappily was not confined to Scotland, but soon spread to the colonies. A considerable number of the attendants at Old St. Andrew's Church, situated at the south-west corner of Church and Adelaide streets, sympathized with their seceding brethren at home, and resolved to form themselves into a Free Church in this country. They did so, and Knox Church was one of the results of this movement. They went further than this, for they thought it necessary to found a theological college, wherein might be instructed young men desirous of becoming ministers in Presbyterian pulpits, though not necessarily in those of the Free Church exclusively.

Knox College was instituted in 1844, at a meeting held on October 14th, of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. At that meeting it was resolved to appoint professors of divinity, literature and science, these professors to have their residences in Toronto.

The Rev. Andrew King, who had come out of this country as a delegate from the Free Church of Scotland, was appointed professor of divinity pro tem, while the Rev. Henry Esson, of St. Gabriel street church, Montreal, was the first professor of literature and science. The classes met in a small room adjoining Mr. Esson's house on James street, not far from where now stands Holy Trinity church.

In the first session there were only fourteen students, five of whom had already commenced their studies at Queen's College, Kingston, prior to the disruption. At the same meeting Dr. Robert Burns, of Paisley, who was the first minister of Knox church, was appointed professor of theology, the appointment being subject to any contingency arising from the synod resolving at some future time to separate the offices of professor and pastor.

In 1845 the appointments of Dr. Burns and Professor Esson were confirmed.

In 1846 a committee was appointed by the synod to consider what means should be adopted to place the institution on a more extended and efficient basis, and they appointed a committee, whose duty it was to consider whether it was desirable to incorporate the college, what name it should bear, how many professors should be engaged, and what should be done towards erecting a suitable building for the establishment of an academy for the training of young men, and also to consider if it was necessary to build a boarding house for the students. In due course the committee reported that the college should be called Knox College, and that steps should be taken to establish an academy or high school. This latter came into being in the course of a year, under the superintendence of the Rev. A. Gale, M.A., formerly of Hamilton, who had as his assistants the Rev. T. Watman and Mr. T. Henning. Nothing was done towards erecting buildings, but both college and high school were removed to Ontario Terrace, on the same spot where now, improved and enlarged, stands the Queen's Hotel.

In 1847 the professorship of theology in Knox College was separated from the incumbency of Knox Church. This was not that any fault was found with Dr. Burns, but that the increasing number of pupils required the undivided services of the person holding the chair. The result of this resolution was that the Rev. M. Willis, D.D., was appointed in place of Dr. Burns, and he filled the office with satisfaction to everybody for 23 years.

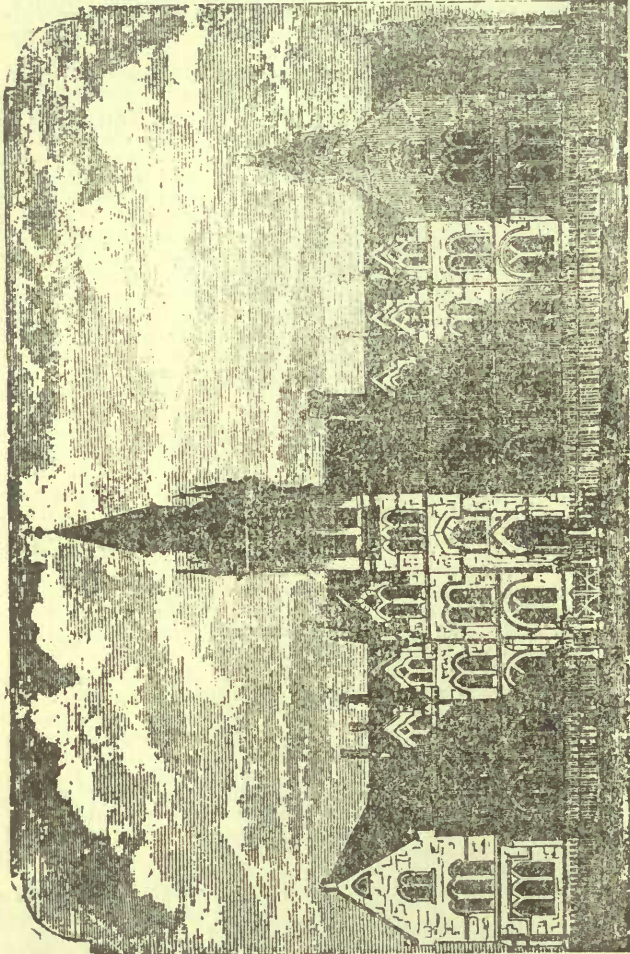

In 1853 died Prof. Esson. He was succeeded by the Rev. George Paxton Young, of Knox Church, Hamilton.

In 1854 it became necessary to remove from the premises the college occupied on Ontario terrace, and Elmsley villa, on Yonge street, once occupied by the Earl of Elgin, when he was Governor-General of Canada, was purchased, and the necessary alterations made. The Central Presbyterian church now occupies the site (1896).

In 1856 the Synod augmented the staff by appointing an additional professor in the person of the Rev. Dr. Burns, who was to lecture on church, history and evidence. Prof. Gale retired, dying almost immediately afterwards in the summer of 1864. He was succeeded by the Rev. John Laing, and afterwards by Mr. James Smith.

special subjects at Knox College have been the Rev. Dr. Ure, of Goderich; the Rev. Dr. Proudfoot, of London; the Rev. Dr. Inglis, of Hamilton, afterwards of Brooklyn, and the Rev. Dr. Topp. Dr. Willis resigned his professorship in 1870, and in the following year Dr. D. Inglis was appointed to succeed him. Dr. Inglis

Prof. Young resigned in 1864, and the Rev. Wm. Caven was in 1866 appointed to the professorship of exegetical theology. In the interval lectures had been delivered by the Rev. W. Gregg, of Cook's church, and also by Prof. Caven. Among others who have lectured on

It must be clearly understood that Knox College is a purely theological institution, and has no power of conferring academical degrees, such as is possessed by Trinity and Toronto Universities. It was incorporated in 1858, and has since been affiliated with the Toronto University, as is the Anglican Theological College, at no great distance from it, known as Wycliffe.

In 1875 the college removed from Grosvenor street to the handsome pile of buildings erected in Spadina crescent. These buildings cost about $100,000. They are as commodious as they are handsome, and have ample class rooms, chapel, library and students' rooms. From 80 to 90 students can be comfortably accommodated.

Among others who have done good work at Knox College may be mentioned the Rev. William Rintoul, who was professor of Hebrew, while the Rev. William Lyall, in 1849 and 1850, rendered important services to the college as professor of literature and mental training. The staff of the college on January 1st, 1895, was as follows: Chairman, W. M. Clark, M.A. Professors: Exegitics, Rev. Principal Caven, D.D.; Church History, Rev. W. Gregg, D.D.; Systematic Theology, Rev. W. McLaren, D.D.; Apologetics, Rev. R. Y. Thomas, M.A., B.D.; Homiletics and Pastoral Theology, Rev. J. A. Proudfoot, D.D.; Oriental Languages, Rev. J. F. McCurdy, Ph.D.; Elocution, A. C. Moun-teer, Esq., B.E.; Tutor, George Logie, B.A.; Librarian, Rev. W. A. J. Martin.

The Principal and Chairman are the representatives of the college on the Senate of Toronto University.

CHAPTER XI.

LADIES' SCHOOLS OF OLD.

Some Reminiscences of the Ladies' Schools. Of Those who Kept and of Those who Attended Them.

Situated on Grange avenue, just east of the Grange, stood for many years a house, the occupants of which have played a by no means unimportant part in Toronto history. "Pinehurst," for so the house was called, can be seen from the engraving to have been a substantial and commodious building, well suited for a large establishment of any kind. The house itself was built by Mr. Clarke Gamble, Q.C., about 1840, and was his home for about ten years, when he removed to Holland House. Mr. J. G. Howard was the architect. In 1850 Monsieur and Madame Des-Landes rented Pinehurst from Mr. Gamble, and opened it as a ladies' school, continuing there, having a large and fashionable clientele, until 1853, when they were succeeded by one of the most accomplished schoolmistresses and charming of women, Mrs. Forster.

Mrs. Forster had been the wife of an English army officer, and she was the daughter of a Mr. Smith, who resided in one of the northern suburbs of London, England, where Mrs. Forster was born. The Rev. Thomas Smith Kennedy, formerly secretary of the Toronto Church Society, was a first cousin of Mrs. Forster, and on most intimate terms with her. Mr. Kennedy died nearly thirty years ago.

From 1853 until 1866 did Mrs. Forster's school flourish, and probably no one who ever acted as schoolmistress was more liked by her pupils and more respected by their guardians. In 1866 Mrs. Forster's health broke down utterly and completely, and she was compelled to relinquish her duties; she was followed by another lady of a different name, in another locality. For many years Mrs. Forster was a chronic invalid, but survived until May, 1876, when she passed away. She was buried in St. James' cemetery. When at Pinehurst Mrs. Forster was, with her entourage, a prominent figure in St. George's church, being a great friend of the rector and of many of those who formed the congregation.

Among many other prominent Canadian families whose daughters were educated at Pinehurst may be mentioned the Cummings, of Chippewa, the Fullers of Niagara, the O'Reillys of Hamilton, the Law-rasons of London, the Belts of Carlton Place, and the Bettridges of Woodstock. Of Toronto families there were, of course, many representatives. Pinehurst was pulled down about nine years ago to make way for the extension of McCaul street to College street.

MISS MACNALLY'S SCHOOL.

This establishment was on the north side of Wellington street, in the large brick house, still standing, east of Emily street. Rev. Michael Willis, D.D., principal of Knox College in 1856, lived next door. The school was kept by Miss MacNally, a Dublin lady, assisted by her three sisters, though Miss MacNally was the lady who was at the head of the establishment and who exercised entire control over everything. It was in 1845 or 1846 that the school was commenced, and it was carried on by these ladies for about twelve years, until Miss MacNally's marriage with Mr. John Boyd, the sometime principal of the once famous school on Bay street. Miss MacNally was one of the most accomplished of linguists, speaking French, German and Spanish with equal facility, and it was her invariable practice to address the various professors of these languages who taught in her school in their own tongue. Among Miss MacNally's pupils were members of the Gordon, Blake and Thomson families, of Toronto, also some of the Fullers, of Niagara, and the Hamiltons, of the same place, besides daughters of the Widder and McGaw families from Toronto and its immediate vicinity respectively.

MISS MACARTNEY'S SCHOOL.

Another well known ladies' school was that at 325 King street west, on the south side, in the most westerly of the block of three-storey brick houses on the south side, near John street. Miss Macartney was the lady principal, and reigned there as such for about six years, from 1854. Representatives of the Macklem family, of Chippewa, the Granges, of Guelph; the Hodders, of Toronto; the Hurds, of the same place; the Hardings, of Napanee; the Denisons, of Dovercourt road and of Rusholme; the

Mr. M. C. Crombie, a former head master of the Home District Grammar school on Nelson street.

Mrs. Crombie's school was on George street, in the northern of the two old-fashioned three-storey brick houses on the east side of the street, in 1855, 28, now No. 111.

Mrs. Crombie was assisted by two of her sons and a daughter, and had a large number of pupils. Among them may be mentioned Toronto's chief of police in 1895, Mr. F. B. Cumberland, and one or two more equally prominent citizens.

Next door south of Mrs. Crombie lived for some years Mr. Robert Manners, a professional man, who was a scion of the famous ducal family of Manners, the Dukes of Rutland.

MRS. CROMBIE'S HOUSE ON GEORGE STREET.

Berthous and the Hollands, also of Toronto, besides many more from various parts of the province, were educated there. Miss Macartney was the second daughter of an English officer, and her school was an exceedingly popular one. Later Miss Macartney married, and as Mrs. Nixon was the principal of a school in connection with the Anglican body. Some years since she retired from scholastic work, and is affectionately remembered by all her old pupils.

MRS. CROMBIE'S SCHOOL.

Yet another old-time scholastic establishment was that for small boys and girls kept by Mrs. Crombie, widow of

The two houses, of which drawings are given, are interesting as being among Toronto's earliest brick buildings. They were built on land leased from Sir William Campbell in 1829 by Isaac Perry, a blacksmith, and forty years ago were fashionable residences. They are roomy and capacious still, but people prefer who rent houses as large as they are to live west or north and not so much in the city. The two houses sketched were of respectable age when most of Toronto's present inhabitants were in their cradles, and though old-fashioned are likely to last for many years to come.

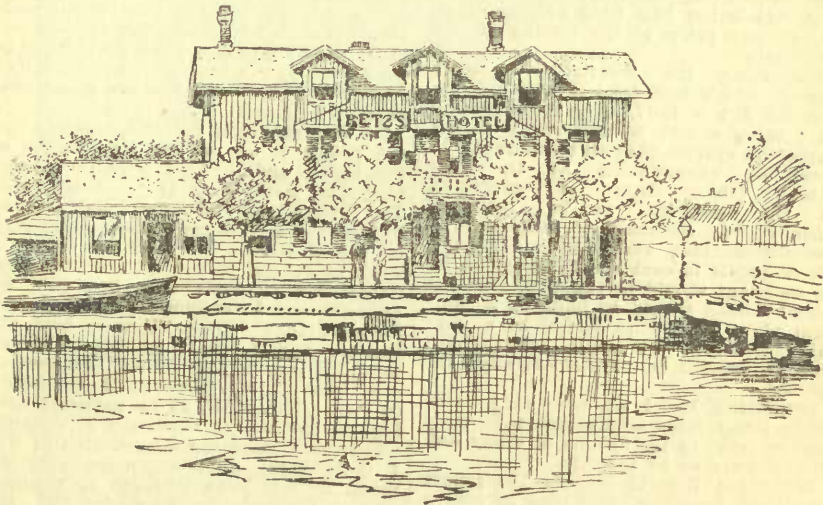

CHAPTER XII.

TWO FRONT STREET TAVERNS.

The House on the Esplanade Kent by John Betz—The Old Rescue Inn and its Famous Signboard.

About 1861 was erected on the Esplanade, at the foot of Simcoe street, on the very edge of the bay, the hotel known for some time as Betz's, and kept by a German named John Betz, from 1861 until the situation was required to build the Union Station in 1872. The house was then removed en bloc to the north-west corner of York and Wellington streets.

The subject was the rescue of her infant by a mother from the nest of some enormous eagles in a rocky pass at the head of some apparently inaccessible mountains. How the woman had climbed the mountains was a mystery, and how she was going to descend them was even more mysterious still. But the sign served one good purpose, at any rate, and that, as far as the proprietor was concerned, was the chief one, it drew attention to the house and custom to its proprietor. So long as the Rescue was in existence it was a favourite resort for the troops stationed at the Old and New where it still remains, altered somewhat, but substantially the same as when it stood on the bay front. In a few years' time there will be no houses left that are capable of being moved from street to street, and the story of Betz's Hotel is interesting, from the fact that it was one of the largest houses ever so removed.

Another well-known Front street tavern, at no very great distance, was the Rescue Inn, a little to the east of the foot of Bathurst street, kept in the fifties by Mrs. Hickman. The most noticeable feature in connection with the Rescue tavern was its conspicuous signboard, which was noticeable not only for its great size, but for the wonderful and sensational style of its drawing.

Forts, and it was always the first place a picquet made for when soldiers were reported as being absent from "tattoo." Like so many more of the old time places, this inn long since disappeared, and is now (1895) only remembered by those who lived in or had business associations with the neighbourhood.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

History of Its Foundation and of Those Who Were Concerned Therein—The Earlier Buildings and the Present Ones.

In 1839 a commission was appointed by the Government of the day to enquire into the state of education in the province of Upper Canada, the commissioners for the purpose being the Rev. John McCaul, D. D., Principal of Upper Canada College; Rev. Henry James Grasett, at that time assistant minister of St. James' church, afterwards rector, and latterly Anglican Dean of Toronto, and Samuel Bealey Harrison, Esq., who in after years was so well known as one of the county judges. Mr. James Hopkirk was the secretary.

The report issued by this commission was a most exhaustive one. They reviewed the whole course of legislation that had been adopted from 1797 to 1833, giving extracts from the several Acts of Parliament passed in the years 1807, 1808, 1816, 1819 and 1833, this last year being the final one in which any legislation had been attempted on the subject prior to the issuing of the commission.

Respecting the District Grammar schools which had been established under the Act of 1807, they recommended that there should be uniformity as regards the system, that all teachers should pass an examination as to their fitness (the state of education in the province can be imagined when it was necessary to make such a recommendation), that where the number of pupils in each school exceeded 30 an assistant should be engaged, that all school houses should be built on a uniform plan, that there should be a certain number of free pupils, and that all schools should be systematically inspected.

Respecting Model schools they also made many recommendations for their improvement in the system of study and the subjects to be taught.

Regarding Normal schools the report was most emphatic. "No plan of education can be efficiently carried out without the establishment of schools for the training of teachers," and their recommendation was that the Central school in Toronto should be a Normal school, with others to be added as occasion might require.

The commissioners invited opinions from many of the leading men of the day on the question of schools and their teachers, and it is worth while to give brief extracts from the replies of some of those who were consulted. Mahlon Burwell wrote: "I cannot conceive anything more wanting in efficiency than our present system for common school education." Rev. Robert Murray, who was the first Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada, wrote, describing it as, "The present wretched system of education." Then, suggesting a remedy, he continued: "It appears absolutely necessary, to ensure the efficiency of a system, that men of education, who themselves have had large experience in the education of youth, should be appointed to superintend the whole system."

Bishop Strachan, speaking of the bill drawn up by Mr. Mahlon Burwell, whose opinion has just been quoted, said: "The Common School Bill drawn up by Mr. Burwell appears to be an able performance. * * * It is based on true principles."

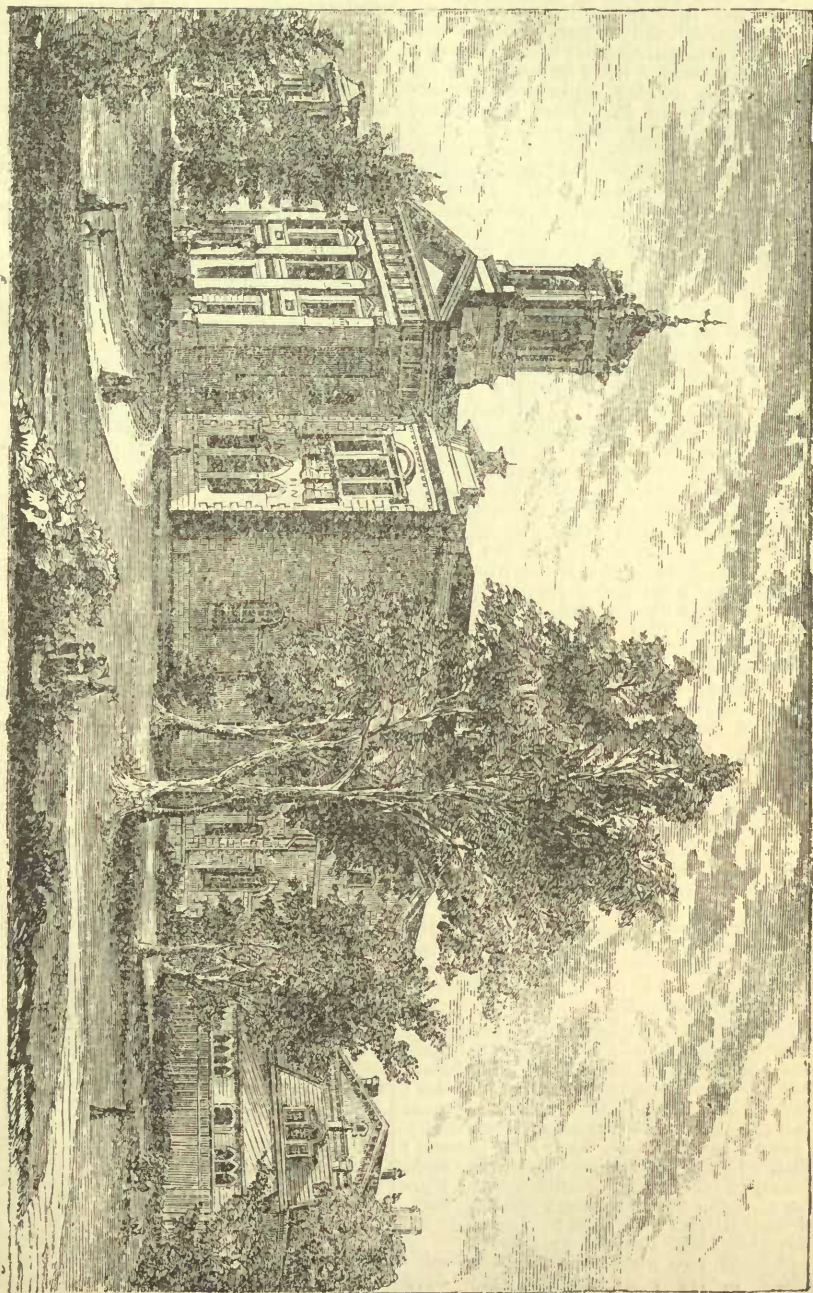

The last opinion that it is necessary to quote is that of the Hon. P. B. De Blaquiére. He was even more emphatic than was Mr. Burwell, saying: "The present condition of teachers is truly wretched, and reflects great disgrace upon the nation."

This was the state of educational matters when Upper and Lower Canada became united in 1840. Lord Sydenham, in his speech to the first Parliament, called together in Kingston after the union, thus expressed himself:

"A due provision for the education of the people is one of the first duties of the State, and, in this province especially, the want of it is grievously felt. The establishment of an efficient system, by which the blessings of instruction may be placed within the reach of all, is a work of difficulty, but its overwhelming importance demands that it should be undertaken. I recommend the consideration of that subject to your best attention, and I shall be most anxious to afford you, in your labours, all the co-operation in my power. If it should be found impossible so to reconcile conflicting opinions as to obtain a measure which may meet the approbation of all, I trust that, at least, steps may be taken by which an advance to a more perfect system may be made, and the difficulty under which the people of this province now labour may be greatly diminished, subject to such improvements hereafter as time and experience may point out."

A School Act was passed the same session, applicable to both provinces, only to be repealed in 1843 as being wholly unworkable in the lower province, and separate acts were passed for each province, and on them was implanted a scheme to apply to both Upper and Lower Canada for public and common schools, with a monetary appropriation of £50,000, or $200,000, in aid of their support.

In a letter to Mr. I. G. Hodgins, of Toronto, the Hon. Isaac Buchanan, writing under date April 11th, 1882, thus tells how it came about that such a very large sum was obtained from the public exchequer. He wrote:

NORMAL SCHOOL, ST. JAMES' SQUARE, GOLD STREET FRONT, ERRECTED 1851.

"This first attempt of mine to get an endowment for education (out of the clergy reserve fund) failed, as there was no responsible government then. But five years afterwards, when my election for Toronto had carried responsible government, and before the first Parliament met, I was talking to the Governor-General (C. Poulett Thompson, Lord Sydenham). He felt under considerable obligation to me for standing in the breach when Mr. Robert Baldwin found that he could not succeed in carrying Toronto. He spoke of Canada as 'a drag upon the mother country.' I replied warmly, for I felt sure (as I told him) that if we were allowed to throw the affairs of the province into regular books . . . we would show a surplus over expenditure. His Excellency agreed to my proposal, and I stipulated that, if we showed a yearly surplus, one-half would be given as an endowment for an educational system. Happily, we found that Upper Canada had a surplus revenue of about £100,000 ($400,000) one half of which the Parliament of 1841 laid aside for education, the law stipulating that every district council getting a share of it would tax locally for as much more, and this constituted the fund of your educational system."

In the early days of the Education Department the office was little more than an appanage of the Provincial Secretary's Department in Kingston, the then capital. The first office opened in Toronto was in Bay street, on the west side, north of Front street, now No. 58.

In 1844 the office was removed to Cobourg. In 1846 it was again brought back to Toronto, to its old quarters in Bay street, and in 1849 it was in the Albany Chambers, on the south side of King street, west of York street, now known as the Revere buildings. In 1852 it was removed to the present Normal School.

The Rev. Robert Murray was appointed Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada, May 11th, 1842, and he was succeeded by the Rev. Egerton Ryerson on October 18th, 1844.

The first Council of Public Instruction was appointed in 1846. Their names were as follows: Rev. Egerton Ryerson, D.D., Chief Superintendent of Schools; Right Rev. Michael Power, D.D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Toronto; Rev. Henry James Grasett, M.A., Rector of Toronto; Hon. Samuel Bealey Harrison, Q.C., County York Judge; Joseph Curran Morrison, Q.C., M.P.P.; Hugh Scobie, Esq., of the British Colonist; James Scott Howard, Esq., County Treasurer.

In 1850 two additional members were added to the commission. They were

Rev. Adam Lillie, D.D., a Congregational minister, who was, though, anything but a "sectarian," being a man of very wide sympathies, and Rev. John Jennings, a well known Presbyterian preacher.

The first Normal School was on King street west, in the old Government House, the stables of which were fitted up as a Model School. In 1849, when the Government returned to Toronto the Normal School was removed to the Temperance Hall, on Temperance street, and in 1852 removed to the present buildings in St. James' square.

The corner stone of the existing Normal School was laid with great ceremony by the Governor-General, the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, on July 2nd, 1851. The 71st Regiment, then stationed in Toronto, furnished a guard of honour. Amongst those present were the Anglican and Roman Catholic Bishops of Toronto, Colonel Sir Hew Dalrymple, Rev. H. J. Grasett, Dr. Ryerson, and a great many more.

The stone bore the following inscription:

"This Institution, Erected by the Enlightened Liberality of Parliament, is designed for the instruction and training of School Teachers up on Christian Principles."

Lord Elgin's address was a notable one, and has often been quoted and reproduced. Speaking of the spread of education in Canada, he said how this country had been able to profit by the experience of older ones, adding that, owing to "the diligent exertions and excellent judgment" of Dr. Ryerson. . . . "fortified by the support of the Council of Education, and the Government and Parliament of the province, has enabled Upper Canada to place herself in the van among the nations in the great and important work of providing an efficient system of general education of the whole community. I do not think that I shall be charged with exaggeration when I affirm that this work is the work of our day and generation—that it is the problem in our modern society which is most difficult of solution. . . . How has Upper Canada addressed herself to the execution of this great work? Sir, I understand from your statements—and I come to the same conclusions from my own investigation and observation—that it is the principle of our educational system that its foundation be laid deep in the firm rock of our common Christianity.

"Permit me to say, both as a humble Christian man and as the head of the civil government of the province, that it gives me unfeigned pleasure to perceive that the youth of this country . . . who are destined in their maturer years to meet in the discharge of the duties of civil life upon terms of perfect civil and religious equality. I say it gives me pleasure to hear and to know that they are receiving an education which is fitted so well to qualify them for the discharge of these important duties; and that while their hearts are yet tender, they are associated under conditions which are likely to provoke amongst them the growth of those truly Christian graces—mutual respect, forbearance and charity."

Of the sixteen assistant counsellors appointed to assist Dr. Ryerson from 1844 to 1876 not one survives. Their names were Bishop Power, of revered memory; Hugh Scobie, Judge Harrison, Bishop Fuller, Archbishop Lynch, Reverends A. Lillie, John Jennings, John Ambrey, J. Tabarat, John McCaul, John Barclay and Samuel S. Nelles, Very Reverend Dean Grasett, Hon. William McMaster and James Scott Howard. It would be hard to find a more truly representative list.

Dr. Ryerson continued in office until February 21st, 1876, when he resigned after thirty-two years service. He died in Toronto on February 19th, 1882, having all but completed his 79th year.

CHAPTER XIV.

TINNING'S WHARF.

The Calling Place of the American Line of Steamers—A Famous Boating Incident—A Triumphant Return.

One of the most well-known resorts on the water front fifty years since was the wharf of which the illustration is given in this paper. It was always known as Tinning's wharf, from the name of its owner and builder.

Richard Tinning was a native of the cathedral city of Carlisle, in the county of Cumberland, where he was born in the year 1801. He came to Canada in 1832, having previously married Ann Tiffin, daughter of a family of the yeoman class who had been domiciled in Carlisle for several generations. Settling in York on his arrival in Canada, Mr. Tinning, though engaged in many other enterprises as well, was for the whole of his life connected with the shipping interests on the lakes. In 1836 he built the wharf which bore his name at the foot of York street, slightly to the east of its termination at the water front.

The wharf was constructed, as nearly all wharves were in those days, of crib work filled with stones, and was a substantial structure. At the north end was the office, and on the wharf itself were store houses and warehouses.

For several years the Donald Bethune American line of steamers, the New York and Northerner, tied up there when in Toronto, and Mr. Tinning himself was always a persona grata with their owners, officers and customers. During the greater portion of the time Mr. Tinning was at the wharf he was assisted by his son, also Richard Tinning, who, though now fast becoming one of the city's "oldest inhabitants," is hale and hearty, and pleased to indulge in reminiscences of the past.

Mr. Tinning died May 8th, 1858, and the business devolved upon his son, whose name has already been mentioned. In October, 1858, Richard Tinning achieved a very great distinction in the aquatic world. A crew of Chicago rowers—four-oared—issued a challenge for the "championship of the lakes," and a purse of $2,000. This was taken up by Richard Tinning, who, accompanied by his brothers John and Thomas, William Dillon, Michael Teedy and Richard Tinning as coxswain, went to Detroit, where the race was to be rowed, and beat the Americans off the course. Among those who accompanied Tinning on this occasion were the Hon. David Macpherson and Colonel C. S. Gzowski. On returning to Toronto the victorious crew received a tremendous ovation, and were feted on all sides.

The race was pulled on October 16th, 1858, just thirty-seven years ago, and with the single exception of William Dillon, all the contestants are still alive. Michael Teedy is a member of the fire department, in which he has been employed for several years.

Closely adjacent to Tinning's wharf was the St. James' Hotel, kept for some time by Mrs. Trotter, who had previously kept the hotel in Ottawa where, on April 7th, 1868, Thomas D'Arcy McGee was so basely assassinated just as he was entering the door.

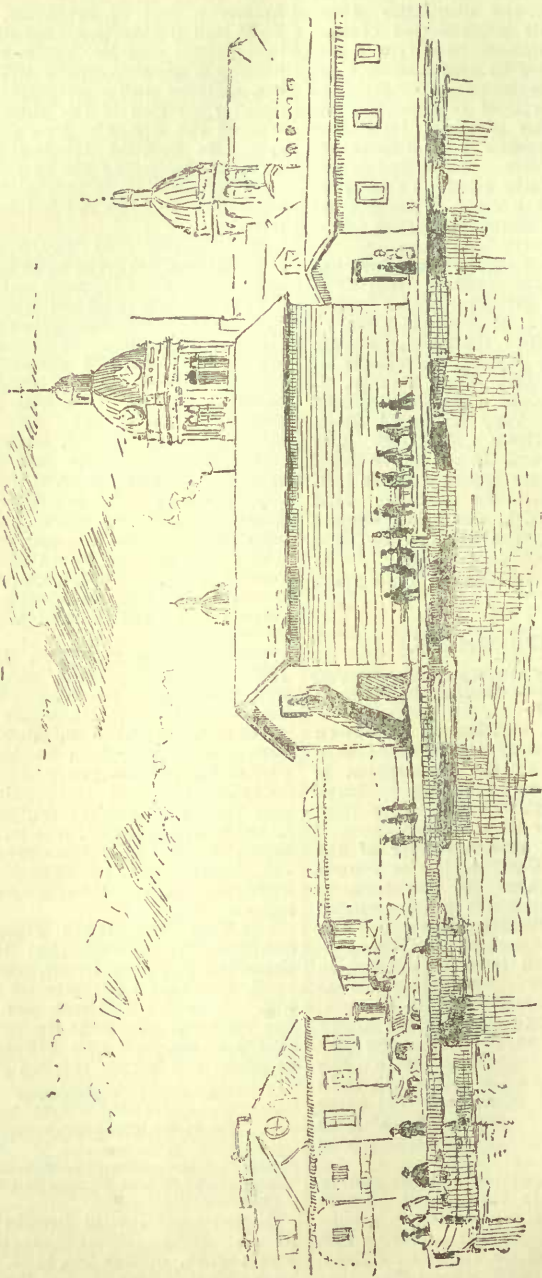

For just fifty years Tinning's wharf continued to flourish, but in 1886 the Canadian Pacific railway, wanting to extend, purchased the site on the Esplanade. The old wharf was soon dismantled, the adjacent buildings on the Esplanade pulled down, and now (1895) it is hard to make out where it even was.

CHAPTER XV.

OLD EAST END HOUSES.

A Log Cottage and an old Tavern, the First One of the Oldest Houses in the City—Capital Sparks.

On the west side of Broadview avenue, at no great distance north of Queen street east, stands No. 144, one of the very oldest houses in the city of Toronto.

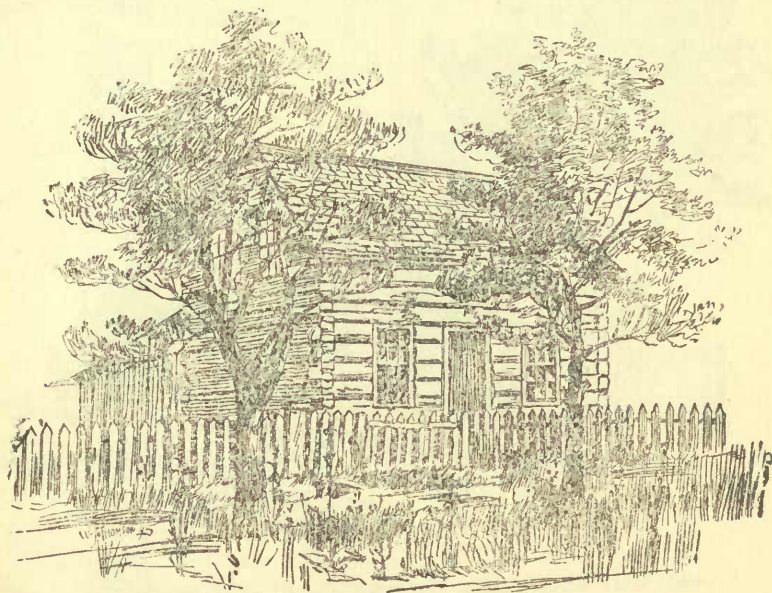

TINNING'S WHARF, FOOT OF YORK STREET, BUILT IN 1836.

To outward appearances it is simply a plain one and a half storey old-fashioned frame building, which may have been erected thirty or even forty years since.

The cottage in question was the residence for a great number of years of James Sparks, who for the whole of his working life was engaged in the navigation of the lakes. James Sparks was born in Scotland, September 27, 1808, and came to this country with his parents in 1818. At a very early age Sparks began work as a sailor on Lake Ontario, and continued at that calling until he retired from active work. About 1840 Sparks bought the cottage, in which easily kept warm in winter. It was an old house when Captain Sparks bought it, and he effected very extensive repairs. A few years later he clap-boarded it, making its appearance what it is now. There is a tradition that it was erected at or about the same time as Castle Frank, and is almost the only log house still used as a dwelling place within the city limits. Capt. Sparks during the winter, for many years, acted as tyler for the Masonic Lodge meeting in the Market Lane Hall, especially from 1822 to 1850.

CAPTAIN SPARKS' COTTAGE BROADVIEW AVENUE.

42 years later he passed away. As will be seen from the cut—which represents it as it was then—the house is a log-built building, standing in its own garden, and was designed more for use than for ornament. The ceilings are barely seven feet from the floor, and the walls, which are of squared timber, are about eighteen inches deep. It possesses no hall, the front door opens directly into the sitting room, which is an apartment about ten feet square, upon which open two decidedly small bedrooms. There is a kitchen in the rear and some sleeping apartments in the half storey, and the log house, though it is cool in summer, is ferent schooners upon the lakes, his last vessel being the Beaver, which was wrecked at Rochester about 1865. He died on September 5th, 1882, having almost reached his 74th birthday, and was buried in St. James' cemetery. His widow still lives in the pleasant old cottage, while one of his sons is in Government employ and lives near by the home where he was born.

THE RISING SUN INN.

Another old house east of the Don is that which, now divided into two tenements and numbered 413 and 715 Queen street east, stands on the south side of that thoroughfare, just east of Broadview avenue. It was from about 1844 a well known tavern, called the Rising Sun, and was kept by a man named William Knight. Owing to the fact that the old race course was immediately in its rear, the Sun was greatly patronized by sporting men and by those who followed in their train. For many years it was the only tavern between the Don river and Leslie's nursery, situated on Queen street east, then known as Kingston road, but in the early "fifties" other houses were opened, and in 1857 the race course was wards Chief Justice, William Buell Richards.

The house itself was a pleasant, roomy building, built of frame rough-cast, with a spacious verandah on two sides of it. It was built by Mr. John Crawford, who was Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario from 1873 until 1877, about 1845, and by him sold to Judge Richards in 1859. When erected it was quite in the country, and down to 1870, or even a little later, may almost have been looked on as a suburban residence. But since then closed, and the Rising Sun found, like Othello, "its occupation gone." Very soon after the races ceased to be held on the Don course the tavern was "shut down," and now few people even remember the once flourishing hostelry.

CHAPTER XVI JUDGE RICHARDS' HOUSE.

A Famous Canadian who Rose to the Highest Point in the Legal Profession—Honoured by his Sovereign and his Country.

On the south-east corner of Ann and Yonge streets stood for many years the house occupied during the whole of his residence in Toronto by Judge, after-the changes in the city have been great and a few years since the house was pulled down to make way for shops and warehouses.

William Buell Richards was a man who by sheer force of ability and painstaking industry rose from a comparatively humble position in life to one of the highest positions, not only in his profession, but in the Dominion.

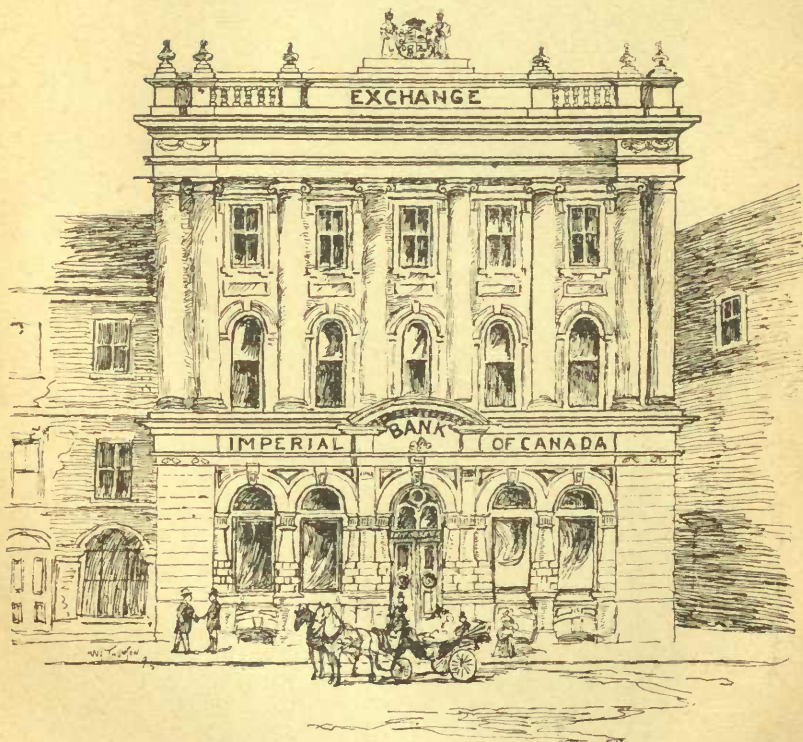

Chief Justice Richards was born in Brockville in 1814, and in 1831 commenced the study of law under Mr. G. Malloch, and on the completion of his articles entered into partnership with that gentleman, the firm being known as Malloch & Richards. In 1848 he entered Parliament as member for the County of Leeds, defeating the late Mr. Ogle R. Gowan by sixty votes. From 1851 until June, 1853, he held the post of Attorney-General West in the Hincks-Morin Ministry, only retiring from that position on being appointed to a puisne judgeship in the Court of Common Pleas, rendered vacant by the death of the Honourable R. B. Sullivan. In 1863 he succeeded Chief Justice Draper in the same court, and upon that eminent jurist being transferred from the Queen's Bench to the Court of Appeal, he was again succeeded by Chief Justice Richards. In 1875, when the Supreme Court of Canada was created, he was chosen to fill the important and responsible position of Chief Justice of the court. In 1877 he received the honour of knighthood "in recognition of his long and distinguished judicial career."

Owing to failing health Chief Justice Richards retired from the bench in January, 1879, and from that date took no part in public affairs. The Chief Justice married a Mrs. Muirhead, a granddaughter of Dr. Muirhead of Niagara.

The old house where they resided is still standing, built after the war of 1812.

After his retirement Sir William Richards continued to reside in Ottawa, where he died on January 26th, 1889. A writer in one of the papers, speaking of his decease, said:—"He was, both as a judge and as a man, a Canadian of whom Canadians may be proud, and will be remembered in history as one of the giants of our time."

He was interred in the general cemetery, Brockville, where he had been born, and where he had first entered upon his honourable career.

Mrs. Richards died many years ago.

CHAPTER XVII.

WELLINGTON STREET EAST.

Both Sides of a Commercial Centre, Which is Now in the Heart of the Dry-Goods and Financial District.

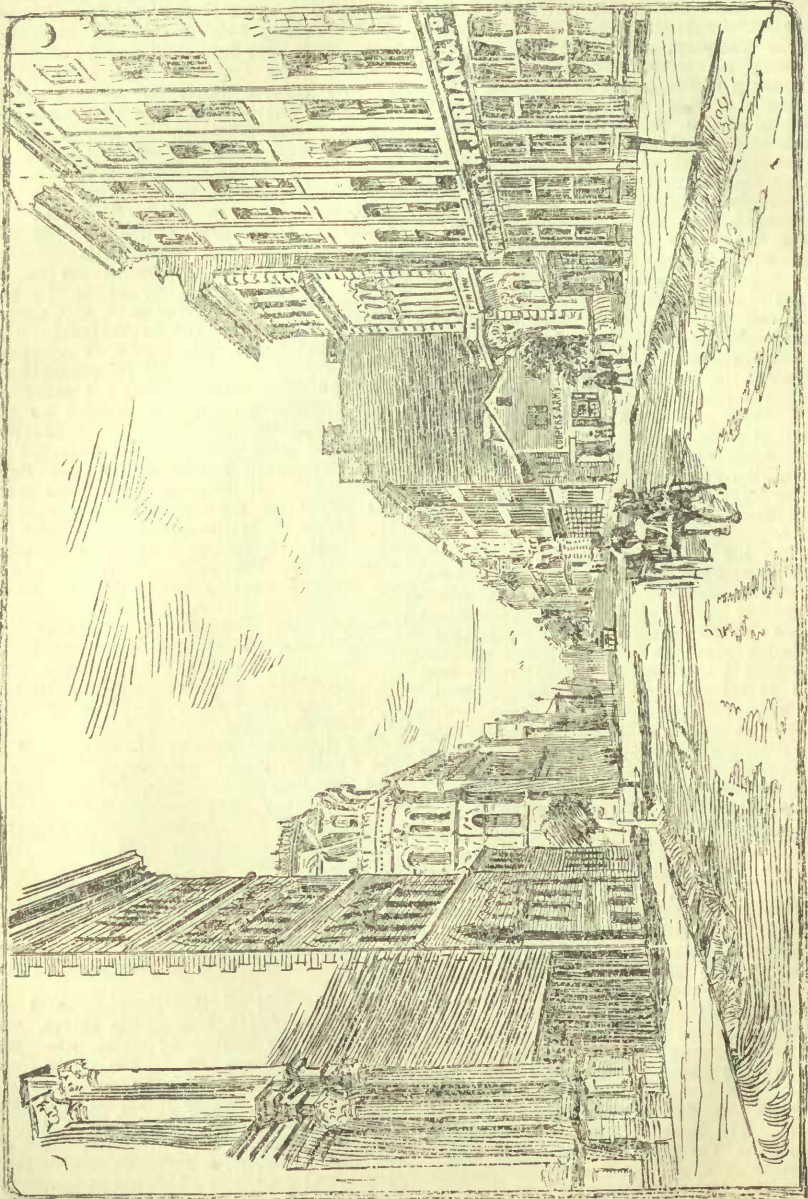

The picture in this landmark of 1866 gives a fair idea of the both sides of Wellington street east from Yonge down to the Imperial Bank, on the north-west corner of Change Alley. At the right, where the Imperial Bank stands, was the site of the post-office prior to its removal to the west side of Toronto street. The first building shown in the picture on the right is No. 30, the establishment of R. Jordan & Co., the grocers, while No. 28 was the first office of the Molsons Bank of Montreal in Toronto, with Mr. R. G. Dallas as manager. No.

26 was a small clapboard cottage, where Mr. Campbell, a bootmaker, lived. No. 24 is the Ontario Bank, then under the management of Mr. Alexander Fisher. The building Nos. 23-30 are the same structures, but remodelled as in the late sixties. The Ontario Bank is now, as it was then, a handsome piece of architecture. The building has been improved by a large addition at the rear, on Scott street. Across Scott street, at the north-west corner of Wellington, was the old building which many years ago was prominent as a place of resort—the Cooper's Arms—kept originally by Mr. John Murphy, and afterwards by Mrs. Julia Murphy, his widow. From No. 18 to No. 16 was devoted to offices. In this building was the office of F. C. Capreol, president of the Huron Ontario Ship Canal Company, and David B. Pearson, secretary of the Travellers' Association. This building was originally erected for hotel purposes, and was known as the Western Hotel, and occupied by the late Russell Inglis, prior to his removal to the Wellington Hotel, where the Bank of Toronto now stands. Nos. 12-14 were the wholesale warehouse of the late A. M. Smith & William Keighley, and at No. 8 W. H. Fraser had a commission agency. Mr. Fraser was afterwards, and up to the date of his death, Dominion Appraiser at Ottawa. No. 6 was a building directly east of the Express Company's lane. It was occupied by Leith & Kennedy, barristers, and others, and at the corner was the Bank of British North America, when Mr. Samuel Taylor was manager.

The principal change on this street is the Cooper's Arms, now occupied by the new building of the Western Fire Insurance Company. The Bank of British North America has been re-built on the north-east corner of Yonge and Wellington streets.

The little yellow cottage between the Ontario and Molsons Banks, occupied by Mr. Campbell, has given way to a large white brick building, occupied by offices, amongst them that of Messrs. Clarkson & Cross.

On the left of the picture, and on the south side of Wellington street, the building, the pillars of which are seen on the immediate left, is the Royal Canadian Bank, Nos. 25-27. This bank started business on Toronto street, directly north of the original Rice Lewis' building. The vacant space directly west of the Royal Canadian Bank on Wellington street was owned in 1872 and subsequently built upon by the late Senator John Macdonald, as part of his large warehouse. Nos. 21-23 comprised the western part of the present John Macdonald & Co.'s dry goods establishment, while No. 19 was a two-storey brick building, occupied in 1872 by F. J. Stewart as a tea broker, and is now the site of the Pacific buildings.

Crossing the street is the building of the Great North-western Telegraph Company, a building which stood on the site of a clapboard building, owned and occupied by Mr. Graham, in fact, for years it was known as Graham's Corner. The building west, at No. 15, was erected by the late Mr. John Fiske, and is occupied as offices (R. G. Dun & Co.) while the row of buildings, Nos. 13, 9 and 11, Nos. 7 and 5, were occupied respectively by Joseph Lawson, commission merchant, Lockart & Haldane, dry goods dealers, Childs & Hamilton, boot and shoe manufacturers, and R. A. Hoskin & Co., auctioneers. Hoskins & Cleland were in this building at one period. At No. 3 Robert Davis & Co. had a wholesale grocery after their removal from the south-west corner of King and Bay streets, and the corner building was occupied by the Royal Insurance office, with Mr. F. H. Heward as manager. Legal firms occupied the upper floors, and White & Co., real lace dealers, a building directly east of the Royal offices.

There have been few changes on this street since 1875. The change of the Cooper's Arms has already been noted. The other buildings are the re-modelled buildings of 1850. At No. 8, the second door east of the American Express lane was the warehouse of Shaw & Turnbull, who in 1850 had a wholesale dry goods business the late John Shaw, afterwards an official assignee, being the senior partner. The changes on the south side have already been referred to.

In 1856 the Quebec Bank was at No. 15, and John Macdonald at No. 17, the same buildings occupied in 1870 by R. Jordan & Co., and the Molsons Bank. John Campbell, the boot maker, had the cottage to the west of Molsons, and the Ontario Bank corner was vacant. Crossing Scott street, John Murphy had the Cooper's Arms, and the large red brick building, now offices, one door west of the Western Assurance Company, was at one time the Western Hotel, kept by John Murphy, another, the Wellington Hotel, removed to this house from the north-west corner of Wellington and Church streets, Russell Inglis being proprietor. Mr. Inglis, since dead, while a boy, and in business in Edinburgh, informed the writer that he had often waited on and talked to Sir Walter Scott. This hotel building was in 1856 occupied as offices. West of it was the firm of Bowes (J. G.) & Hall, in dry goods, William Ross & Co., grocers, and Shaw, Turnbull & Co., in dry goods, the Bank of British North America having its offices on the ground floor of the corner, and general offices upstairs.

In 1856 Wellington street on the south side and west of Church had the Grand Trunk Telegraph Company in the Coffin block, which had Miller & Foulds and others in business. There were no warehouses on the south side to Scott street, the only brick building being the unoccupied rear part of the North American Hotel on Front street, afterwards built upon by John Macdonald. Luke Cutler, at No. 20, on the south-east corner of Scott street, had the Steamboat Hotel. Across Scott street, where the G. N. W. Telegraph offices stand was Graham's frame building, a boarding house, and later with offices, one being that of Henry Hope, of The Old Countryman newspaper. Taylor & Stevenson were wholesale dry goods merchants, in a brick row still standing to the west, and Duncan MacDonnell, wholesale grocer, were the only business establishments to Yonge street, Rollo Campbell's printing office being at the corner now occupied by the Royal Insurance Company.

FRONT, WELLINGTON AND CHURCH

A Corner That Reminds Old Residents of the Days of Weller's Stage Line—The Coffin Block.

The passenger traffic down Church street to Cooper's wharf as early as 1798 to 1805 was a small percentage of what it was in 1845-55, when Maitland's wharf which succeeded the Cooper's of pioneer days, was the landing place of freight steamers and schooners and was the city side of the Island traffic, for it was from Maitland's wharf that the old horse boat and the first steam ferry ran to Privat's Hotel, which stood where now the eastern channel runs through the Toronto Island. William Cooper was the first Freemason initiated in York, and his life and business have been dealt with in another landmark. Robert Maitland, after his wharfage days, went to Port Arthur, where he died a year or two ago.

The picture gives on the right the north-west corner of Front and Church streets, at W. R. Griffiths & Company's warehouse, and the north-west corner of Wellington and Church streets, where the Bank of Toronto stands, while the centre of the view shows the Coffin block and the Dominion Telegraph Company's office. To the left is the south side of Wellington street, and a slight view of the same street west to Yonge street.

No. 62 was occupied by W. & R. Griffiths & Co., as wholesale grocers. This building was erected about 1845. On the Church street side was an entrance to the Ontario Chambers or offices, which occupied the upper floors. In 1849-53 this was the Royal Exchange Restaurant, kept by a coloured man named Snow, and a large hall on the first floor was used for political meetings. The buildings to the east are known as Manning's Block, being the property of Alexander Manning.

The Bank of Toronto is on the site of the Wellington Hotel, a once popular hostelry of York and Toronto. It was the Ontario House in 1822, with Wm. Campbell as proprietor, and later became the Wellington Hotel. One door west, in a roughcast house, was the original residence of Wm. Cooper, of Cooper's Wharf. On a vacant space of nearly two hundred feet west of Cooper's was ground on which George Bernard's circus used to pitch its tent in the forties. This was before 1845. Mrs. Bernard was quite an equestrienne, and, consequently, a drawing card. The leading members of the company were Cadwallar Stone, Rockwell, Gossan, who played the clown, Frank Wilmot and Harry Bachelton, and a boy named Frank, an apprentice in the athlete business. Frank was "a clever youth," writes the late Alexander Jacques, in a letter dated 1889, "a good horseman and tumbler. In after years he was the champion somersault thrower of the world." "Frank," writes Mr. Jacques, "was a great favourite with Mrs. Washburn, the wife of Simon Washburn, a prominent barrister of York about 1825-39. Bernard made York his headquarters in the winter on this lot on the west side of which was a lane known as Kelly's lane, and which, prior to 1840, formed part of Henrietta street, which ran from Wellington street north through Market street (Colborne) to the south side of King, ending at the street line in front of Lawson's old stand. In the spring-time Bernard put his tents and waggons in order and moved on an annual tour through Upper Canada, which lasted for at least five months.

About 1855-57 a row of white brick buildings was erected on this site, in the east one of which was at that time the restaurant of Mark Ackerman, known for its handsome fittings and tempting viands, now the business house of S. Trees & Co. In 1872 No. 56 was occupied by S. W. Farrell, commission merchant; T. R. Wood, insurance agent, and Drysdale & Co., commission merchants. At No. 42 was James Young, produce dealer, and E. Bendelari & Co., importers, while Nos. 88 and 40 were occupied by John Morrison—afterwards of the British America Insurance—the wholesale grocer, now in banking at Victoria street. The east corner of Change Alley was No. 36, the warehouse of the late W. Warwick, the wholesale stationer.

The centre of the picture shows the Coffin Block, in which were the original offices of the Dominion Telegraph Company. The lower portion, at the angle of the streets, was occupied as a coal office. The upper part of this building on Front street has been given in another landmark. On the Wellington street side, Mr. George Laidlaw, so long known in connection with the narrow gauge railways, had an office for years. During the days of the rebellion in the basement of this building was the restaurant of a genial old Scotchman named Bannerman, who did good service in 1837 in feeding the volunteers, who had assembled in the City Hall to repel the invaders in December of that year.

This spot was also prominent in the days of stage coaches, for in this building was the office of Weller's stage, which ran east between Toronto and Kingston. On the left-hand of the picture, just near the telegraph pole, was the stable, used by Weller for his horses. In later days the wide part of the street, east of Church and between that and the market, was used as a haymarket.

To go back to an earlier period in this landmark, we find that in 1856, in the building on Front street, one door west of the Coffin block, at No. 20, Mr. Alexander M. Morris and Robert Maitland, the wharfinger, had offices, while at No. 21, which was the beginning of the well-known block, George H. Wyatt, the freight agent; H. Boydell, the lumber measurer, and James R. Bradbury, the land agent, had offices.

In No. 21, for it was a building that extended down to the junction of Wellington with Front, and also through from Front to Wellington, were offices of leading firms. Hooker, Pridham & Co., of the Montreal Through Line, and Edwin Pridham, also in the freight business, had offices. In an upper floor of the same building was the Montreal Telegraph office, with Benjamin Toye as manager, and J. Dunn, C. Bradford and J. Henderson as operators. James Baine was on the same floor as a commission agent, and W. J. MacDonell & Co. were forwarders. Mr. MacDonell was French consul at Toronto up to the time of his death. Miller & Foulds were wholesale dry goods men, and Peter Morgan, whose residence on William, now Simcoe street, was afterwards occupied by Sir Oliver Mowat, was a produce dealer. Mr. Morgan's family was one of the best known in Toronto. One of his daughters married Mr. Strickland, of Peterboro', and another, Walter Strickland, the architect, of Toronto. Mr. Charles Morgan, the eldest son, is connected with the Merchants' Bank at Montreal. Mrs. Peter Morgan resides in Peterboro'. Andrew Drummond, the broker, had also an office in this building. T. C. Orchard was a commission merchant in the next room, and James Cotton, the contractor, afterwards owner of the Ottawa Times, had his business office in the Coffin block. Holcomb and Henderson, two names noted in the freight trade, were in the east end of the block, and the International Telegraph Company had its offices here, with J. D. Purkiss as manager. This company was afterwards the Dominion Telegraph Company. J. D. Thatcher and E. L. Herrington were the operators, and the small office at the east end of this peculiarly shaped building was the general stage office of William Weller.

In 1856 the north-west corner of Wellington and Church streets, where the Bank of Toronto stands, had the building formerly the Wellington Hotel. This building, a wooden one, had been converted into tenements. A coffee house was at the corner, and Henry King, a bricklayer, James Elwood, a steward on the lake steamers, Joseph Charbott, a tailor, and Mrs. Bell, mother of Mrs. Russell Inglis, resided in the building, which years before had been under the management of Mr. Inglis, before his connection with the Customs department. The vacant space, which earlier was a circus ground, was not built up in 1856, and Mark Ackerman had his restaurant in the east building of the white brick row that stands there to-day. Thomas Hutchinson, a prominent wholesale dry-goods house, occupied the western part of the row, to the east side of what is now Change alley, but was then Berczy street. This name was given in honour of the postmaster, who had his office and residence to the west of the street, at an earlier period. The Toronto Royal Exchange, with James Brown, jr., as secretary, was the next building west of Berczy street. It is now the east half of the Imperial Bank.

On the north-east corner of Front and Church streets, where W. R. Griffiths & Co. was in 1866, was occupied in 1856 by the restaurant of Mr. St.roud, and the barber shop of Thos. F. Cary, the polite Yonge street tonsorial artist of later days. Horace L. Forbes, afterwards of Forbes & Lowesborough and the People's Building Society, with Charles Stotesbury, as secretary, and R. C. Mainers were in this building. James Moodie had a saloon next door east, and Geo. Smith a bowling saloon or alley in the adjacent building.

The ground east of this was vacant. It is now occupied by Manning's block. In the row of brick buildings Mrs. Ann Diamond had the Telegraph hotel building, with numerous tenants, and at No. 38, Howland & Fitch were grocers, Gooderham, Howland & Co. were produce merchants, and A. M. Smith had a large crockery establishment. The corner had a veteran publican, William Steers, who kept the British Coffee House, named after the original house on the south-east corner of King and York streets.

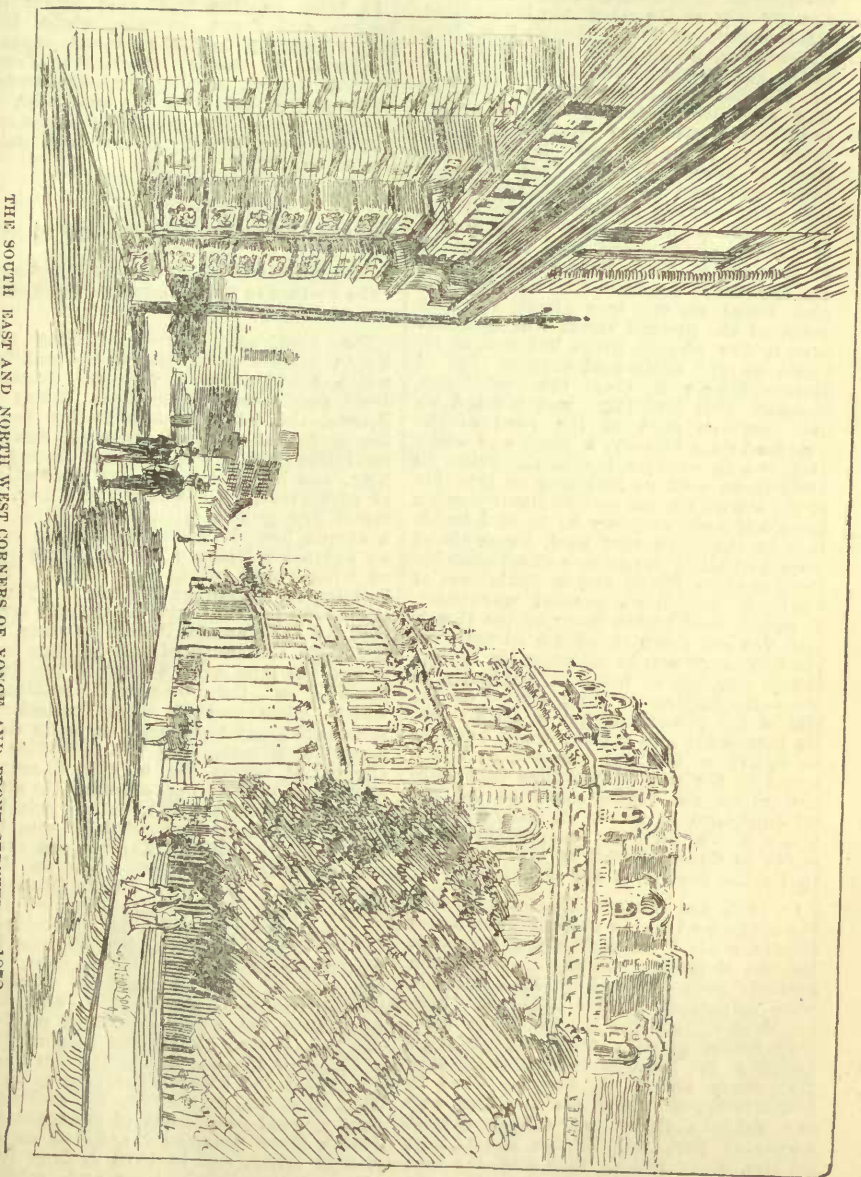

CHAPTER XIX.

A BIT OF FRONT STREET.

The North-west and South-east Corners of Front and Wellington Streets—Three or Four Well-Known Marts of Trade.

Looking at the picture which belongs to this landmark one can hardly realize that as late as 1870 the ground on the south side of Front street, beyond the Custom House, was vacant, and that, as one stood at the corner of Yonge and Front streets looking west, the most prominent building in view was the immense structure of Jacques & Hay, a few hundred feet south of the line of Front street, with lumber closely piled on the site of what is now the handsome row of mercantile buildings, which add so much to the fine appearance of the street. In this picture, taken in 1872, the tree on the right is at the corner of the Bank of Montreal, and was in the lawn which was an original part of the surroundings of the bank prior to the erection of the present building. The structure to the west, Nos. 4-12, is the handsome warehouse formerly of A. R. McMaster & Bros., the wholesale dry goods dealers, now the establishment of J. S. McMaster & Co., a building which can claim credit as being one of the handsomest structures upon the street, or, for that matter, in the city. At No. 14 Thomas Lailley manufactured clothing, and at No. 16 Robert McPhail had a wholesale stationery establishment. Mr. McPhail was originally in the retail line on King street at the south-east corner of Leader Lane in a red brick building, which was erected about seventy years ago and is still standing. At Nos. 18-20 west on Front street was Thompson & Burns' wholesale crockery establishment, and just beyond it, No. 24, was the old residence of Judge Jones, which, in 1872, was used as a Custom House after the destruction of the Custom House by fire. Nos. 32-4 were the wholesale bookselling establishment of James Campbell & Son, and at Nos. 36-40 Sessions, Cooper & Smith manufactured boots and shoes. In the old Baldwin house at the corner of Bay and Front streets, at the north-west corner, were the offices of the Toronto and Nipissing and the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railways. This house, in 1864, was used as a military hospital, and prior to that date as Ellah's Hotel. There were piles of lumber on the corner of Front and Bay and also the factory of Jacques & Hay. Before the days of the Esplanade the shore line between Bay and Yonge streets was about 100 feet south of the present street line of Front street. The picture gives but one warehouse on the south-east corner, that of George Michie & Co., the wholesale grocers. This building was erected on the northern part of the yard of the Free-land Soap factory, a picture of which is given in another landmark. Prior to 1860 there were no buildings on this side of the street, for one or two small wooden erections could scarcely be termed buildings in the sense now used. From about 1836 to 1848 a large tree stood opposite the American Hotel, and a little east of Smith & Keighley's present warehouse. It was a well known mark on the street, and was cut down in 1853-4 at the time the Esplanade was being built. Mr. George Michie commenced business originally in the early forties on King street, on the site of the present Michie & Co.'s store. He then went into the wholesale business as Ogilvy & Co., and removed to Yonge street in the row of buildings that were erected in the fifties south of the old establishment of M. & L. Samuel, Benjamin & Co. Then he removed to Front street as George Michie & Co., and eventually the firm went out of business.

In 1856 the Bank of Montreal was at the north-west corner of Yonge and Front streets, while brick buildings to the west, for the McMaster building had not been erected, were occupied by John Watson, wine merchant; Charles Robertson, lumber dealer, and the Grand Trunk Railway offices were in the brick residence formerly the house of Judge Jones. Mrs. Muttelbery and T. A. Stayner lived in houses west of the Jones dwelling, and the Baldwin House, on the north-east corner of Bay, was Ellah's Hotel, kept by Mrs. Mary Ellah. This was the best known private hotel in Toronto in early days. Mrs. Ellah prior to 1856 had a similar establishment on King street, where the red brick row that was originally Macdonald's Hotel, and afterwards, when rebuilt (1855) was Romain Buildings.

In 1856, on the south-east corner of Yonge and Front streets, where the Michie building, now the Canada Rubber Company's warehouse, stands, was Free-land & Taylor, candle manufacturers, while east of this was the coal yard, of H. G. R. Fripp. The ground east to some distance past Scott street had only wooden buildings.

CHAPTER XX.

YONGE STREET NORTH OF KING.

A Corner Which Has Seen Many Changes—
The Picture in This Landmark was Taken

The south-east corner of King and Yonge streets and the brick building which stood thereon was the original dry goods establishment of Betley & Brown, the late Matthew Betley being the senior partner. It was afterwards established under the name of Betley & Kay, and later on, after the dissolution of partnership of the late John Kay, in retail dry goods, with the addition of a carpet branch, which now forms such an extensive business on the north side of King street west, near Bay. The building on the corner of King and Yonge made way for that now on the site occupied by the Canada Pacific railway offices. To the south of this building and across the lane were a row of buildings known as the Commercial buildings, which, when erected, were considered substantial and handsome. In early days Lovell & Gibson, who had an office in the fifties across the way in Capreol's auction room building, occupied the store directly across the lane as a printing establishment, and in 1872 it was the printing office of the Express, an evening newspaper, published for a few months by J. B. Cook. Phillip Brown & Co., bankers, subsequently occupied this building, which was No. 67, and also A. Lovell & Co., printers. No. 65 was the warehouse of Andrew Henderson, the auctioneer, who commenced business across the way about 1850, and Nos. 63-5 were the wholesale house of Buntin Bro. & Co., afterwards Buntin, Reid & Co., now the site of the Traders Bank. In 1874-5 the Liberal newspaper, under John Cameron, was at No. 67, and when that journal passed out of existence Mr. Josiah Bray occupied No. 67 as an exchange office, and in 1876 J. Ross Robertson rented this building and commenced the issue of The Evening Telegram. The building on the south-east side of Yonge and Colborne streets, built for Ross Mitchell and occupied afterwards by the Bank of Commerce, has already been noted in another landmark.

On the west side of Yonge street, at the south-west corner in 1872 was the retail dry goods establishment of W. H.

ristler, and John Turner, photographer. Mr. Turner was afterwards proprietor of the Ferry line, and his wife is now the lessee of the Turner Baths on Toronto Island. Richards (Hon. Stephen) & Smith (J. F.), barristers, were also in the up-

THE EAST AND WEST SIDES OF YONGE STREET, FROM KING SOUTH, IN 1856-72.

Dow & Co., and upstairs the office of T. D. Ledyard, the barrister. There were also in this building the offices of F. W. Munro, barrister, now of Chicago, McDougall & Bros., lumber dealers, Ferguson & Ferguson, barristers, R. W. Parkinson, barrister, S. J. Vankoughnet, bar-per portion of this building. At No. 72 Hurd, Leigh & Co. were China and glass merchants, whose factory was in the rear. At No. 79 John Robertson, Son & Co. had a dry goods establishment in the building now St. Charles restaurant. The buildings from the corner of King down to No. 70 were erected between 1835-37, the first occupant of the new row being John Robertson. In 1837 Mr. Robertson was connected with a business establishment in the east end of the city near Church street, and when he entered the wholesale trade on Yonge street his friends thought he was going too far west, the more especially as cases of goods had to be hauled up three stone steps while being taken into the warehouse. Nos. 68-4, the white brick buildings at the north-west corner of Melinda and Yonge streets, were occupied by T. May & Co., and Gillespie & Co., the wholesale furriers.

The principal changes on these two blocks are the erection of the Dominion Bank, on the corner of King and Yonge streets, the late Henry Irving being the architect, and the Webb building at the north-west corner, and the Globe building on the south-west corner of Yonge and Melinda streets, on the site of the original Ross Mitchell warehouse of forty years ago. On the east side of the street part of the commercial business has given way to the building occupied by the Traders' Bank, erected by S. F. McKinnon, while the north part of this row has been re-modelled and reconstructed the upper portions being used for offices.

In 1856 the buildings on the west side of Yonge street, south of King, were occupied by W. H. Dow at the corner of King street, while No. 43, south, on Yonge street, was unoccupied, and Andrew Henderson, the auctioneer, was at No. 41; John Robertson, in dry goods, at No. 39, and Lovell & Gibson, printers, at No. 35.

On the east side of Yonge street, from the corner of King, Betley & Kay's establishment extended along the east side of Yonge street to a lane, and in the rear portion of Betley's building Oliver Mowat (Sir Oliver) had his offices as a barrister, and John Helliwell was in the same profession on the same floor. The three buildings south of Betley's lane were the "Commercial Buildings." Lovell & Gibson and The Evening Telegram (1870) were in this building. At No. 1 of this row Henderson Bros. were in wholesale dry goods. Alexander Henderson & John Henderson composed the firm. Alexander Henderson afterwards retired and was an alderman of Toronto, and John was the senior partner of the firm of Henderson & Bostwick, a firm which has since gone out of business. In No. 2 of the row R. Campbell & Co., a Montreal firm, had a carpet warehouse, and at No. 4 J. C. Mayer was a furrier. This building was afterwards occupied by Buntin, Reid & Co., and is now the site of the Traders' Bank. Andrew Henderson, auctioneer, who years before had been on the opposite side of the street, occupied Campbell's building in 1876-78. The buildings south from Colborne street, commencing with that of Ross, Mitchell & Co., have been given in another landmark.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE SOUTH END OF YONGE ST.

The First Blocks on the East and West Sides of the Great Thoroughfare That Runs Thirty Miles Into York County.

Seventy years ago Yonge street at its south end was not so important a business centre, even in Little York, as it was in the late fifties, in the greater Toronto, or as, of course, it is to-day, in the commercial metropolis of Ontario. From 1800 to 1830 the business centre of the two was east of Church street, and the marine traffic was for the most part at the foot of the streets east of and including Church street; indeed, it was not until 1845, when Yonge street wharf, and Brown's wharf, at the foot of Scott street, commanded the lake travel, and offered a landing place for the steamers that plied up and down the lake.

Yonge street was central enough in 1838 for the post-office, built on the site of the present Bank of Montreal. The post-office was a building that, if not architecturally beautiful, drew daily to its doors the small mercantile community that formed then the nucleus of the commercial interests that flourish to-day.

The right of the picture, which was drawn in 1872, shows just the north-east corner of the American Hotel, a hostelry that had the call for travelling long before and even during the early days of the Queen's and Rossin Houses. Mr. David Walker was the proprietor of the American in 1872.

The first door north, No. 35, was the warehouse of H. Shorey & Co., clothiers, a Montreal firm doing business in Toronto, while No. 37, a tall building, improved by the re-fronting of an old three storey building, was occupied by Joseph Wey & Co., hatters. At No. 39 G. W. Dunn was in the hoop skirt trade, when that useful article of female under-gear was popular, and Hodgson & Boyd, at No. 41, sold wholesale fancy and general dry goods. R. H. Gray & Co., were at No. 43, in gents' furnishings, and at No. 45 Wm. Myles & Son sold coal, giving a full 2,000 pounds to the ton, while Brayley (James) & Hay were commission merchants, and at the corner F. H. Heward presided over the business of the Royal Insurance Company, in a building erected for that purpose. Crossing Wellington street and keeping still on the east side was the cut stone building of the Bank of British North America, and in No. 51, Childs & Co. manufactured boots and shoes, and at No. 53 Alfred Dredge did business in the wholesale paper line, with the addition of a bindery and an envelope factory. Mr. Dredge removed from Toronto some years ago and is now in prosperous business in New York. At No. 55, J. Y. Vickers had his Northern railway express office, and upstairs as A. W. Russell, the watchman, had a branch of his brother's (Liverpool) business in that line. Morphy, Morphy & Winchester were barristers upstairs. The Messrs. Morphy are dead, but Mr. Winchester hears motions and gives just and prompt rulings as Master in Osgoode Hall. Nos. 55-57 also had the American Express office, and as manager John D. Irwin, who has just passed away, while George Virtue, the agent of a London publishing house, was also upstairs at No. 57. At the south-east corner of Yonge and Colborne streets the building was originally put up by Ross Mitchell & Co., and in 1872 occupied by the Bank of Commerce.

On the west side of Yonge street, and at its north-west corner, was the Bank of Montreal, in the building which preceded the present palatial structure. At No. 32 Bailey & Bunting were grocers. Mr. Bunting was afterwards of the Mail newspaper, and died in January, 1896. At No. 34, Bryce, McMurich & Co. had a wholesale dry goods house. They afterwards removed to Bay street, near Wellington, and finally retired from business. At No. 36 Moffatt Bros. were in wholesale dry goods as successors of the old firm of Moffatt, Murray & Co., and at No. 38 Thomas Walls & Co. were in the same line. At No. 40 Peach & Goulding had a large wholesale trade in millinery. The Messrs. Goulding are in business to-day in the same trade on Bay street. Stalker & Ross, two careful Scotchmen, were in dry goods at No. 42, and David Arnott also at No. 44. J. G. Joseph & Co. were jewellers at the south-west corner of Yonge and Wellington. The father of this firm was in business in the thirties on King street east of the Leader Lane. Old residents will remember his pleasant face and his gold spectacles. The firm has since gone out of business. On the north-west corner of Yonge and Wellington streets, at Nos. 48-50, was the most enterprising of Toronto's wholesale jewellers of his day, Mr. Robert Wilkes, a gentleman whose unfortunate death by drowning was regretted by so many. At No. 52 S. H. & J. Moss, a Montreal firm, had a Toronto branch in clothing. At No. 54 S. Davison was in jewellery, and at No. 56 McLean (Daniel) & Craig were in wholesale leather. At No. 58 M. & L. Samuel were in metal and hardware. The firm is now M. L. Samuel & Benjamin, on Front street. The building, No. 58, on Yonge street, was in 1844 No. 29, and in 1846 this building was occupied by the late George Brown as the Globe office. It is about thirty feet south of the present office of the Globe, at the south-west corner of Yonge and Melinda streets. In 1872 N. & F. Rooney were at No. 60, the old store of Messrs. Perin, and at No. 62 were Hughes Bros., in a building that in the forties was occupied by Ross, Mitchell & Co., prior to their removal to the opposite south-east corner. Crossing Melinda street, at No. 64 J. Gillespie & Co. were in hats and furs, and Thomas May & Co., of Montreal, in wholesale fancy goods. This warehouse occupied the site of Capreol's auction room, 1836. At Nos. 68-70 George Brown had the St. Charles restaurant, in the warehouse formerly occupied as No. 39 by the late John Robertson, and at No. 72 Bacon & Phillips were wholesale china merchants, and W. H. Dow & Co. were at the corner where the Dominion Bank building now stands.

Going back forty years in the history of this landmark may not be uninteresting to old residents, who can recall faces and localities that have always been alive in its different lines.

In 1856 N. F. Pearson was proprietor of the American Hotel, and at No. 6, one door north, Elizabeth Fawcett had a smaller house, called the "Toronto Hotel." At No. 8 James Girvin was a baker and confectioner, succeeding Mr. Maitland, a pioneer in the same trade. Thomas Lailey occupied No. 10 as a wholesale clothing house. He afterwards moved to Front street west, near Yonge, and at No. 12 W. F. Langlois was in the wholesale wine trade. E. R. Paul & Co. were wholesale shoemen at No. 14, and at No. 16, one door south of the present Royal Insurance corner, Duncan MacDonell was a wholesale grocer. In earlier years Mr. MacDonell was a partner of Mr. J. F. Smith, as grocers, on King street, east of Leader lane. At the south-east corner, where the Royal office now stands, was No. 18, with Rollo Campbell, as Government printer, as occupant. Here Wellington street intersected with the Bank of British North America in its present location.

YONGE STREET, EAST AND WEST, FROM FRONT TO KING, 1872.

At No. 24, on the site of the Commercial Travellers' building of to-day, C. J. Houghton was an auctioneer, and at the corner of Colborne, Ross, Mitchell & Co. were in wholesale dry goods.

In 1856, on the north-west corner of Yonge and Front streets, was the Bank of Montreal, with Wm. Wilson, as cashier, and at No. 3 Wm. McMaster (afterwards Senator) in dry goods, with Bryce, McMurrich & Co. at No. 5, and Moffat, Murray & Co. at No. 7, and Gilmor & Coulson at No. 9, all in the same line of trade. No. 9 had also George A. Pyper, a wholesale grocer, a citizen who lost his life through an accident while bathing at the Island, and at No. 11 Isaac C. Gilmor was a wholesale dry goods merchant. The south-west corner of Yonge and Wellington was the public house known as the Argyle Hotel, kept by a Scotchman—a prominent character in Toronto, named McNab. He claimed descent from the chief of the clan, and was a popular man with his patrons. The City Bank of Montreal was on the north-west corner, where Robert Wilkes was in later years. Mr. Hugh Woodside was cashier. He afterwards organized the Royal Canadian Bank. At No. 24 Charles B. Jarvis was a merchant. In a fire that took place in this block late in the fifties Mr. Jarvis, while trying to save his property, injured his eyes, and ever afterwards had to wear smoked glasses. His daughter, an accomplished singer, after studying at Milan, died while comparatively a young woman. At No. 26 Score & Hall were wholesale clothiers, J. F. Score and William Hall being the partners. Mr. Score is the father of the Messrs. Score on King street west, and resides in this city. Mr. Hall subsequently was of the firm of Bowes (J. G.) and Hall, on the south-east corner of King and Church streets. At No. 27 A. Ogilvie & Co. were grocers. George Michie & Co. succeeded this firm. At No. 29, the building of M. L. Samuel & Benjamin in the later years, was occupied by P. J. O'Neil, a popular wholesale dry goods man, and at No. 31 W. L. Perrin & Co. were in the same business. The O'Neil building was, in the forties, No. 29, and the office of the Globe newspaper. The corner of Melinda street, where the Globe office stands, R. D. McPherson & Co.'s, was a wholesale grocery establishment. They afterwards were in retail in the Rossin block, at the corner of King and York streets. The McPherson building was, prior to 1855, occupied by Ross, Mitchell & Co. At No. 35, where the Webb building stands, was the old office of F. C. Capreol, its south end being occupied in 1855 by Joseph Henry, the accountant, and Lovell & Gibson, printers. In the south end of this building a paper known as the Canadian Punch had its offices about 1850. John Robertson, in wholesale dry goods, was at No. 35, and Andrew Henderson, the auctioneer, at No. 37, the north buildings being unoccupied in 1856, and W. H. Dow & Co. being on the corner of King.

CHAPTER XXII.

TORONTO ST. AND KING ST. EAST.

A Central Business Section—One Which Has Had Few Changes in Its Buildings—A Busy Spot for Traffic for the Last Fifty Years.

The picture in this landmark gives a section of both sides of King street, from Toronto street east and west to King street, and the south side of King street from the old Leader office west to R. Walker & Sons', with other buildings further west in the distance.

The left of the picture shows the Leader office in 1870, under the proprietorship of James Beatty, the principal part of the building being occupied as offices, while the editorial and printing departments were in a large brick building in the rear, a building which has since been converted into shops facing on Leader lane. At No. 61 was the St. Nicholas Restaurant, occupying the building which had originally been erected by the late Charles Robertson, jr., as a retail dry goods establishment. Mr. Robertson was the youngest brother of John Robertson, wholesale merchant, on Yonge street. The building in its day was the most attractive on King street, and was about the first new building from 1840-51 in the block from Leader lane to Yonge street on the south side of King. At No. 59 John Catto & Co. had a dry goods establishment. Since that time both Nos. 61 and 59 have been torn down, and the large building now occupied by John Catto & Co., in the same line of business, has been erected. King street west, No. 57, was the auction room of F. W. Coate & Co., a firm which succeeded Wakefield & Coate, auctioneers, one of the pioneer auctioneers of Toronto being the late Wm. Wakefield. At No. 55, Coleman & Co. were hatters. Mr. Coleman was a bright, clever mechanic, an Englishman, who knew all that man could know about the making of hats and caps. "Hats That are Hats," was a familiar sign over his doorway. Mr. George W. Warner subsequently succeeded to the business. At No. 53 Robert Beatty & Co. were money brokers, and W. J. Armstrong, the photographer, was upstairs. At 51 1-2 George Michael, the optician, had an establishment, and at

KING STREET NORTH AND SOUTH AND THE SOUTH END OF TORONTO STREET IN 1872.

No. 51 Janes, Brayley & Newcombe, the dry goods men, who did an extensive, high-class trade. Mr. S. H. Janes being the senior partner, with Mr. James Brayley and Mr. Henry Newcombe. The firm was afterwards Janes & Newcombe. At No. 49 in 1873 Merrick Bros. were in the dry goods business, but later this building was occupied by Glover Harrison as China Hall. At No. 43 James E. Ellis & Co. had their jewellery establishment, and in a small shop between No. 43 and 39, known as No. 41, James Spooner was popular with those who wanted pipes and tobaccos. At No. 34 Notman & Fraser, photographers, had their place of business, in a building, which, prior to 1850 had been occupied by Charles Robertson as a retail dry goods house prior to his removal farther east. Nos. 33-5-7 are still the large house of Robert Walker & Sons, dry goods merchants, while No. 31 had McDonnough & James in the carpet line, and No. 25 had William Arthurs & Co., retail dry goods. At Nos. 21-23 were W. A. Murray & Co., in dry goods, as successors to Wylie & Murray, and at Nos. 17-19 Copp, Clark & Co., the publishers, had a large retail bookstore. In this building years before was published the British Colonist, under Hugh Scobie, and the shop was occupied by Scobie & Balfour, who were also publishers and booksellers. No. 15 was and is the music store of A. & S. Nordheimer, and No. 13 had William Bryden in drugs, as successor to Francis Richardson, who has retired from business and is still hale and hearty. In No. 11 W. L. Wilkinson & Co. were jewellers, and at No. 9 Charles Potter was an optician. Mr. Wilkinson is now with Ambrose Kent & Sons, 156 Yonge street, old 103. At No. 7 Charles and W. Walker were merchant tailors, and Lash & Co. were jewellers in the London and Paris House, afterwards rebuilt and occupied by Willing & Williamson as a bookstore, and now Mr. Cousineau's establishment, known as "The Bon Marche," while Henry Graham & Co., the carpet men, were at No. 3, the present shop of Renfrew & Co., and John Kay was at the corner.

On the right hand side, at the north-east corner of Toronto and King streets, at Nos. 52-4, was the large shop of Rice Lewis & Co., to-day probably one of the best known firms in Canada. The building directly to the east was part and parcel of the same shop, and was known as the Birmingham House. The buildings east of this have been given in another landmark.

Directly to the north of this building and 78 feet from the street line of King street is the south wall of the jail of 1834-41. About forty feet from King and thirty feet east of Toronto street, on the site of the Rice Lewis building, was erected the scaffold on which the patriots Lount and Matthews suffered in 1838. The south front referred to was exposed four years ago, when the north-east corner buildings of Rice Lewis & Son were being torn down and re-built. A portion of the front, including the window through which the patriots walked to death, may be seen from the small yard in rear of Walton's barber shop, on the north side of King street.

On the north-west corner of Toronto and King streets was the banking house of H. J. Morse & Co., who were financial brokers, while also in this building Alexander Davidson was manager of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. The British American Commercial College, the pioneer college in that line, was started in this building, some years before, under Mr. Bates. The building west on King street was the shop of Mr. James Bain, the bookseller, No. 46, and at No. 44 Edwin Harris & Co., were oil men and chemists. At No. 42 the Stock Exchange had its first offices, and at No. 40, the building now occupied by W. H. Elliott, the Dominion Bank was started. At No. 38 Messrs. Pellatt & Osler were stock-brokers, and the buildings between No. 36 and No. 32 were occupied by men in different lines of business. This was originally the John Harrington hardware building. At No. 30 were the financial brokers, Forbes & Lownsbrough. This building was originally known as the Leslie Bros. building, and was erected before 1836. Alongside of No. 30 was a short lane, known as the Globe lane, and at Nos. 26-28 was the Globe Printing establishment, erected in the early sixties. The Globe removed from the Dallas building on King street west, near Jordan, to this new building. No. 24 was the retail hardware shop of P. Patterson & Son. Rice Lewis & Co.'s present establishment occupies the site of the Leslie building. Victoria street was opened to King street over the site of the Globe building and its lane, and the Central Canada Loan now occupies the site of P. Patterson & Son's, No. 24. The rest of the buildings up to Yonge street have been given in another landmark of an earlier period.

Looking at the north side of the street, Rice Lewis & Co.'s building has been torn down and re-constructed, the lower portion being occupied as offices and the upper portion as chambers for barristers and agents.

The Morse and British American College building has made way for the Quebec Bank, but the buildings on this side, west to Yonge, with the exception of two or three, are about the same that they were years ago.

On the south side the principal changes are the Catto building, the Golden Lion, and the buildings occupied by Renfrew & Co. and the C. P. R. All along King street east, from Church to Yonge streets, while a few of the buildings have been torn down and re-built, nearly two-thirds have been re-modelled in their exterior, and a small number are as they were fifty years ago.

CHAPTER XXIII.

CORNER OF KING AND BAY STS.

A Section of King Street West Which Has Around It Some Interesting Spots—Thirty Years Ago in a New Busy Thoroughfare.

Bay street up to the sixties was more of a residence street than any of the short streets of Toronto, running north from the Bay to Queen. The rows of brick buildings on both sides of the street which formerly were the homes of merchants and business men, have in many cases been altered to suit business requirements, while not a few have been torn down to make room for modern structures. Yet Bay street was always a prominent thoroughfare from King, and mechanics and vessel men coming from King street east and west and north to Queen street, used it freely, for Front street, near Bay, before the days of the Esplanade, and in the palmy days of the Jacques & Hay factory was a fairly busy spot.

The scene in the picture gives the four corners of King and Bay streets in 1866, although, as far as buildings are concerned, with the exception of the Cavthra residence on the north-east corner, all the other houses shown east and west, on both sides of the street, were up from 1840.

At the south-east corner was the three-storey brick building of Jacques & Hay, occupying about forty feet of the King street front, and running down a hundred and fifty feet on Bay street. The King street front was the wareroom and the Bay street extension was for packing and shipping. The factory was at the foot of Bay street, west of the west line of the present street, and directly north of the line of Esplanade street. Years later the firm moved its warerooms east to the south-west corner of King and Jordan streets, on the Bank of Commerce site, and the buildings on the corner of King and Bay streets were torn down by the Hon. John Ross estate, and a large white brick building erected, now occupied by J. M. Treble, the rear on Bay street being also rebuilt with two shops, now occupied by J. Maloney & Son and J. G. Ramsay & Co.

At No. 51, the first shop east of Jacques & Hay on King street, was the gentlemen's furnishing store of D. S. & B. Adams. The firm was really the first exclusively in this line of business in Toronto. The buildings from that of Adams to that of Hooper & Co. were two-storey frame buildings. In a small, narrow, ten-foot shop R. S. Thompson, at No. 49 1-2, had a news store. The space occupied by this building was originally a lane leading under the second storey of No. 49, but it was built up and converted into a shop. Mr. Thompson now resides in the North-west Territories.

At No. 49 James Park, now of the St. Lawrence market, had a provision store, and at No. 47 Philip Jacobi dealt in leather, while the next building, a brick one, was No. 43, occupied by Hooper & Co. This house, however, is not in the photograph from which this landmark is given.

Ten years before this date (1866) Jacques & Hay were at the corner of Bay, while Thomas Potter, a paper-hanger, and Mrs. Potter, a shirtmaker, were at No. 40, one door east. James Myers, a fruit man, was at No. 38, and Scandritt & Robinson were bootmakers at No. 36. Mr. Robinson was afterwards in business on Yonge street with Gillyat, Robinson & Hall, in boots and shoes. He always had a polite "How do you do?" for all his friends. John Higgins, the bailiff, was also at No. 36, and McKeand & Thompson, the cabinet makers, were at No. 34, the building now occupied by Hooper & Co.

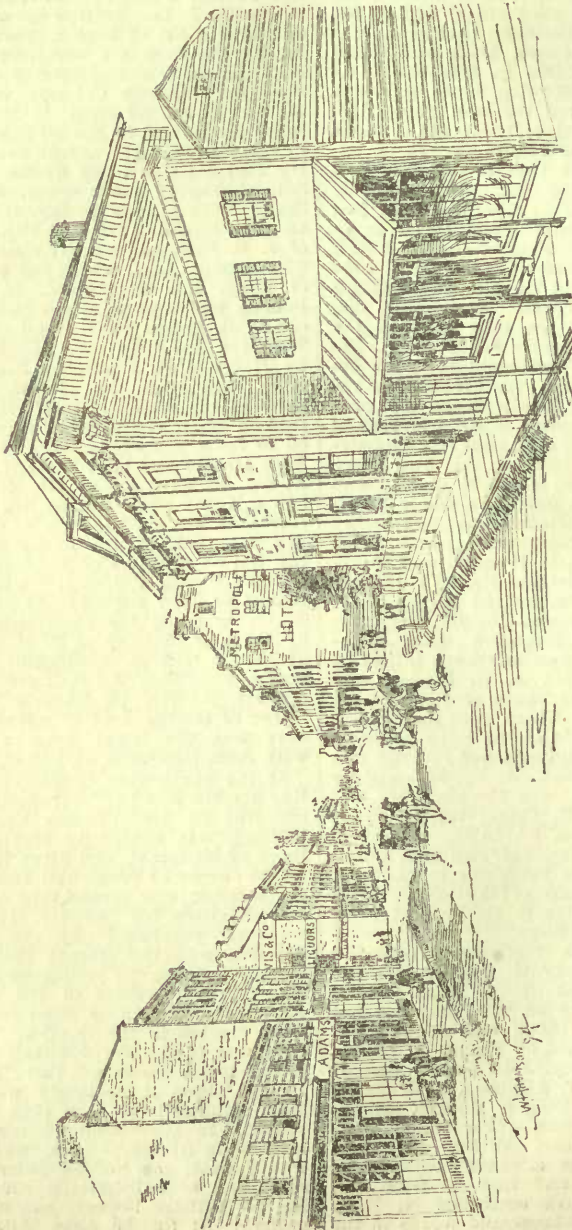

At the south-west corner of Bay and King streets, No. 55, stood the brick building occupied by R. Davis & Co. as grocers. It ran 57 feet back on the west side of Bay street. In 1879 this building was torn down and The Telegram building was erected. One door west of R. Davis & Co. was No. 57, the baby linen shop of John H. Swann. Next was a row of white brick buildings, occupied as follows:—No. 59, Jno. Goedike, who first sold mineral waters in Toronto; No. 61 was vacant, and C. S. Hayman, a merchant tailor, was at No. 63. At No. 65 Charles Bender, a well known tobacconist, did business, and the last of the row, No. 67, was occupied by John Seels, an Englishman, who kept a restaurant noted for its cleanliness and comfort. A row of two storey frame buildings occupied the space west on this side of the street up to the store of George Harding, the plumber, at No. 77. At No. 69 Samuel Hammond sold bread, and at No. 71 Charles Bansley, a Scotch resident, had a fancy goods and variety shop. At No. 73 Edward Dack had a boot and shoe store, and at No. 75 D. W. Smith, the dyer, held sway. The descendants of Messrs. Dack and Smith are still in business in this block. At No. 77 George Harding made out bills for all who desired the well known line "plumber and helper." He did a large business, and was candid enough on one occasion to admit that a plumber's bill was "past finding out." The east entrance to the Royal Lyceum was just west of No. 77, and across this lane the entrance was the shop of Hood & Laird, the picture dealers. Years before 1866 J. E. Pell occupied the Harding building as a "gallery of art." In the dim distance of the picture may be seen the Romain buildings, erected by C. E. Romain in 1855. These buildings were designed by Kaufmann, the architect of the Masonic Hall and Rossin House, and considered the best piece of architecture of their day and are even now much admired. The upper floors of this row were occupied by C. E. Gzowski & Co., and D. L. Macpherson, now Sir Casimir Gzowski and Sir D. L. Macpherson, as railway engineers and contractors, and Hon. J. H. Cameron, S. B. Harman and Huson Murray, as barristers. No. 71 Henry Benary sold pianos, and at No. 83 J. W. Randall had a saloon. No. 89 was occupied by Bernard Saunders (Ald. Saunders), who carried on merchant tailoring, and at No. 93 Mr. A. K. Boomer was agent for the Fairbanks scales, and for large flour mills. There were four double stores on each side of the main entrance of the Romain buildings, and in 1866 two of them were vacant. At No. 95, one door west of the row, was the shop, No. 95, occupied by P. M. Clark, the merchant tailor, and at No. 97 Alex. Gemmell, while at No. 99 Geo. Coleman was a confectioner, and this brings us to the west and main entrance of the old Royal Lyceum, which was in the rear of these King street buildings.

In 1856 No. 55, the present office of The Evening Telegram, was No. 44, and Robert Davis was at the same corner. The first building on this site was the Dennis cottage (1800), and about 1840 a building occupied by French & Wiman as a chair factory. John Swann was at No. 46, and W. T. Atkinson, a druggist, at No. 48, while Hoig & Harens, tailors, were at No. 50. Hoig was a bright, well-informed Scotchman. At No. 52 was Joseph Stovel, the merchant tailor. The name of Stovel and that of Gibb Co., whom P. M. Clark succeeded on King street west, were household words in the best homes of Upper Canada. Indeed, Gibb & Co. were in business in Montreal over a century ago, and are still to the fore to-day. Going further west in 1856, at No. 56 J. Lander was an upholsterer, and Edwin Smith kept a restaurant at No. 58. Smith was a small-sized, affable Englishman, who had lots of custom. In those days George Coleman was at No. 60, and at No. 62 W. & H. Bansley sold fancy goods, and at No. 60 Edward Dack, Latham & Co., dyers, and Charles Bansley also dealt in fancy goods. At No. 62 Samuel Turner made shoes, and David Smith, with his son to-day, is a dyer of no mean repute. Then J. C. Pell, a brother of J. E. Pell, had an art store, and No. 66 across a lane, which led to the rear of King, was unoccupied. In 1856 the Romain buildings were not built, and the old brick houses that stood on the site were the buildings once (1846) occupied by Macdonald's Hotel. At No. 68 J. B. Riley kept hotel. He afterwards had a hotel in the present Queen's Hotel buildings on Front street, after which he moved to the south-west corner of King and York streets and kept the Revere House. At No. 70 King street the Misses Burns had a fancy store and at No. 72 Joseph Harkness, the old bandmaster of the 71st Regiment, sold pianos. In the same building were the offices of the Ontario, Simcoe & Huron Railway, with Alfred Bruel as chief engineer. At No. 74 Gibb & Co. were in the shop now occupied by the new building of P. M. Clark, and at No. 76 Mrs. M. A. Higgins sold fancy goods, and Mrs. J. F. Lyon was a modiste. At No. 78 Thomas McConkey, father of George, had a restaurant, and next was the Royal Lyceum entrance, with John Nickinson as lessee.

At the north-west corner of King and Bay streets was the Metropolitan Hotel, occupied by Mr. Thomas Brown. This building was originally erected by the Bank of Montreal, and after its removal to the corner of Front and Yonge streets, the building was turned into apartments and chambers for lawyers. It was subsequently purchased by the late John Riordan, and the present Mail building erected thereon. In pulling down the old structure the vaults of the old bank were discovered in as good condition as when erected in the thirties. The buildings west of the Metropolitan were three storey brick. Some are there to-day, although those immediately west of the Mail building have been torn down and rebuilt. In 1866 Henry Lindsay had a fruit shop at No. 50 1-2, while No. 52 was vacant. At No. 54 James B. Marshall had a hairdressing shop, and at No. 56 William Roberts had a shooting gallery. At No. 58 John Wilson was a confectioner, and at No. 60 Mrs. Lepper sold fruit. At No. 62 Gleeson & Bell were coal oil and lamp dealers. Lamb's Hotel was formerly (1856) at Nos. 57 and 59 on this side of the street, occupying the site of about Nos. 58-60.

In 1856, or ten years earlier than the view given in the picture, the red brick building occupied by the Metropolitan Hotel in 1866, was occupied as offices, in which were Alexander McDonald, solicitor, now of Osgoode Hall; James Grand, the architect, father of James Grand, of Grand & Toy; Charles Fitzgibbon, registrar of the Court of Probate, a son of Col. James Fitzgibbon, of the 49th Regiment; W. J. Fitzgerald, the registrar of the Surrogate; and Thomas Ridout, civil engineer. Mr. Ridout is now an inspector of railways for the Dominion Government. He was the eldest son of the late T. Gibbs Ridout, of the Bank of Upper Canada. One door west, at No. 47, George Harding was a plumber, and the Toronto Water-works office, owned by Mr. Furniss, had offices, G. K. Radford being manager. The Furniss works were bought by the city of Toronto. At No. 49 Dr. Wood, a dentist, a famous professor of the dental art, practiced his profession. All the small boys with tooth troubles were sent to Dr. Wood. Once the tooth was within the precincts of the steel ends of the forceps the tooth had to come out, even if it caused a struggle for the tooth by the operator and for liberty by the boy. At No. 51 Lewis Holmes had the Clifton saloon, and at No. 53 Jessie Bloomfield was a milliner. At No. 55 Charles Bender had his tobacco shop before he moved to the south side of the street, and at No. 57 and No. 59 stood the well known Lamb's Hotel.

On the north-east corner of King and Bay streets was the handsome cut stone residence of the late William Cawthra, and directly east, as shown in the picture, was No. 46, the shop of Thomas Dexter. No. 44, which is not shown, was vacant in 1866, and No. 42, a small shop, had for an occupant J. R. Brown, a coloured man and a well patronized bootmaker. At No. 40 1-2 John Mink had livery stables, and at No. 40 John Elgie was proprietor of a three-storey brick building, called Elgie's Hotel. In 1856 C. & J. Mitchell kept the Lovejoy Hotel at No. 40, and William Hickman, or "Bill," as he was better known, had a grocery at No. 42. Charles Baker, the tailor, had No. 46 in 1856. "Charlie" Baker's trousers were always of fashionable cut, and he was liberally patronized. Now all is changed. The cut stone mansion of William Cawthra, designed and built by Joseph Sheard, has taken the place of Mrs. Knott (1840) at the corner, and the Canada Life Building looms up upon the site of Baker's, Hickman's and Brown's buildings and the old Lovejoy House. The late J. G. Howard was an architect of repute, and as a critic his opinion was valued. One day, ten years ago, when chatting with the writer in the private office of The Telegram, Mr. Howard, who in earlier days at Upper Canada College had the writer as a pupil, said: "My boy, do you want to see one of the best designed buildings in Toronto?" And on assent being given, he called the writer to the window, and, pointing to the Cawthra House, said: "There it is. That's Joseph Sheard's work, and good work it is."

In 1856 the Cawthra corner was vacant, Charles Baker being one door east, in No. 37, and, continuing east, F. Lasher, a fruiterer, No. 35. William Hickman, better known as "Bill," was at No. 33. Christopher and John Mitchell had the Lovejoy House, afterwards called the Elgie's, and at No. 29 Charles March, the painter, had the shop that to-day is the office of the Verral Company, while Honoria Flinn had a small shop where she sold provisions, and at No. 27 Nicholas Strangs, or rather his wife, Mrs. Strangs, was a broker, and sold second-hand clothes. What Mrs. Strangs did not know of every family in Toronto from 1830 was not worth knowing. The best people in Toronto knew Mrs. Strangs, for she was convenient, and not ill-liberal in buying old dresses, and further had not only a plentiful supply of coin, but lots of gossip. William Ashfield, afterwards chief of the fire brigade, was a gunmaker at No. 21, a small shop. He afterwards moved into the three-storey building now occupied by Clancy, while E. H. Blogg, a bootmaker; Miss Bolster, and Pagerit & Co. were cooks and confectioners. Across the lane east of the present Chop House, David Wilson made boots at No. 19, and David Davis was a grocer at No. 17, while all the space from No. 17-19 was known as No. 11, owned and occupied by Wm. Higgins, the high constable. No. 17-19 is the site of the Manning Arcade.

The only buildings given in the picture of this section of the landmark are the shops of Thomas Dexter and Charles Baker, and the Cawthra house.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE GREAT CORNERS OF THE CITY

The Thoroughfares That all the Year Round Morning, Noon and Night, Hear the Foot—Falls of Busy Men.

When early in the thirties, between 1830-4, some of the land on the north-west corner of King and Yonge streets was sold for a few dollars a foot, and not ten at that, those who sold thought they were getting full value for the ground, while those who bought certainly never dreamed that twelve inches front of ground, about 100 feet deep, then selling for $4 or $5, would sell sixty years later for some thousands. And yet this is a fact. Nearly an acre on the north-east corner sold in 1800 for a few hundred dollars in Halifax currency, while the south-west and south-east corners always were looked on as the choice business locations, neither of which have changed hands since the first purchase by the Bostwick and the Baldwins respectively. The north-east corner has been until recent years in the possession of the Dennis family, while the north-west corner belongs to the estate of the late Dr. Lawlor.

This is one of the busy corners of Toronto, although perhaps the sidewalks on the south-west and north-west corners of Yonge and Queen streets can claim a greater passenger traffic, owing to the great retail stores in the neighbourhood.

This landmark concerns the year 1866, when Moses Staunton had the building, Nos. 2 and 4, on the north-west corner of King and Yonge streets. R. W. Anderson, the photographer, the same artist who photographs the landmarks for The Telegram, was at No. 6, and James Jackson, the China dealer was at No. 8, Mr. Staunton was a broad minded Irishman, full of business energy and for many years did a large trade on the corner. James Jackson in the days of the volunteer fire brigade, was captain of the hose company, or, as it was for a time known, "The Jackson Hose."

One door west of Jackson's in this row of brick buildings was between 1841-52 the depository of the Church Society, and for some time the office of the Church newspaper under the management of Mr. Thomas Champion. The entrance of this office was by the lane in the rear from Yonge street. There were some old faces in his office—David Sleeth, for so many years with the Leader, Mansfield, Archie Davis, William A. Myers, Wash. Clendenning, John Hogg, afterwards of Collingwood, as an apprentice, and Alexander Jacques was a type. All of these, John Hogg only excepted, have gone with their final revise.

All the shops from the corner were three storey brick. Then came a row of two storey frame, with W. C. Morrison, the goldsmith, at No. 12, while a half shop, No. 12 1-2, was vacant. Next was the store of Carnegie & Brother, the watchmakers, who made the first illuminated clock in Toronto. This timepiece overhung their doorway, as seen in the engraving, and in the wall at the west side of the door was another clock set in the wall which gave the changes of the sun, the moon, and the stars, and other information to be found in clocks with extra mechanical contrivances. From Nos. 16 to 20 there was but one house, the cottage of Mr. William Higgins, the high constable. Higgins was a heavily built, powerful man, one of iron nerve. The late Alexander Jacques wrote in 1889 that "no man ever had a hand shake from Higgins without remembering his energetic response." His strength in his prime was noted, and he frequently, wrote Mr. Jacques, "would allow two men on one side of a counter to grasp him by each hand, while without any effort he would pull both across the counter with the greatest ease."

In 1866 Thomas Lalor, the locksmith, rented the Higgin's house, while small shops to the west were occupied by H. Russell, general dealer, No. 28, N. Holmes, engraver, No. 28 1-2; Samuel Cleary had a carpenter shop in the rear of No. 28, and Mrs. Susan Wilson, widow of David Wilson and Joseph Catello, a labourer, lived in two frame houses in the rear of No. 28.

At No. 30 Mr. A. Thomas had the English Chop House, a three storey building, now occupied by Clancy, and prior to Thomas, by Ashfield, the gun maker, afterwards chief of the fire brigade. Then came three small two storey buildings. No. 32, F. Meagher sold oil and lamps, No. 32 1-2, used by Harry Nelson, the "professor in hair dressing," as a shop, in which the late Dick Jackson worked, and at No. 34, David Davis, a coloured man, restored clothing even when it was near the sere and yellow leaf of old age. The sheds further west on this side of the street fronted the butcher shop of William Dever, a shop, No. 36, remarkable not only for its good beef, but for its general cleanliness. The wooden slabs of other days gave way in this shop to marble, and the scales in the shop always looked as if they had just come from the maker. The meat was so shown as to be tempting to an epicure, and the weight had always the reputation of being on the side of the customer. At No. 38 William Charlton had a saloon, and in the rear lived Mrs. Margaret Grant, the widow of John Grant, and the mother of a Toronto attorney of the day. At 38 1-2 Alfred Scadding, the carpenter, a skillful mechanic, and so well read a man that the late John Ellis, the engraver, styled him as "the literary carpenter." Then came Elgie's Hotel, the old Lovejoy House, and to the corner the shops given in another landmark.

The south-west corner is not all shown in the picture. The corner in 1866 was the shop of W. H. Dow, a dry goods man, and at No. 2 William Faulkner & Co., father of George Faulkner, sold boots and shoes. At No. 5 James Fraser, a skilled and experienced accountant and insurance agent, had an office, and upstairs Patterson & Beatty, and J. C. Hamilton, all barristers, had offices. At No. 7 was the firm of Fulton, Michie & Co., now Michie & Co., and at No. 9 John Riddell, the merchant tailor, and at No. 11 John Ellis, the father of Mr. Ellis at High Park, the engraver, and upstairs Octavius Thompson, the engraver, John Hector, Q. C., a barrister, and James T. Smith, the architect. No. 13 was vacant, and at No. 15 was Joseph Robinson, in the Sheffield House. At No. 17 Thomas Maclear & Co. were in retail books, and upstairs Dudley & Burns, the printers, now of Colborne street, had an office. The tall building on the corner of Melinda street was that of Jacques & Hay, a new building, the firm having removed from the corner of Bay and King streets. This shop occupied the site of the news and bookstore of Irving & Thompson, afterwards A. S. Irving. This building was divided into three stores. In the centre of this building about 1856-57 was established the first news depot in Toronto by L. D. Campbell, an American, and the entire stock was on a shelf ten feet long and a counter 6 x 3. The shop was ten feet front and the site was about under the third window of the present Bank of Commerce. James Macdonald, the dyer, occupied the western third of the shop referred to in 1866. The next building was the old Commercial Bank building, afterwards the Globe. This was converted into shops about 1860. At No. 23 John D. Linton, a nephew of Angus Dallas, had a wood and willow ware shop, and at No. 25 was vacant until May, 1866, when it was taken as the business office of the Daily Telegraph newspaper. The store to the west, also in the Dallas building, was occupied by David Wilson, the bootmaker. He had removed from the opposite side of the street. At No. 27 William Klopp sold pipes and tobacco, and at No. 29

S. M. Shaw had a circulating library, while in rear of No. 31 was the restaurant of Arthur Hogben. The Misses Bate were fashionable ladies' hairdressers at No. 31, and R. T. Pocknell was a confectioner at No. 33. McDougall & Co. had a news depot at No. 35, about 18, and then Waine & Hall, afterwards E. R. Hall & Co., then Rogers & Clayton and George Boswell, and finally A. S. Irving. It is the present shop of H. A. Wilson & Co. R. B. Butland was in music at No. 35, as his family are to-day. James Bales had a tailor shop at No. 41, and Wm. Windeat, the photographer, and Thos. H. Martin, the portrait painter, were upstairs, and the late James McGinn had a billiard parlour in the shop known as No. 41. Hooper & Co. were at No. 43, their present stand, and Phillip Jacobi was at No. 47; J. Park, No. 49; R. S. Thompson, 49 1-2; D. S. & B. Adams, No. 51; and the old building of Jacques & Hay at the corner of King and Bay streets.

In 1856 the north and south sides of King street west had some of the same occupants as in 1866. At the Staunton corner Haycraft, Small & Addison had a music store, and on King street, to the west, were the offices of C. A. Mondelet, S. E. Gregory and C. Bradburne, the agent of the Canada Life Company. James Jackson was at No. 3, and at No. 5 was Anthony Dillon, an artist's colourman. At No. 7 Alexander Gemmell, the shoeman, and at No. 9 Parson, Johnson & Co., soap and candle men, and next door west Thomas Beaty, a watchmaker, and J. C. Pell, the gilder, going west to the corner of Bay were the houses of Wm. Higgins, Daniel Davis, David Wilson, the bootmaker; Pagerit & Co., James Ashfield, Mrs. Strangs, Mrs. Flinn, Charles March (now the Verral office), C. & J. Mitchell, Hickman, Lasher and Charles Baker. The four last mentioned shops are now occupied by the Canada Life Building. The corner was vacant and was afterwards built on by Wm. Cawthra.

On the south-west side at the corner of King and Yonge streets, was, in 1856, W. H. Dow, dry goods (No. 2), and upstairs Larratt W. Smith, barrister; Geo. T. Berthon, the portrait painter, and Stephen Richards, the barrister, had offices. Mr. Berthon was the painter of many of the portraits in Osgoode Hall. Mr. Richards became the Hon. Stephen some years later. At No. 4 Adam Wilson—afterwards Sir Adam—and John Hector were in partnership as barristers, and at No. 6 Fulton, Michie & Co., were retail grocers. At No. 8 John Riddell and McLean were merchant tailors, and John Ellis conducted an engraving establishment at No. 8. Upstairs in this building were the offices of Kivas Tully, the architect and civil engineer; F. F. Passmore, the surveyor; T. C. Bramly, agent of the Toronto Brick Company, and C. R. Commander, agent of a London publishing company. In No. 10 Matilda Haas sold embroidery, and at No. 12 J. C. Beckett & Co., the predecessors of Hooper & Co., had the leading chemist's shop of Toronto. At the corner, where Wheaton & Co. are to-day, was the book shop of Andrew H. Armour, a well-known bookseller of the period. The late John Kerr was manager for A. H. Armour & Co., and Francis Nesbitt was an employe. Crossing Jordan street, was the boot store of Wm. Faulkner, afterwards the shop of A. S. Irving, and next door was the first news store in Toronto, that of L. D. Campbell. No. 18 was part of the Dallas block, and was unoccupied in 1856, but No. 20 had Angus Dallas in the wood-ware business, and at No. 22 was the Globe office. At No. 24 was John Godike, the grocer, who, ten years later, was west of Bay street on King, in the mineral water business.

An early schoolhouse of York stood in rear of A. H. Armour's on the corner. It stood on the north-east corner of Jordan and Melinda streets, Mr. Thos. Thompson being the preceptor and guide to knowledge. It was also in this building that the Mechanics' Institute was organized in 1830.

All the original buildings from the St. Charles restaurant on Yonge street, around King street to Jordan, were erected in 1834-36.

The streets that cut into four quarters the large block of land from Bay street to Yonge street, and from King to Wellington, are named after Jordan and Melinda Post, who were early settlers and owners. Post was a clockmaker, and had in 1830 a small shop, a frame building, on the south-east corner of Bay and King streets.

CHAPTER XXV.

A FRONT STREET WEST VIEW.

The Water Front Between John and Peter Streets and the Residence of the Hon. George Cruikshank.

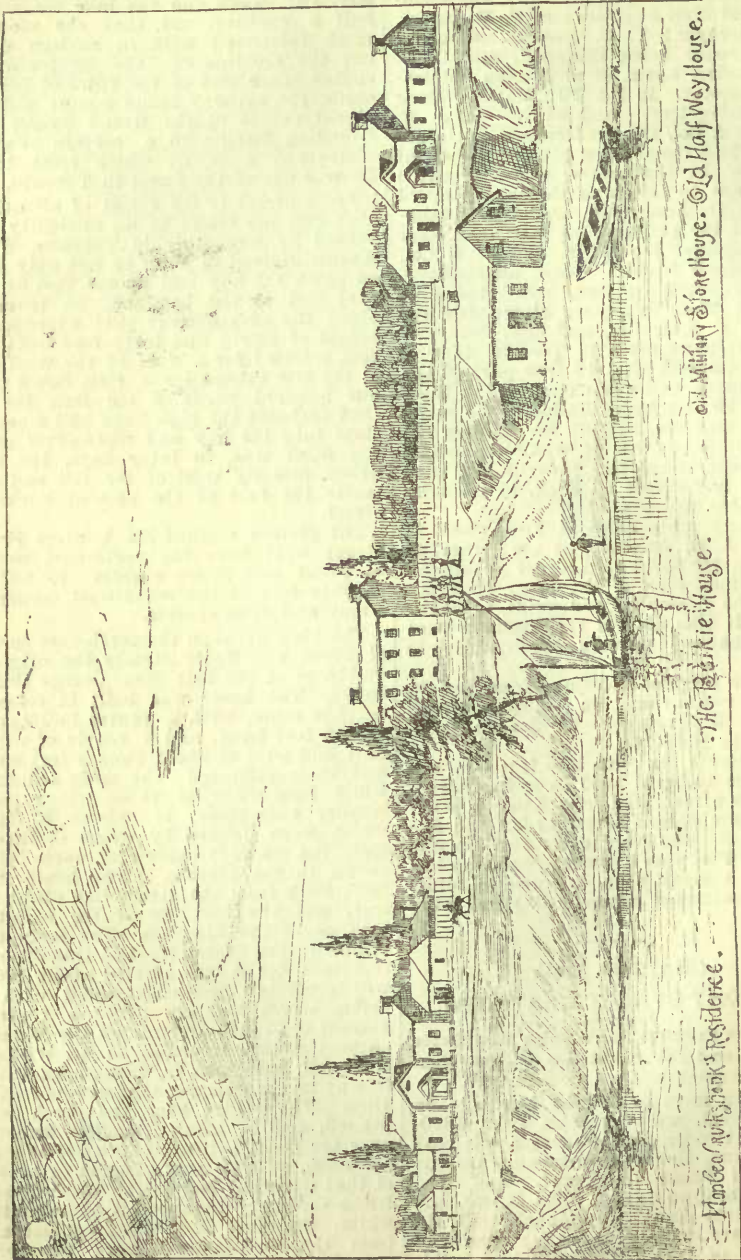

The two most prominent buildings on Front street, west of John, from 1820-56, were two private residences, one that of the Hon. George Cruikshank, on the corner of Front and Peter, and the second, the dwelling of John Beikie, the Clerk of the Executive Council early in the century and at one time sheriff of the town of York (1811-12). These buildings had an unobstructed view of the bay, the island and the lake for nearly half a century, not that the view is much interfered with in modern days, but the erection of the water-works engine house and of the rows of freight sheds, the railway round houses and the signal cabins of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific to a certain extent disenclosed a view, which from 1800-50 was one of the finest in Toronto.

Front street is the street of all others that can lay claim to an antiquity not shared by any other in Toronto. When Simcoe arrived in York he not only sailed down the bay and up the Don at the east end of the bay, but he tramped along the embankment that averaged a height of thirty and forty feet from the spot selected for a fort at the west end of the site chosen for a city, down to a few hundred yards of the Don, for at that distance the high bank had a gentle slope into the bay and river after passing what was, in later days, the fair green, directly west of the jail and opposite the foot of the present Berkeley street.

The picture marked No. 1 gives Front street west from the north-east corner of Front and Peter streets to within seventy feet of the north-west corner of Front and John streets.

The view gives on the north-east corner of Front and Peter streets the original residence of the late Hon. George Cruikshank. The house was built in colonial cottage style, with a centre building of fifteen feet front, and a couple of wings east and west of about twenty feet each, and these composed the main building, while from each of these wings were smaller extensions of about 20 feet, which were flanked by wings of fifteen feet, the gable windows of each being shown in the picture. The house was built back from the street line about 60 feet, and the frontage of the building was as in the diagram. The main entrance in the centre front of this pioneer residence, for it was erected about 1800, was protected and ornamented with a porch, which had not only a certain amount of beauty given it by the colonial carpenter, but, according to Mr. William Helliwell, who was in Toronto in 1818, it was in the summer time covered with vines. The centre over the porch was peaked, and a small window directly over the porch indicated an attic or garret room, such as was common in houses of that date and build. The house was of frame—ordinary clapboard and painted white. Standing as it did some distance from the street line, there was room for shrubs, and the large trees that covered this part of Front street as shown in early pictures must have made the situation of the dwelling exceptionally pleasant for its occupants. The fact that this cottage residence was a pioneer building, erected before the war of 1812, is shown by a list of houses built before the war on Front street, "1, Mr. Cruikshank, 2, Mr. Beikie." In 1821 Mr. Cruikshank erected in front of the old house a more modern structure as given in picture No. 2. This new house was of frame, filled in with brick, the walls being very thick. It was a roomy two-storey residence, and occupied all the front of the street line for about a hundred feet, the original cottage of 1805 serving as the rear of the modern structure. About 1850 the house was covered with brown stone plaster and artistically blocked out—a process which rather improved its looks. As with the pioneer dwelling the residence of 1821 had a centre with two wings, with a large porch or vestibule ornamented in colonial style. It is to be noted that not only the best residences in York and Toronto, but some of the more humble cottage buildings, had considerable ornamentation about the doors and windows. The old porch of "The Grange," now replaced by stone, and the doorway of No. 26 Terauley street, are examples of both. The hall of the Cruikshank residence of 1821 was large and roomy, leading out in each side to a spacious room, which, for their day, were the best appointed in York. On the west side of the house there were two large drawing rooms and a spacious dining room and library on the east side, while the upper floors had a suite of sleeping rooms. The Hon. George Cruikshank, for we adhere to the Scotch orthography rather than the more modern "Crookshank," although both spellings are considered correct, was a pioneer in the best sense of the term. He was born in New York in 1773 of Scotch parents, who crossed the ocean before 1770. His parents were United Empire Loyalists, and after the war of the American revolution they emigrated to St. John, New Brunswick.

Miss Catharine Cruikshank, a sister of Mr. George Cruikshank, married Mr. John McGill, who was the first Receiver-General of Upper Canada. Mr. McGill knew Governor Simcoe in Virginia, and by him was invited to settle in Upper Canada. Mr. McGill not only did so, but advised Mr. George Cruikshank to cast his lot in the Upper Province. Both gentlemen, therefore, came to York in 1796, so that both had a part in the laying out of the embryonic city. The Hon. Peter McGill, of Montreal, was a son of a sister of Mr. John McGill, who married a Mr. McCutcheon. Mr. James McCutcheon was the agent of Mr. John McGill in Upper Canada.

It was in the last year of Simcoe's term as Lieutenant-Governor that Mr. Cruikshank was appointed Deputy Commissary General, and after the war retired on half-pay. Mr. John McGill was the first Receiver-General of the Province of Upper Canada. Mr. Cruikshank was a young man, only 23 years of age, when he arrived in Toronto, and his energy and business sagacity not only gave him the opportunity of serving the province in his official capacity, but also enabled him to advance the interests of the town in which he had determined to make his future home. During his term in the commissariat he had charge of the building of the fort at Toronto, and a memorandum is extant showing that all the material furnished in 1803 for Government buildings, including the Government house in the fort, were duly acknowledged by Mr. Cruikshank. All these buildings were, of course, destroyed in the war of 1812—15. On his settlement in Toronto Mr. Cruikshank purchased three hundred acres of land, some of which was on the bay front, and the rest in the north-western part of the city, west of Bathurst street, that part north of Queen being known for many years as Cruikshank's lane.

In the records of the York County Registry Office from 1797 to 1861, under the grants on Market street, now Wellington, "Lot 13, All. 1, August 10, 1801," was patented to "George Crookshank," and "No. 14, All. 1, June 10, 1801," to the "Hon. John McGill." This means that one acre on the south side of Market street (Wellington), east of Peter and south to Front, was patented to Mr. Cruikshank, and the west lot to his brother-in-law, Mr. McGill. In the records of October 17th, 1843, a half-acre, No. 6, was patented, and 1-1-2 and 2 acres on 10th June, 1837, both parcels to "Hon. George Crookshank," and also one acre "south of King," to "George Crookshank." In 1821 Mr. Cruikshank married an American lady, a Miss Lambert, and by her had a son, George, who entered Upper Canada College in 1843, and who died in the early fifties, and a daughter, now the widow of the late Mr. Stephen Heward, now residing at 38 Peter street. Mr. Cruikshank was a member of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, but after the union of the provinces in 1841 he took little or no interest in party politics.

Americans, in 1813, the Cruikshank house was used by American officers. The house was divided in 1863 into two houses, and was finally pulled down in 1881. The house of 1801, in the rear, which formed part of the structure of 1821, was pulled down at the same time.

In the directory of 1833 Peter street is "The last street west of the town," and "commences in Front street, fronting the bay, and runs north," and "at the south-east corner, Crookshank, the Hon. George, on the left—houses building by the Honourable George Crookshank." These are the red brick houses now numbered 38, 50-2, on the west side of Peter street.

A garden to the east of the Cruikshank house, enclosed within the board fence shown, occupied another hundred feet, and adjoining this garden on the west is shown in print No. 1, the dwelling house of John Beikie, which stood on the site of the present Windsor street, which was opened about 1854-55. Some particulars of John Beikie's life have been given in another landmark (pp. 469-70., Vol. I.). The Beikie house was a frame, clap-boarded building, with high steps, leading up to an open porch, a seat on either side, upon which of an evening Mr. Beikie had his ease, after his official duties were at an end. The porch was colonial in shape, like that of the Canada Company, on the north-east corner of King and Frederick streets. The drawing of the Beikie house is a capital reproduction of the primitive frame building, by Mr. Stephen Heward, son of Mrs. Heward, 38 Peter street, from the original picture made in 1810. Residents of Toronto up to 1860 will remember the house, and pioneers may recall the severely plain style of architecture that characterized it.

The Beikie house, given as "No. 2" in the list of 1815, was prominent for its plainness in architecture, the porch being about the only bit of carpenter work that relieved the monotony of old-time wooden buildings. In the directory of York for 1833, "No. 70," at the north-east corner of Peter and Front streets, is "No. 70," the residence of the "Hon. George Crookshank," and "No. 68," the first house to the east, the residence of "John Beikie, Esq., Clerk of the Executive Council." Mr. Beikie came to York about 1802, and from 1820-33 he was clerk of the Executive Council of Upper Canada. He married some years after the war Miss Macdonell, a relative of Mr. Alexander Macdonell, of Osgoode Hall (1896). Beikie was a well read man, and had a remarkable memory. He was a marvel as a memorizer, and was a leading member of the Masonic fraternity in Toronto in 1822-30. He was fond of gardening, and in front of his house a small plot of ground had a few choiced flowers. He was also fond of music, his favourite instrument being the flute. In 1803 he was a pew-holder in St. James' church, and was specially fond of the musical service. A story is told that he was so fond of music that when Bishop Alexander Macdonell, of York, celebrated the first mass in the town, that Mr. Beikie, notwithstanding the fact that he was an Anglican, aided the Bishop by leading the singing in connection with the service. His house was partly torn down early in the fifties. The eastern side of it was moved a short distance to the east when Windsor street was opened. This part of the house has now a shop front. Fifty feet further east than the Beikie residence was in 1810 an open space, a bit of the natural forest, with a score of tall elms that filled part of the acre lot north to Market (Wellington) street.

The building on the street line a hundred feet east of Beikie's, prior to 1815, was that of "Esperlon, a discharged soldier from De Watteville's Regiment, built by John Endicott, of Yonge street." In a list of houses given as erected before the war this house is described as "No. 3" on Front street. The name is sometimes rendered "Ekerlin." This house was probably the best building of the three given between Beikie's and the corner of John street. The buildings at present on the site are part of the house. In the directory of 1833 "No. 64" is given as the house of "Ekerlin, B., Issuer in the Commissariat Store."

The first house east of Ekerlin's was the Halfway House. This house was built after the war for it is not given in the official list of houses west of Simcoa street. It is possible that it may have been added to the Ekerlin house about 1816-17, and is shown in the picture with a small porch at the front door. It was a favourite place of resort for soldiers from the garrison. In the early days the Halfway House was occupied by officers of the garrison and afterwards it became a tavern. The small building east of the Halfway House was part of the tavern. Between 1840-60 the bar room was in the centre building with the porch. The writer resided from 1841-56 on Simcoa street and knew all the buildings on Front street, and the Halfway House was a minor landmark in its way, called by its name as indicating halfway between the market and the garrison. It is peculiar that the Halfway is not given in the directory of York from 1833, although the house was undoubtedly in existence at that time.

The houses west between the Halfway and the corner of John and Front streets frame building painted in ordnance grey and contained militia stores. It was enlarged in 1840-42, and was about one hundred and fifty feet in length. On the top of the embankment, just north of the are not given. The military storehouse on the Bay shore as shown in the picture was built about 1810. It was there in 1852, just before the filling in of the Esplanade in front of the city. It was a storehouse, and a few feet west, almost opposite the foot of John street, was a shed used by the military as a guard-house, and up to 1855 a sentry always paced in front of this small building, while the guard was regularly relieved by the soldiers of whatever regiment was stationed in the Old Fort, at the west end of Front street. The foregoing is a description of this Front street view as from 1800-20.

The original of the picture given as No. 1 was painted about 1814 by a Mr. Irvine, a Scotchman, a cousin of Mr. Cruikshank, who was a pioneer at Detroit during the war.

This fact shows that the Halfway was standing before the war. The picture, No. 2, was the Cruikshank residence from 1821. This was painted by Mr. William Armstrong from a pencil sketch made under the direction of Mrs. Stephen Heward.

After 1830 there were quite a few changes in this locality. East of the Beikie house Mr. Peter Robinson, brother of Sir J. B. Robinson, erected a two-storey brick dwelling that is still to the fore. He occupied it till his death when Mrs. Heward moved into it. About 1860 the late Sir James Lukin Robinson purchased the house, formerly the Beikie residence, and opened up Windsor street. The corner of Front and John streets was occupied by the Greenland Fishery Tavern. The building with a couple to the east of it still remains. That tavern was kept by Edward Wright and was No. 58 on the street. The first house west, 60, was that of Edward Cressell, issuer in the Commissariat, and at No. 62 William Heather, bricklayer, and a Mrs. Hutchison, occupied. At No. 64 was the original house of B. Ekerlin, as occupied by him in 1812-15, and at No. 66 was a frame house, painted white, built prior to 1832, the residence of Col. N. Coffin, Adjutant-General of the Militia. All these houses in this landmark with the exception of the military storehouse, were either on or a little north of the street line of Front street, and stood about a hundred and fifty feet from the edge of the bank that led in some places by a steep incline to the shore below. The bank had a slope to the street from east to west at the foot of Peter street, and also at the west end of the military storehouse, so that descent to a splendid beach was not difficult.

The Greenland Fishery Tavern is given in a landmark at page 48, vol. I.

The originals of the sketches from which the three prints are made are in the possession of Mrs. Stephen Heward, who has not only kindly loaned the pictures for the purpose of re-production, but has also verified the description of this old spot of early York.

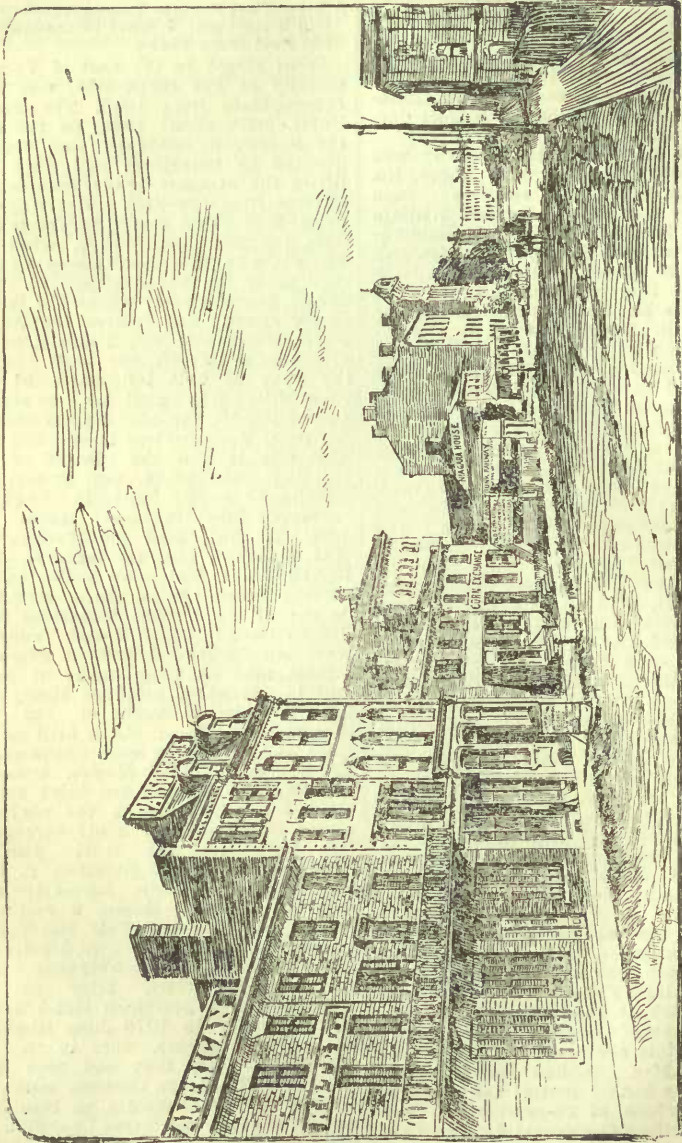

CHAPTER XXVI.

FRONT STREET NEAR YONGE.

A View That Recalls Quite a Number of the Old Buildings—A Busy Thoroughfare for the Past Sixty Years.

Front street to the east of Yonge, especially on the north side, was a busy thoroughfare from 1840. The American Hotel, built about 1844, on the site of the Sherwood residence, was much frequented by travellers, and when in the fifties the steamer trade became active citizens from the east end always came by way of Front street to Yonge street.

On the 20th June, 1837, when Queen Victoria was proclaimed Queen an ox was roasted on the vacant space at the corner of Yonge street, where the Sherwood House stood, and where the American Hotel, which was Nos. 2 and 4, on Front street, was afterwards built. In 1870, the year of this landmark, at No. 8 Nicol Milloy was agent for lake steamers, and at No. 10, one door further east, Parson Bros. were dealers in oils and lamps. This site is now the Board of Trade building. Nos. 12-16, two storey brick dwellings were built in 1842, but converted into business places about 1850. At No. 12-14 the Machine Made Hat Company had its factory, and at No. 16 W. D. Matthews & Co., the commission merchants in grain, who to-day do one of the largest businesses in this line in Canada. The Grand Trunk railway had Richard Arnold, a genial and affable man as their agent at No. 24, and in the same building Henry Bourlier, the pioneer agent of the Allan line, had his office. He is still as energetic as ever for the same company. The building occupied by Messrs. Arnold and Bourlier was a small red brick building, erected about 1870, on the north-west corner of Front and Scott streets. Before that time the fruit garden of Mrs. Carfrae and of Stedman B. Campbell occupied this site. Across the street was the Niagara House, a restaurant, kept by Wm. Guest. This building was at one time a theatre. Two doors east at No. 32 was the Newbigging House, the building that, prior to 1862 was the North American Hotel kept by Mr. Horwood. In 1870 John Shedden & Co., cartage agents, were in a brick cottage, No. 42, that had been in the days of 1835-41 the Customs house. This site in 1872 was known as Nos. 36-38, and on it stood the Royal Canadian Bank buildings which ran through to Wellington street. The buildings east of this on Front street were occupied by offices. J. Leckie at No. 42 and J. Bailie at the same number. No. 50 had James Rough.

FRONT STREET, NORTHSIDE, FROM YONGE TO SCOTT STREETS—1872.

the flour inspector, and also Douglas Laidlaw, corn merchant, D. Davidson, grain dealer, J. Harris, grain inspector, E. M. Carruthers & Co., agents. Mr. Carruthers was a brother of the Carruthers, of Inverness, Scotland, Courier, a leading paper, J. E. Jacques & Co., and W. & H. Jacques, all Montreal men, connected with freight steamer lines. At No. 52 M. & L. Samuel were in iron, as they are to-day, on Front street west, as the firm of M. L. Samuel & Benjamin, and at No. 54 J. & A. Clark were commission merchants, and J. Laidlaw, also a merchant. At No. 56 W. B. Scarth, the present Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion, was a timber merchant, and at No. 58 the Dominion Telegraph Company had offices, and also William Thorn, merchant.

From No. 50 was the Coffin block, recently torn down to be replaced by the handsome building of the Gooderham & Worts Co.

The building in the picture to the east of the Newbigging House, is the rear of the warehouse of John Macdonald & Co. which fronted on Wellington street.

On the opposite side of the street, opposite the Niagara House, is the building of Frank Smith & Co., now occupied by Eby, Blain & Co. The fence on the southwest corner of Scott and Front enclosed a coal yard now the warehouse of E. C. Eckhardt & Co., formerly occupied by Eby, Blain & Co., is on this site. The buildings in the back ground, far to the east, are the Manning block on the north side of Front, east of Church.

It will be of interest in this landmark to go back to an earlier period, that of 1856, when the buildings were about the same, but the tenants were mostly men who were active in many business callings before the year 1850.

In 1856 the corner of Front street had the American Hotel, with N. F. Pearson as proprietor, while in the building on Front street, to the east of the hotel, was the offices of Humphrey, Camp & Patterson, contractors and agents. J. B. Gordon was a coal agent in the same building. A large white brick building, with the sign Parson Bros. on the roof, was in 1856 the Royal mail steamer office, and in it also the office of L. H. Daniels, a popular steamboat agent, whose energy in business was leavened with a manner that made him many friends. In build he was as straight as an arrow, and old time hairdressers said that he had the finest head of hair in Toronto. He is yet active as the accommodating host of the leading hotel in Prescott, Ont. T. D. Shipman, a veteran railway and steamboat man, thin and spare in build and a quick thinker in business, was also in this office. Both Daniels and Shipman were connected with the Royal mail line. In the row of two-storey red brick buildings to the east was the harbour office, with Hugh Richardson as harbourmaster. There is a small photograph of him in the Board of Trade office. In the centre building resided Samuel Sherwood, chief of police, who was afterwards city registrar. The original Corn Exchange was in the east of the row, with R. A. Goodenough as secretary, and at the corner of Scott street was Richard Arnold's Grand Trunk ticket office. William Wainwright and James Stephenson, late of the Grand Trunk at Montreal, are sons-in-law of the late Mr. Arnold. On the north-west corner of Front and Scott John Smith and Frank Flood, his assistant, had the International ticket office. Flood took pride in always being up to the fashion in dress. The next building was the North American Hotel, which was then unoccupied. In the private dwelling to the east was the residence of the late William Newbigging. The portion of this street to the east has been given in another landmark.

CHAPTER XXVII. A YONGE SECTION.

The North-west and North-east Corners of the Great Business Thoroughfare of Forty Years ago.

Forty years ago, while Yonge street was one of the great thoroughfares of Toronto, it had not the importance as a business street that it has to-day. In the early fifties Yonge street, as far as the city proper was concerned, was but two miles in length, while to-day it is not only the busy haunt of the bargain hunters, but its length has been extended another mile or so into the County of York, so that from Toronto Bay to the south line of Mount Pleasant cemetery we have a business street that is a vast improvement on the days of half a century ago.

The lower end of Yonge street prior to 1866 was pre-eminently the centre of the wholesale dry goods district. But within a few years of the period named, the dry goods men sought better quarters, and Wellington street east and west, and Front street, especially to the west of Yonge, secured in new and improved warehouses, not only what remained of the Yonge street wholesale trade, but that of new comers, who sought wealth in that particular line within the limits of Toronto.

Yonge street, north of King and up to Queen, shared to a small extent the dry goods trade of King street, east of Yonge, for in the latter section the retail dry goods men reigned supreme as early as 1836-40, and, aided by the fact that the market place was east of Church, secured not only the trade of the farmers of York county, but that of the citizens of Toronto, whose favorite shops were nearly all on the south side of King, from Yonge street to Church. The farmers and out of town people were the reliable customers of the range of shops located on the south and north sides of King street, as far east even as the old boundary of the Home District, known then as it is now, as George street.

But business centres change and the dry goods man, like the pioneer of civilization, has moved west. King street east has but few of the great shops of forty years ago, and when the sign on the south side of King street of the veteran dry goods man, James Scott, who now retires after a successful business career of over fifty years, is taken down, the eastern limit of the retail dry goods man will not be east of the Leader lane.

Yonge street, north of King to Adelaide, in the early fifties, had a miscellaneous number of dealers on its western side, clothiers, auctioneers, tailors, druggists, boot makers and hardware men, with a sprinkling of small dry goods men. North of Adelaide, on both sides of the street it was about the same. The stores were occupied by the various lines of trade, and the upper rooms of many of the buildings were rented to printers and publishers, barristers and book agents at rents far more moderate than in these days of active business life.

The first buildings that marked an era of improvement on Yonge street in 1852-53 were those on the north-west and north-east corners of Yonge and Adelaide streets, the two rows which are prominent in the foreground of the picture illustrating this chapter. The south-west corner of Yonge and Adelaide streets was early in the century occupied by the tannery of Jesse Ketchum. His house and grounds were on the north-west corner of Yonge and Adelaide streets, and extended a hundred feet north. In the forties a row of wooden buildings occupied the site after the demolition of the Ketchum dwelling, and this row, which was destroyed by fire, was succeeded in 1850 by the brick row shown and known as the Elgin Buildings. These were erected by Mr. Jesse Ketchum, jr., and some of the southern shops in the row are now in the possession of the Sheard family, having belonged to the late Joseph Sheard, the architect, at one time Mayor of the city, and one prominent in municipal reform. The name "Elgin" was selected in honour of Lord Elgin, who in 1847-54 was the Governor of Upper and Lower Canada.

The first shop on the left hand was that of James & William McDonald, dry goods dealers, who occupied the ground floor of the double store, No. 79, on the corner. The members of this firm were two brothers, who from 1852 to 1859 carried on the business. Mr. Wm. McDonald went subsequently to Melbourne, Australia, and Mr. James McDonald is still a resident of this city. His son is Mr. William McDonald, of Kerr, McDonald & Davidson, barristers, Toronto.

In one of the upper rooms in the building was the office of Mr. J. R. Jones, a barrister, a relative of the Hon. Robt. Jones, of L'Original. Another portion of the upper offices was occupied by William Lyon McKenzie, the editor and proprietor of the Weekly Messenger. The work of typesetting was performed on the third floor, and the Message was worked off every week on a Washington hand press, the favourite machine for printers who did not find it convenient to use the cylinder press, which was worked by steam and which was, in those days, considered a novelty.

No. 81 was a double store, divided into single stores and occupied by George Balfour, a tailor, and William Hamilton, a boot and shoe maker, who died some years ago.

The ground floor and basement of No. 83 were leased from Mr. Ketchum by John and William Frederick Cowan, sons of Mr. Thomas Smith Cowan, a native of County Fermanagh, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada in 1840.

The brothers Cowan carried on a retail dry goods business at No. 83 (Elgin Buildings) Yonge street, under the style of J. & W. Cowan, from 1854 until the expiration of their lease in 1859, when they removed to premises owned by Mr. J. A. Smith, on the south-west corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, continuing their avocation at the latter locality until 1867. George Ridout, the barrister, Hugh Rodgers, the agent of the book subscription firm of Virtue & Co., and Patrick Russell, a tailor, also divided between them a portion of the upper part of the building.

No. 85 was two single stores, the south one occupied by John Tyner, the boot maker, father of two bright press men, Christopher Tyner, editor of the Hamilton Times, and Adam Clarke Tyner, of the Toronto Daily Telegraph. Mr. William Marston, an experienced gunmaker, occupied the north shop of No. 85. He afterwards moved to the opposite side of the street and carried on business for several years and then went out of business.

The buildings from the north end of the Elgin buildings were three, built of red brick. These three are given in a sketch made by Mr. William Edwards, which is given with this landmark.

The house to the left of the reader was built by Alex. McGlashan, and occupied by a grocer in 1851. It was shortly after occupied by the late Charles Moore in the grocery and liquor business, then up to 1895 by George Sproule, in the picture and art business. Mr. Moore's establishment was known as "The Chequered Store." He removed to Wellington street and carried on a wholesale business.

The centre house was built and occupied by Matthew Shore, saddler, until 1851, when he was bought out and succeeded by Wm. and Robert Edwards, who, in 1851, were succeeded by William and John Edwards, in the stationery and wall paper business. Mr. William Edwards was for many years active in connection with the Mechanics' Institute, the Agricultural and Arts Association, and is now secretary of the Department of Public Works of Ontario (1895).

The south-west corner of Yonge and Temperance streets was prior to 1851 occupied by a Mr. Wilson as a furniture store, with his work shop on Temperance street. Subsequently it was occupied by the late Edward Lawson, in the grocery and confectionery business, and succeeded in the same by Dodgson, Shields & Morton.

All these stores were subsequently occupied by other parties than these above mentioned, until in the year 1895 all three were taken by and altered and fitted up and occupied by the John Eaton Company's departmental store.

Here Temperance street intersected, and crossing the roadway north was the shop at No. 93, of J. Belton, boot and shoe maker, and John Foggin, a quiet and easy going man, who was a dyer. Next in No. 95, was William Steward, a saddler, and at No. 97 John Wallis carried on business as a leather merchant. Mr. Belton married the widow of the late John Wallis, and continued in the leather business for a number of years. He has retired from business, and now resides on the west side of Yonge street, near Agnes street.

At No. 99 Alexander Rattray, the baker, father of W. J. Rattray, a clever newspaper writer, a man of great ability, and at 99 1-2 Richard Reynolds, the boot maker, who is still to the fore on Yonge street, at the corner of Broad-albaine street.

At No. 101 Robert Higginbotham, also was in the boot business, and at 101 1-2 George W. Cary, a hair dresser, afterwards in the Rossin House, on York street. Gerge W. Cary was a man of colour, most courteous to his customers, an easy shaver and noted for the excellent edge of his razors.

Nos. 103 and 101, the two stores at the south-west corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, were two red brick buildings, which were erected by a Mr. Purkiss, from whom George Bilton, a retired King street merchant tailor, had previously purchased the property with the intention of opening a retail dry goods store.

No. 103 contained Marmaduke Pearson's familiar form. Mr. Pearson who carried on a retail dry goods business, was formerly a partner of Mr. Thomas Thompson, of "The Mammoth," under the style of Thompson & Pearson. In 1853 the premises were known as "The Large 103," the name being given to it because of the large six foot figures painted on the front of the building. Mr. Pearson occupied this building and the corner building immediately north continuously for thirty years, retiring in 1883. Mr. Pearson was born in Dublin, Ireland, and is one of the few pioneer merchants of the city now living.

In the shop immediately south of the corner Senator John Macdonald, who subsequently represented West Toronto in the Parliament of United Canada, and was eventually appointed to the Dominion Senate, inaugurated a few years prior to 1854, the first exclusively retail dry goods business on Yonge street. After a short and successful career Mr. Macdonald, finding inadequate scope for the exercise of his energies within the limits incident to retail operations, sold out his Yonge street business to Marmaduke Pearson, and thereafter devoted his efforts to the conduct of a wholesale dry goods trade, which he established on the north side of Wellington street, near the Imperial Bank, next the present Bodega, and in premises owned by Mr. Charles Berczy, postmaster of Toronto, finally erecting, to meet the growing requirements of his business, the imposing stone structure situated on the south side of Wellington street.

The premises at the north-east corner of Wellington street and Leader Lane were for several years, subsequent to Mr. Macdonald's tenure, utilized by Messrs. Rolph, Smith & Co. as a lithographic printing establishment, and are now known to fame as the Bodega restaurant.

At the south-west corner of Richmond and Yonge streets, already referred to, for here Richmond street intersects, were George Bilton and William Blakely, also dry goods men. Mr. Blakely is an active member of the Plymouth brethren. He retired from business some years ago and still resides in Toronto.

Soon after acquiring the two brick buildings at the south-west corner, Mr. Bilton conveyed the title to Mr. I. A. Smith (known as Yorkshire Smith) as a consideration, in whole or part, for the dry goods stock of the latter on his withdrawal from a business which he had for many years successfully prosecuted, latterly at the north-west corner of King and Francis streets. Mr. Bilton relinquished the dry goods business after a comparatively short experience. Messrs. Cowan, who had been in business at No. 83 Yonge street, succeeding Mr. Bilton in the occupation of the premises, which had remained for some time vacant.

In 1860 W. F. Cowan removed from Toronto to Oshawa, at which point and at Prince Albert, Ontario county, he opened a branch of the business of his firm, as a general country store. On the expiration of the lease of the premises at the south-west corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, Toronto, in 1866, J. & W. Cowan closed their Toronto business.

The succeeding year, 1867, John Cowan also removed to Oshawa, and, withdrawing from the firm, became a partner with Mr. A. S. Whiting, at the Cedar Dale Works, in Oshawa, where the manufacture of scythes, hoes, forks and other hand implements had previously been inaugurated and conducted on an extensive scale by Mr. Whiting. During Mr. Cowan's connection with the business a portion of the product had found its way to England, and the circumstance resulted in the opening of a warehouse and the appointment of a resident agent at Liverpool, by means of which a considerable export trade was created and carried on for a number of years.

About 1880 W. F. Cowan retired from the mercantile business, and since his arrival in Oshawa has, in conjunction with his brother, been associated with the promotion of a stove foundry and milling business there, also in establishing at Oshawa, in 1872, the manufacture of malleable iron castings. With the latter industry both brothers are still connected. Since their removal to Oshawa, where they continue to reside, Messrs. J. and W. F. Cowan have become associated with banking and loan company interests, the former being president of the Western Bank and a director of the Ontario Loan and Savings Company. Both of these institutions have their headquarters at Oshawa.

W. F. Cowan succeeded the late Hon. T. N. Gibbs in the presidency of the Ontario Loan and Savings Company and the Standard Bank.

The street further north to Queen street has been given in another chapter, but in 1856 the shops were occupied as follows: No. 107, John Harrison; 109, Thos. Newman; 111, Thos. Brownscombe; and No. 113, J. Grogan & Son, all boot and shoe makers.

At No. 115 was Charles Roberts, a cabinet maker, and at No. 117 R. B. Joy, a confectioner, and E. & H. Hurd, marble dealers. At No. 119 R. B. Joy had a hair-dressing shop, and William Bell kept watches and clocks in the north half of this building, while Nos. 121-3-5 were the figures over the doors of James Leask, grocer and dry goods merchant, whose name in Toronto, especially to the old Scotch families, was a household word.

The brick store at the south-west corner of Yonge and Queen streets was, in 1856, unoccupied. It had originally been built by William Mather, of Yonge street, near Eglinton, and was subsequently occupied by Timothy Eaton, who started his business in this shop. After Eaton's removal north of Queen street the site became the property of Robert Simpson, and on this site now stands the immense pile of buildings, which front on this corner south on Yonge and west on Queen street, and which was re-opened in January, 1896, after the disastrous fire of a year ago.

Returning again to the place of starting, at the north-west corner of Yonge and Adelaide streets, and crossing the street to the north-east corner, there was a sign-board familiar not only to citizens, but to the farmers of Upper Canada. Shaw's axes, as well as the name of the makers, S. Shaw & Son, No. 78, the hardware merchants, were well known throughout the province. The senior partner was Samuel Shaw, father of Mr. Samuel Shaw, the insurance agent, now of King street, near Toronto street.

Next door north, No. 80, J. W. Millar, the watchmaker and jeweller, had his shop. After his death James and Robert Morrison, his nephews, carried on the business, and removed to King street east, in the Market block, and a few years ago to the second door west of Church, on the south side of King. On the death of Mr. Robert Morrison, a few months ago, the business, which had been in existence for over sixty years, was closed out.

Mr. James Jennings, an insurance agent, at corner of King and Yonge streets, preceded for some years Mr. Timothy Eaton at this stand, prior to commencing the wholesale dry goods business in partnership with a Mr. Brandon, of Montreal, at Wellington street east, near Yonge. Previous to Mr. Jennings' tenure of the corner the firm of Hill & Grose occupied it for less than two years as a retail dry goods store.

At No. 82 two single shops were occupied by W. R. Robertson, a clothier, and Robert Cathron, a dry goods dealer. After Mr. Cathron retired from business he joined the Freehold Building Society, as cashier, and only severed his connection with it a few months ago—1896.

At No. 84 A. H. Earl carried on a retail dry goods business. George S. Gleason made shoes one door north, and one Craig, also a manufacturer, were all in this one building.

At No. 86 John Hawke, who died long ago, fitted customers with boots and shoes, while at No. 88 Charles Mabley, a tailor; William Henwood, a tailor; and T. Lambert, a bootmaker, since dead, did business.

Mabley's brothers were in business in the St. Lawrence block, on King street east, and one of them subsequently migrated to Detroit, where he built up a colossal business. He died a few years ago, after accumulating great wealth. His trade in Toronto was a few thousands yearly. In Detroit it was considerably over a million a year.

At No. 88 1-2 Merryfield & Shannon were bootmakers. The first named was subsequently for many years in the south store of the Cameron block, on the west side of Yonge, north of Queen. At No. 90 Thomas Robinson was a clothier and dry goods man. One door north was the shop of N. C. Love, the druggist, given in the directory as No. 88, but it must have been No. 92. Mr. Love was a prominent man in business and in municipal politics. He was an alderman of the city for years, was one always on the side of economy and was noted for his business integrity and continuous watching of the interests of the city. It was in his shop, when on the south-east corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, at a later period, that the motion was drawn up, based on the suggestion of The Telegram, that the reporters be admitted to the committees of the City Council.

At No. 94, John Polson, a bootmaker, who died on his farm at Weston, and John Heron, a dry goods man, carried on business, and the last shop in this row, that of William Howard, the grocer. All this row, from Shaw's store, was erected for various owners by Mr. Joseph Sheard, the architect.

Then came the well known building, with its large yard, known as the Bay Horse Hotel, kept by Thomas Best. This was a house built in the early forties and kept by David Lackie, who was succeeded by Thomas Elgie, and then by Thos. Best, and in turn by Thomas Best, jr., and finally to Brelsford. The Bay Horse Hotel and other buildings have made way for the Yonge street arcade, but the buildings to the north and south are not much changed from those of 1856. The watch establishment of E. M. Morphy was one door north of the Bay Horse.

At No. 100 Nudel & Acres had a dry goods store. Mr. Nudel (J. T.) was afterwards Clerk of the Police Court. Nudel & Acres succeeded James & William McDonald in No. 79 Yonge street, and were in turn succeeded by a Mr. Wylie, now an insurance agent or inspector. At No. 102 J. Gardner was a grocer. This gentleman was afterwards Capt. Gardner, of the Highland Company. At No. 104 the late A. M. Smith carried on an extensive business in the same line. Mr. Smith was subsequently the senior partner of the firm of Smith & Keighley, on the north side of Wellington street, near Yonge, and on the south side of Front street. He accumulated large wealth and was prominent in mercantile, insurance and banking circles. He died last year (1895) at an advanced age, and by his death Toronto lost a leading man and a useful citizen.

At No. 106 was the establishment of J. Cox, a dry goods dealer, and in the same building W. B. Clark, a commission agent. At No. 108 were Charles & Co., grocers, and at the south-east corner of Yonge and Richmond streets, Shapter & Coombe, the druggists, a shop that was afterwards occupied by N. C. Love in the same business.

Prior to Shapter and Coombe's occupation, one Henry J. Rose, formerly a clerk with a Mr. Bettridge, carried on a drug business in this corner until 1862. Mr. Bettridge, a brother of the venerable William Bettridge, so long rector of Woodstock, Ontario, was in his business methods a rigid disciplinarian. Reserved, too, in his deportment with his employes and his partners, he may in this as also some other features be characterized as a typical English tradesman. Mr. Bettridge insisted upon his clerks, who, as not then unusual, lodged upon his premises, reporting themselves not later than ten o'clock, with the exception of Saturday, when, as late closing obtained, no egress in the evening was practical under his regulations. After the closing hour on Saturdays his apprentices' services were availed of for the treatment of his counter tops with a coating of linseed oil and beeswax. This, supplemented by a liberal expenditure of elbow grease, imparted in the course of time a rich tone to those portions of his shop fittings, much more, it is surmised to Mr. Bettridge's satisfaction and that of a few natty observers, than to the appreciation of the manipulators.

At the north-east corner of Yonge and Queen streets—not embraced in the text—Alexander Henderson conducted a store (dry goods and grocery) for some years. Mr. John Rowland succeeded Mr. Henderson in the premises inducted, and at least for several years (if not from the commencement) confined himself to the dry goods trade.

The picture does not give the buildings north of this to Queen street, but the shops were occupied, at No. 112, by Frank Bethell & Sons, the grocers; No. 114 by William Hill, a dry goods dealer. These were at the north-east corner of Yonge and Richmond, and with J. R. Armstrong & Co., the founders, at No. 116, occupied the present site of the Confederation Life Building. At No. 118 was the Globe Hotel, kept in earlier years by Thomas Elgie, but in 1856 by Samuel Thompson. It is now the Tremont House, although after the building of the Yonge Street Arcade the Bay Horse was removed to this building. In an upper room in the north portion of this building was for years the Oddfellows' Hall. At No. 120 was Thomas Robinson, a barber, a pleasant, quick-talking Englishman, who, it was said, could shave the upper lip of seven men in five minutes. At No. 122 was William Hogg, the grocer, and at No. 124 Joseph Hodgson, a fine specimen of an Englishman, a tinsmith, who did an extensive trade. At the south-east corner of Yonge and Queen streets was the store of Andrew McLaughan & Co., who had a tannery on Yonge street, at York Mills, leading leather merchants, and in the upper part of the building James Dove, Clerk, Dunn, a tailor, and Hugh C. Thomson, the corresponding secretary of the Board of Agriculture.

CHAPTER XXVIII. THE MARKET BLOCK.

"The City Buildings"—A Row of Red Brick Shops That Less Than Fifty Years ago was the Retail Dry Goods Centre of Toronto.

The picture in this landmark was taken in 1872, and the names on the signs of the shops will be familiar to a large number of citizens who to-day pass along the south side of King street east. This block is built upon leasehold property belonging to the corporation of Toronto, and extends from Church to West Market streets, and from King to Colborne streets. The buildings are a row of red brick, erected between 1836 and 1840. Owing to the fact that between 1834—1856 there are no street keys in the directories issued, it is impossible to give the exact location of the shops and stores referred to in the landmark at an earlier date than 1856. In the latter year, which we deal with first, at the south-east corner of King and Church streets, G. S. Bowes was an importer of dry goods. One door east, at No. 74, William Jamieson was also in dry goods, and at No. 76, the third door from the corner, Joseph Rogers, the pioneer hatter and furrier of York, had his shop. Mr. Rogers was in business in Toronto about 1817 in the same locality. At No. 80 George Longman was an importer of dry goods, and at No. 82 Dallas & Hamilton were in the same line. John Tully, the architect, brother of Kivas Tully, had an office over No. 82. At No. 84 E. Cooper was in dry goods, and John Mulholland & Co. were earthenware dealers. At No. 88 W. H. Rowe was in boots and shoes, and in the eastern half of the shop was Brown & McCrosson's establishment, the latter gentleman, Mr. Thomas McCrosson, now being the superintendent of the penitentiary at Penetanguishene. At No. 89 E. Crawford was in millinery, and at No. 90 Francis O'Dea was a clothier. Next door east of O'Dea's were "The City Buildings," a row first built on this ground by the corporation. No. 92 was occupied by Thomas Hoskins, importer of dry goods, and the eastern part of the shop by James H. Rogers, the hatter, son of Mr. Joseph Rogers. Mr. J. H. Rogers is now at the corner of Church street. At No. 94 J. M. Campbell was in dry goods. At No. 96 W. B. Hamilton was in merchant tailoring, and at No. 98 Robert W. Champion was a hardware dealer, and in the same building Wm. Langley manufactured boots and shoes. At No. 100 R. Hastings had a retail dry goods establishment, and at No. 102 J. Hutchison was in boots and shoes, and in the eastern half of the same number Wil-

MARKET BLOCK, KING STREET EAST.

Ham Macfie had a fashionable dry goods store. At the corner a well-known man, Walter McFarlane, was also in retail dry goods. Messrs. Macfie and McFarlane were both Scotchmen and popular with a large Scotch colony in Toronto in those days. Mrs. Baldwin Jackes, of St. Joseph street, is a daughter of Mr. Macfie. Mr. Walter McFarlane afterwards went to the county of Huron, where he died some years ago.

In 1866 No. 103, the third store from the corner, was occupied by J. H. Rogers, No. 105 at the corner, and No. 107, the second shop, being vacant. The fourth shop was No. 111, that of McCrosson & Co., hatters. In the upper floor of this building, No. 117, was E. J. Palmer, the photographer, and W. Hines, also in that business. Palmer was a pioneer in his line. He was the first man in Toronto to introduce photography and had the run of the best business in the city. He subsequently went into the trade of photographers' supplies, and was succeeded in business on King street near Yonge by Mr. J. B. Hay, now an official of the City Hall, and in his time an expert at his work. The tall building, No. 119, was the large retail house of G. & J. W. Cox, enterprising dry goods men, and the largest newspaper advertisers of the period. At No. 123 James H. Jones sold fruit, and on a Saturday night in the peach season this luscious fruit was, after nine o'clock, offered at twelve and a half cents a basket, for, as Mr. Jones said, "It won't keep over Sunday." A hundred peaches for an English six pence was not bad value.

In 1872, the year that the photograph from which this sketch is made, the south-east corner of Church and King, No. 105, was occupied by R. J. Hunter & Co., in dry goods. It is now the mart of J. H. Rogers, the furrier. The old firm of Crowther & Tjil, the barristers, had offices in the first floor of this building. In No. 107 A. Blachford sold boots and shoes. Neither of these two stores is in the picture, the first shop shown being that of James H. Rogers, the hatter and furrier, No. 109. Mr. Joseph Rogers, father of J. H. Rogers, was in business in this locality about sixty years anterior to 1872. At No. 111 Thos. McCrosson, the hatter, had his store. McCrosson went out of business a few years later.

From Nos. 115 to 121 G. & J. W. Cox had a large dry goods house. In their day the Messrs. Cox were the largest newspaper advertisers in Toronto. In the top floor of this building was the studio of Eli J. Palmer, photographer in Toronto. He was succeeded a few years later by J. B. Hay, now an official in the City Hall. The shop No. 125, was that of James Lane & Co., boot and shoe dealers, and No. 127 was occupied by E. Pearson in dry goods. George S. Sackman, the tailor, occupied No. 127, and H. Caldwell, the hatter, was at No. 129. The stores east from those occupied by Messrs. Cox were double shops divided. Nos. 137-139 comprised the fur and hat store of Mr. C. K. Rogers, a son of Mr. Joseph Rogers and brother of J. H. Rogers. Messrs. P. & N. Melady were in dry goods and subsequently conducted an auction business in that branch of trade. No. 145 was the emporium of J. Foster & Son, a hardware house, on this site and in this block for many years. In No. 147 C. Martin & Co. were tailors, and at No. 149 J. Barnes dealt in boots and shoes, while at No. 151, Coun & Allison were tailors and the corner shop, No. 153, was vacant. This shop is now occupied by C. Martin & Co., tailors and dealers in ready made clothing. This brings us to West Market square, and on the east side is the St. Lawrence buildings, with Lyman Bros., as druggists in the west wing of the building, for the lower part of the wing was in one shop. The centre had the main doorway of the hall and the entrance to the arcade, while in the east wing was a narrow shop where books and stationery were sold by Magnus Shewan, an Orkney man, with plenty of energy. Shaver & Bell had a dry goods shop in the store east of Shewan's, and the Toronto Tea Store was on the south-west corner of East Market square, a street which is really a continuation south of Jarvis street.

In the St. Lawrence Hall building, now occupied on the first floor by the Medical Health office and the Park Commissioner's office, was and is on the second floor a fine hall, which, twenty years ago was the best in Toronto. The best artists in song and most noted men in oratory have appeared before a Toronto audience in this hall. The building was erected in 1850, after the great fire of 1849, which destroyed St. James' Cathedral and the row of houses on the opposite side of the street. The wings of the hall, which contain the shops, are the property of private individuals, but the ground is leasehold. The buildings of the St. Lawrence Hall on the north-east corner of East Market Square were occupied as follows: No. 163, William Strachan, grocer; No. 165, Chandler & Platts, in retail dry goods; and No. 167, Hugh Miller & Co., druggists.

All the buildings in this landmark are in the same condition as when built, nearly sixty years ago; indeed, the only buildings rebuilt is Oak Hall, on the site of the G. & J. W. Cox buildings; and the large brick building owned by the Anglican Synod, on the south-east corner of East Market Square. In the early forties a lane ran from King street to Market lane (Colborne street) through the centre of the block on the south side of King, about the east side of the present Oak Hall, but the lane was afterwards built upon. Passing along the north side of King street, and looking at these buildings on the south side, some have had slight ornamentations over the upper windows, and the shop fronts have, of course, been changed; but otherwise the pioneer of 1840, if he were to promenade the street in 1896 would be vividly reminded of the days when John Richey's men were engaged in the erection of these buildings.

CHAPTER XXIX.

S. W. CORNER OF KING AND YONGE.

A Site That Was the Home of a Prominent Retail Dry Goods Firm Nearly Sixty Years Ago—Reminiscences of an Old Scotch Firm

The lot situated at the south-west corner of King and Yonge streets, where the Dominion Bank now stands, is said to have changed hands on easy terms at an early date in the annals of the town of York, the consideration, in fact, consisting of an old silver watch.

For many years prior to the severance of its connection with Canada, a wealthy Scottish firm, Messrs. Archibald Laurie & Co., composed of three brothers, carried on an extensive wholesale and retail dry goods business at the above corner.

The engraving shows the same shop on the south-west corner of King and Yonge streets, where now stands the Dominion Bank, the entrance being on King street, almost at the very spot where the door of the bank is. On the opposite, or south-east corner, was the store of Betley & Brown, afterwards Betley & Kay. Now it is the office of the C. P. R.

The headquarters of the house in Canada were located at St. John's gate, in the city of Quebec, and the success attending its operations there led to the opening of branches at Place d'Armes, Montreal, as also at Toronto. A few years antecedent to their withdrawal about 1846 from Canada, possibly anticipative of that event, Messrs. Laurie established retail branches at Niagara, St. Catharines, Cobourg and Port Hope, partly through which expansion, whatever the object, a material reduction in the volume of stock was ultimately ef-fectured, and the labour of "winding out" correspondingly lessened.

Not a few of the dry goods men who attained to provincial prominence in the fifties and sixties graduated at Quebec, Montreal or Toronto, under the benign auspices of the house of Laurie. The Messrs. Laurie's first manager at Toronto was a Mr. Hargrave, that gentleman being succeeded by Isaac Gilmour, who is still a resident of the city. Mr. Gilmour, in resigning his position, formed a partnership with a Mr. Coulson, in conjunction with whom an exclusive dry goods trade was long conducted in premises situated on the west side of Yonge street, between Front and Wellington streets. In the course of his active business career, Mr. Gilmour as a personal investment erected on a detached plan several ample and sightly brick cottages on the south side of Bloor street, at its intersection with Jarvis street. The original design of the buildings, though doubtless carefully studied, has been much varied by the addition of a second storey and other improvements in keeping with advanced taste or modern requirement. Sir Daniel Wilson long occupied one of the Gilmour cottages, and probably received his friend, Dr. Robert Chambers, of Edinburgh, there, on the occasion of that gentleman visiting him some time subsequent to 1854. His equally distinguished brother, Dr. William Chambers, made a tour of the United States and Canada in 1853, which resulted in the publication during the following year of "Things as They Are in America." The work contains a brief account of Toronto and its educational institutions.

Mr. William Harris Dow succeeded Mr. Gilmour as manager at Messrs. Laurie's, and on the retirement of his principals pursued the dry goods business in a retail way on his own account, at their old stand, under the style of W. H. Dow & Co. Rigidly conservative in his procedure, a portion of Mr. Dow's stock eventually became so antedated as to approximate to the contents of a veritable curiosity shop, and prove attractive merely to customers possessed of archaic notions or hypercritical particularity, who could generally succeed in "ticking off" their list of wants, however unique, by recourse to the Dow emporium. Mr. Dow's trade becoming inactive, and embarrassment setting in, he was compelled to abandon his business not long anterior to the acquirement of its site by the Dominion Bank for the erection of a head office. Closely coincident with Mr. Dow's retirement his health declined, and death occurred after a short illness. Socially Mr. Dow led quite an isolated existence, and was exceedingly methodical in his habits. Although by no means inappreciative of humour, he was reserved to the verge of eccentricity in his intercourse with employes or the public. During a residence in Toronto covering a period of over thirty years, Mr. Dow is not known to have extended his visits in a social capacity to more than one or possibly two houses, where of a Sunday evening he occasionally joined the family circle over a cup of tea.

of the day the circumstance of any absence at roll call duly noted on its pages, with a caution attached by the assistant manager, for the edification of the delinquent; to which his attention was pointedly directed on the following morning, when the journal again came into requisition. The doors of the residential portion of the house were locked by one of the younger hands at 10 p.m., and the keys delivered to the assistant manager, any irregularity in the matter of ingress on the part of employes being recorded by that functionary. On SOUTH-WEST CORNER YONGE AND KING STREETS SIXTY YEARS AGO.

When Mr. Dow had charge of Messrs. Laurie's establishment, as not unusual at that period, all the employes, including the manager, were boarded and lodged on the premises, and although the proprietors were anything but inconsiderate of the comfort of their clerks, the business was rigidly conducted by "rule and line." Every lawful morning at six in summer and seven o'clock in winter the whole staff had to report personally at the retail department and register their names in a journal provided mainly for that purpose. After the expiration of fifteen minutes, the book was securely laid aside, and in the course alternate Sundays one of the two youngest employes mounted guard at 5 p.m., and, in accordance with regular custom, all the clerks to be found in the house at 9 p.m., including the manager, assembled at that hour in the dining room to hear a portion of Scripture read by a junior.

Meals were served in that spacious apartment, necessarily situated in the third storey, at the end of a long corridor, and the culinary operations performed, unavoidably, at a remote distance, in the basement of the building, an arrangement, in the absence of elevators, rather inconvenient to all concerned. To secure at all times attention to the calls of customers, the staff was divided into two detachments, known as the first and second parties, these weekly alternating. Mr. Dow, as became the manager, was invariably of the first party, and occupied the seat of honour. In the course of a repast Mr. Dow was scarcely, if ever, observed to hazard a remark, except on the occasion of one of Mr. Laurie's visits. Protracted silence becoming at times trying to young blood, it was in some instances rudely broken by a peal of laughter, followed by a general stampede; the disturbance perhaps incited through a ludicrous gesture of some one at table, or the refrain from a negro melody in the distance on the part of another, who, securing repletion in advance of his companions, had failed to stand upon the "order of his going." A clerk who had made himself conspicuous by repeated frivolities at table was, by sentence of the manager, relegated to the kitchen for his fare during a fortnight. As the cook, however, a buxom lassie, happened to be good-looking as well as good natured, the punishment, notwithstanding the fact of its registration in the journal, could scarcely be deemed penitential. The genius of the rising generation at the period under review seems to have been more "ductile to merriment" than obtains in our matter of fact era, and practical joking, some of it decidedly sensational, was not infrequent in the best regulated institutions, mercantile as well as domestic.

The Bank of England enjoys the security incident to the possession of an armoury and, as befitted its importance, the Laurie establishment during the rebellion of 1837 was provided by the Government with a full supply of flint locks supplemented by the requisite ammunition and accoutrements.

Mr. Laurie's junior hands were generally scions of respectable families, and frequently pupils of Mr. John Boyd, the principal of the celebrated Bay street academy, located immediately to the south of the office of The Evening Telegram. It was customary for Mr. Boyd, particularly in the cause of parents in straitened circumstances, or those of comparatively short residence in the city, to practice "the luxury of doing good" by introducing such of the sons as had departed themselves creditably at his school to the notice of the leading merchants. So potent was Mr. Boyd's influence in the community that his recommendation usually bore fruit, and many men of mark have been indebted in more ways than one for a fair start in the battle of life to the good offices of that gentleman.

No porter being in the employ of Mr. Laurie the sweeping of the store, cleaning of windows, handling of ponderous shutters, shovelling of snow with delivery of parcels fell to the lot of the two youngest assistants, and those duties were considered sufficiently onerous, without attention to the item of foot wear, other than that appertaining to their own toilet. An unwritten domestic enactment, as well as a feeling of independence, necessitated the performance of the latter service by the denizens of the establishment, each for himself inclusive, from the manager downwards. The burnishing of boots was performed in the attic, and on a certain occasion the two youngest hands chanced to enter that department together for an application of Day and Martin to their pedal coverings, as usual prior to retiring for the night. The process had just commenced when the boys were confronted by the arrival of half a dozen figures attired in white sheets, and garnished with cross-belts and cartouche boxes, each carrying a large musket. The squad, obedient to command, promptly grounded arms, fixed bayonets and cocked their pieces. They had, however, barely time to prepare for a click of the triggers, ere the assistant manager, who had heard the racket, appeared on deck, his presence resulting in a hurried scamper of the force, some to the dark recesses of the loft, and others through a trap to the icy roof, where the latter, slipping from one level to another, only saved their lives by means of a heavy ladder, which they succeeded in clutching at the eve in their perilous descent.

On another occasion, during the manager's absence at the branches, a few of these reckless youngsters obtained access to the pot of lampblack used in the department for addressing packages, and running amuck at the midnight hour, ornamented every office sign on both sides of King street, from Bay street to market square, winding up their nocturnal revels, in retaliation for a fancied slight received from one of the clerks across the way, by addressing their efforts to the production of a series of emblems on the gable of a store occupying the south-east corner of King and Yonge streets, immediately opposite to the Laurie establishment. Owing to the absorbent qualities of the brick, and the scale of the decorations, the wall, despite several attempts at their removal, exhibited (as in the instance of a gigantic pad-lock which "adorned" at an early date the residence of one of our citizens) faint outlines of the drawings, such being ultimately effaced, only through recourse to a couple of heavy coats of paint, applied for the sake of uniformity to the entire structure.

And so we have reminiscences in connection with an old corner, to the early history of which the vast majority of the citizens may possibly, having regard to the passage of time, attach about as much importance as to the determination of the boundaries of Utopia, or the location of the Castle of Indolence.

Now, strictly speaking, a barque is a three-masted vessel, square rigged on the fore and main masts and with fore-and-aft mizzen, and as the vessel in question has but two masts and is fore-and-aft rigged throughout, it is difficult to say what ground there is for calling her a barque. But on her stern is seen in white letters "Barque Swallow, of Port Credit," and it was this curious name which caused me to make enquiries about the vessel, and to get her history, which is as follows :

THE "BARQUE SWALLOW."

CHAPTER XXX. THE BARQUE SWALLOW."

One of the Stone Hooker Fleet—Probably the Oldest Vessel in that Work on Lake Ontario.

Of the many vessels of which the stone fleet of Port Credit is made up, perhaps the most interesting is a white stone-hooker called the Barque Swallow.

In the latter half of the thirties, when York was getting accustomed to her new name Toronto, this vessel was simply an open scow, carrying sand from the Island to fill in the water front near where the old jail—the third one—was shortly afterwards erected. At that time she had no deck, and each of her bilges was formed of a single tree lollowed out. About 1850 an old salt water sailor named John Sponton, a man well known to the older vessel men around Toronto, bought this sand scow, and fitted her out as a stone-hooker. He had her decked over, lengthened her top-sides, and rigged her as a schooner, and as he was a salt water tar of the old school, and so naturally partial to the square rig, he gave his vessel a square fore-topsail; and it was on this slight pretext that he called her the "Barque Swallow," just as another stone-hooker which formerly had a square topsail is called the "Brig Rover." All the Swallow's blocks were painted a bright pink colour, and she was as fine looking a stone-hooker as ever carried stone to Toronto.

After being owned for several years by Mr. Sponton, the Barque Swallow changed hands, and since then almost every vessel owner in Port Credit has owned her at one time or another. One of her former owners is Captain Miller, of Port Credit, and he is the source from which all the information here given comes. In course of time an ordinary gaff-topsail was substituted for her square one, her old bilges were removed and new ones put in, and to-day she has very little to distinguish her from any other white scow-built vessel in the stone trade.

At present the Barque Swallow is hauled up for repairs at Port Credit, on the eastern bank of the river, but it will not be long before she may again be seen once or twice a week at the foot of West Market street or over at the eastern gap. The accompanying drawing shows her as she is at present.

Such is the history of this vessel, which was built at this port, and has always traded to this port during her sixty years of life. She bids fair to reach her "three score and ten," which is about four times the usual age of a stonehooker.

CHAPTER XXXI.

RELICS OF YEARS GONE BY.

Delving Among the Dusty and Musty Documents of the Far Away Past—What was Brought to Light.

On the upper flat of the old Adelaide street court house is a series of small rooms used as storage place for the official documents of the various County Courts, sheriffs' and bailiffs' papers, and all the odds and ends representing the accumulation of many years. Occasionally these dust-laden mouldy smelling and spider woven rooms are opened, but not often.

Recently the companies insuring the building have given notice that these old documents and books must be safely enclosed in boxes. Housekeeper Hull's men have attacked the well-nigh forgotten rooms and fought their way through a mass of debris, documentary and otherwise, and brought the jumble into some sort of order.

Mr. Robertson, of the County Court Clerk's office, has been delving among the thousands of old documents in one of the little rooms and unearthed some interesting relics. Here is a literal copy of a town clerk's record of a town meeting held at Joseph Hewett's Inn, Newmarket, January 6th, 1834:—"I suppos that the may think it verry strange not Seeing the 2 assessers and Collectors Names on the list But when they was Nominated and Cried by the Constable the Cry of the people was we want none we have no use for any we are not allowed to have our member to Represent us in the house of parliament and we think that we have no use for any Such officers from thy obedeaunt Servant."

On the back of the document is this: "Proceedings of a Townmeeting For the Clerk of the Pece Whitchurch."

A North Gwillimbury town meeting held in 1830 decreed that fences "must be five feet high, well proportioned, built with logs or rails. Hogs must not run at large from May 1st to the middle of October. The rest of the year they may be free commoners. Boars and rams may be altered if found off the inclosures of their owners."

Suspended from the ceiling is the branch of a tree used March 20th, 1874, as an exhibit in the suit of Power v. Salls. It bears the signature of Walter McKenzie, Clerk. For what purpose it was used as an exhibit no one can tell. But it must remain because these old paraphernalia of the court must be kept "forever."

Among the papers are assessment rolls of various municipalities for 1818, and the seal of the old town of York for 1820. The population returns of the county for 1817 may be seen there, as well as many other interesting and time-worn relics of the early days of "Muldry Lit l. York."

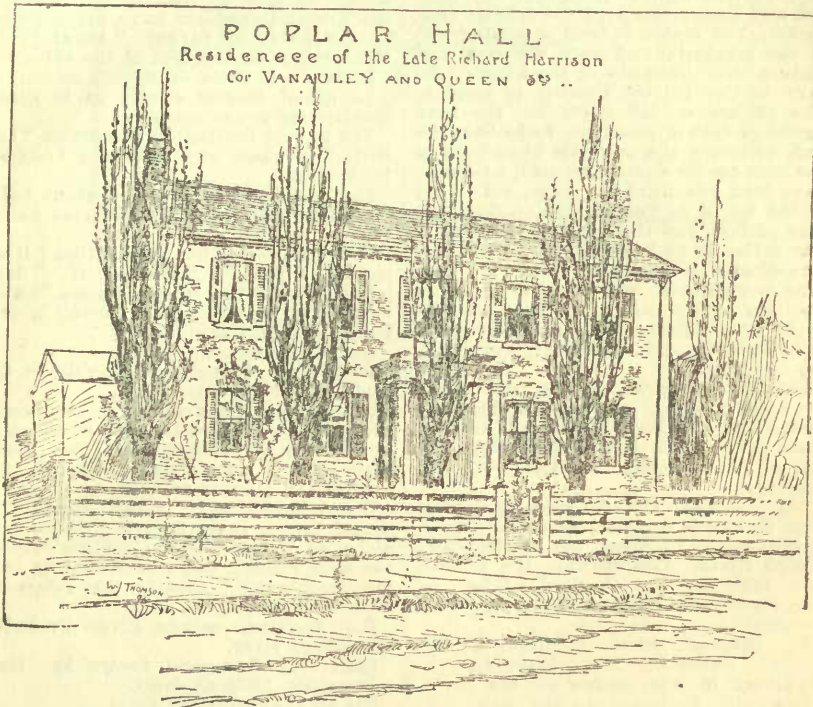

Attached to a faded red tape is a large waxen seal, about three inches in diameter, bearing, on one side, the coat of arms of Great Britain, and on the other this inscription: "Sigil Prov. Nas Can Sup. Imperi Porrecta Majestas Custode Rerum Caesare." Below this is imprinted, "Georgius III. D. G. Bri. Fr. et Hib. Rex. F. D. Brun et Lun. Lux., S. R. I., A. R., Thes et ei."

On the lower part is a double cornucopia surmounted by an anchor, with its appendant cable, a sword, wreath and battle axe.

The seal, one might suppose, was simply used as a model, or was on file as the approved seal for the official business of a century since; there is no mark showing that it was ever attached to any document. It is too heavy to serve any such purpose.

covered the main entrance way to the house. The structure itself was of red brick, strictly conventional in design, and with nothing to lighten the front except the green window shutters, that always had the merit of being kept a colour that harmonized with a grass plot that, if not expensive, was at least well kept. Queen street west in 1864, and for twenty years before that date, had been a favourite residential quarter. The

POPLAR HALL, RESIDENCE OF THE LATE RICHARD HARRISON.

CHAPTER XXXII. POPLAR HALL.

An Old-Time Residence that Stood at the North East Corner of Queen and Vanauley.

On the north-east corner of Queen street west and Vanauley street stood from 1835 the residence of Richard Harrison, the father of the late Chief Justice R. A. Harrison. The building had not much of attractiveness, as far as its outside appearance was concerned. Five poplar trees guarded the middle of the typical wood fence, and a colonial porch of decent architecture

Hon. Donald McDonald lived on the south side, of the road, Captain Thos. Dick years before had lived on the south side, further west. The Hon. J. H. Cameron was one lot east of Harrison's. William Armstrong, the civil engineer, was west, on the north side, at No. 368, and at No. 386 resided Alexander Macdonnell, the barrister, now of Osgoode Hall. Mr. Richard Harrison was clerk of the market. He had married Frances, daughter of Rev. Alexander Hall, of Newton Butler, Fermanagh, Ireland.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

French Map of the Lake by a Military Geographer at Fort Frontenac, Cataract, (Kingston)—The French and English Fleets

Among the late finds of old documents and drawings, perhaps the one that relates to this landmark, or, rather, "lake-mark," is the most important, in that it not only gives a map of Lake Ontario in 1757, but also a picture of the English and French fleets on the lake at that period. The sketch is from a photograph of the original hand-made drawing and picture in a portfolio in the King's Library in the British Museum in London. The picture of the fleets is the first known picture of vessels on Lake Ontario, and, although the originals have been in the museum for a century, and, no doubt, have been examined by many, yet it fell to the lot of a Torontonian to find this rare picture and the accompanying map. The latter is as accurate as any of the period; and, now that it is for the first time re-published, will prove a valuable addition to the literature that has already been collected concerning Toronto, Lake Ontario, and the country surrounding the lake.

The first paragraph is the title in the left-hand corner of the map. Each name on the map has been translated, and the place located, so that readers of to-day can at once become familiar with the locality.

"Map of Lake Ontario recently drawn, with its ports designed separately on a larger scale, to show the English and French fleets. Also showing the vessels, rigs, their number of guns. Done at Frontenac, 4th October, 1757, by La Broquerie.

Mr. Benjamin Sulte, of Ottawa, has kindly furnished the following explanation of the names of the ports, rivers, etc., indicated on the map. The enumeration commences at the embouchure of the Niagara river, and proceeds by way of Burlington Bay around the north shore of Lake Ontario to the Thousand Islands, thence westward alongside the south shore to the place of starting.

Fort Niagara. The spelling shows that Mr. de la Broquerie followed no rule of orthography, as did many of his contemporaries.

P. a Mascoutins should be Pointe aux Mascoutins. That nation was also called "Nation du Feu" by the French, and Astistaerons by the Iroquois, which means the same thing: "The men of the Fire." The maps of the present day give no name.

Le Platon—an expression used by the French to indicate a tableland, rising above the riverside or the open plain. We have le Platon de Lotbiniere and le Platon des Trois Rivieres, which both command the navigation of the St. Lawrence on those two points.

Batture de Niagara — The shallow water of the Niagara. This refers to the well known shoal at the mouth of the river.

Point du Moralle. Perhaps Pointe de Montreal, (though not referring to the island or city of that name). Some of the French-Canadians have always been in the habit of saying "Moral" for Montreal, a contraction of the syllables.

Marais a la Biche—Roe-buck swamp.

Le grand Marais should be le grand Marais—the great marsh.

The bay of Burlington is marked "Lac trute." I would say "lac aux truites," trout lake.

Fond du Lac was so called about 1670, at a time when the Mississegas had a village there.

R. des Deux Folles. Two Follies? If so, must be written "Folies." If "deux folles"—"the two foolish women." This may have been the small creek a few miles east of Oakville.

R. au Credit—Credit River.

Presille de Toronto. Presqu'île — the peninsula of Toronto.

From Lake Toronto (now Lake Simcoe) the road to the present site of the city of Toronto is indicated on the early maps of the country. The site of the city called Gandaseteigon.

Grand Ecort, petit Ecort, should be Grand Ecore, petit Ecore. "Ecore is a place where there is no shallow water, the bank coming down precipitously into the deep water." Clearly this refers to Scarborough Heights.

R. au Saumon. Salmon River. Probably the Rouge river.

Canaraski—Ganeraski, known by that name since 1669 at least.

Pte au Chapeau—Hat Point.

Quintee, Kente, Quente, Quinte, all variations of the Indian name.

Pte. du Detour—"Where you turn sharp around the point of land." Probably Point Salmon, Prince Edward County.

Pte. au Gravois—Gravel Point, now Point Petre, Prince Edward County.

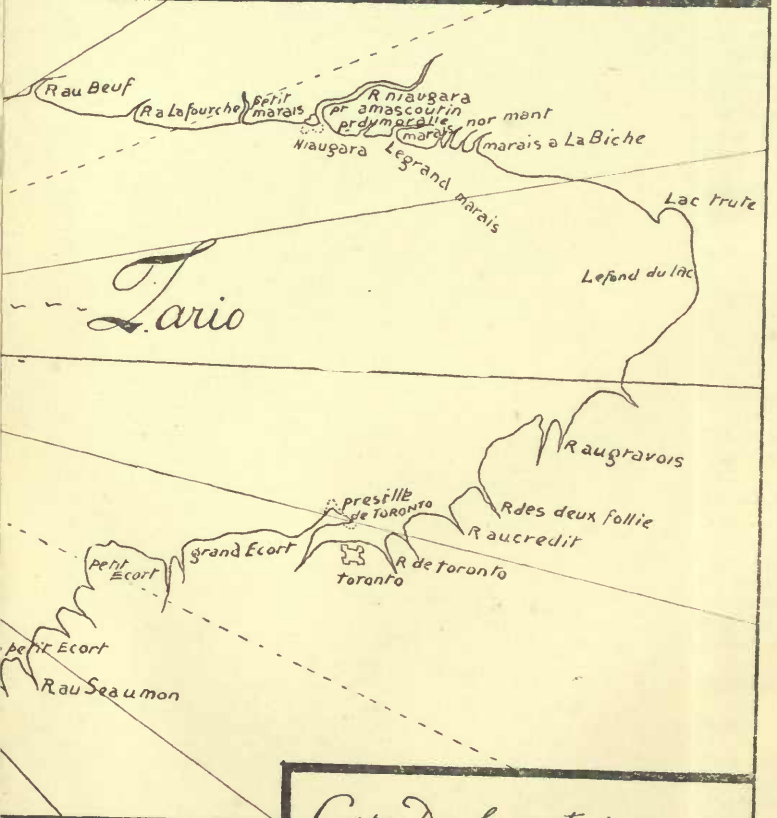

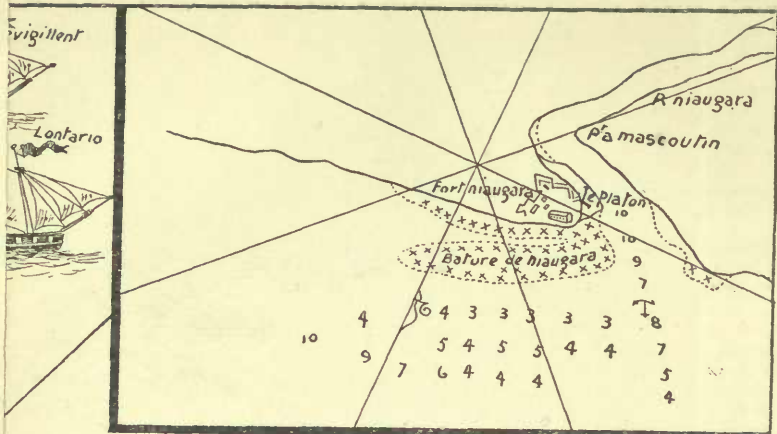

Pte a la barque—Bark or barge point. On the shore of Prince Edward peninsula.

According to the latest atlas it has no local name now.

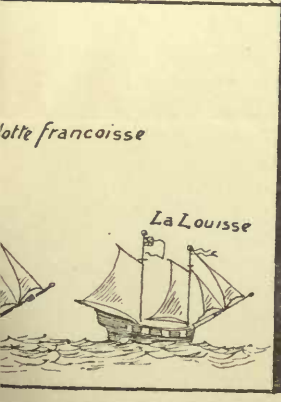

Ille au Goualan—Goeland—Seagull point. Now known as Point Traverse.

Ille des coins de terre—The island full of nooks and corners. It is not shown on the latest maps—probably washed away.

Baie des Coins—This bay is called "Riviere Barbu" on the map of Brehan de Gallinee, 1670. That term corresponds to the words "enforcements," "coins," "recoins," "dentelures," "echancrures." It was the French name of part of the Bay of Quinte.

Pte Latraverse should be spelled "Pointe de la Traverse." It means the point where they cross the water to the neighbouring islands. The name does not refer to the present Point Traverse.

Grand Ance, or rather Grande Anse—Grand or Great Creek, near the present Collins Bay. That name existed there in 1680.

Ile Tonty—Given to Henry de Tonty—by La Salle in 1679. On the map of 1680 that island is shown opposite the bay marked Toncoganignon, the same as Tonaguignon of the map of La Broquerie, now Amherst Island.

Between Grande Anse and Fort Frontenac, the map of 1680 mentions Pointe Dalonne, after the name of Pierre Guignard, alias d'Olonne or Dalonne, who appears to have been an associate of La Salle.

Ile aux Cochons (now Garden Island) was given by La Salle about the year 1676 to Jacques Cauchois (corruption: Cauchon, Cochons, pigs), who was a native of Rouen (1652), the birthplace of La Salle. Cauchois arrived at Fort Frontenac with La Salle in 1675, and remained with him until 1684, when he married and settled in Montreal, whilst La Salle went to the Gulf of Mexico.

Between Tonty and Cauchois lies an island given to Francois Dauphin, alias Laforet, by La Salle in 1679. Laforet, Tonty, Cauchois, deserve to be mentioned as the three best employes of La Salle. The modern name of the islet is Simcoe Island.

"Grend Ile," on the map of La Broquerie, is called "Grande Isle 10 lieues," on the La Salle map of 1680, and on a map of 1685, or thereabout, "Ganonkouenot," now Wolfe Island.

Ile au Chevreuil, now Carleton Island, south of Grand Isle, is marked Isle a la Biche on the map of 1680. The island situate behind that one, and opposite Pointe a la Galette, marked Ile au Chevre on La Broquerie map, is not indicated on the document of 1680.

Galette is biscuit, cake or "hard tack." Pointe de Galette is now the small cape of Cape Vincent.

The two small islands without names on La Broquerie map, below Fort Frontenac, are called Ile aux Cerfs on the map of 1680. Their modern names are Howe Island and Garden Island.

Still below these islands a river which flows into the St. Lawrence is styled Gananoncoui (Gananoque). The modern name is the same.

Le Mariegeau—now Deadman's bay, opposite Wolfe Island, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence.

Pte du Moralle—Montreal? At the entrance to Kingston harbour.

The present Cape Vincent is called Grand Campement—"The Great Camping Grounds," in the map of 1680.

Iles de Niaoures—pronounced Niaveres. Islets to the westward of Cape Vincent.

Bay de Niaoures—now Sackett's Harbour and Black Bay. Niaoure is the form commonly adopted by the French of the seventeenth century.

Fort Villiers, named after Coulon de Villiers, born in Canada, an officer of many years service, Acadia 1747, Ohio 1754, Niagara 1755. His brother Coulon de Jumonville, having been shot by order of Washington, he attacked Fort Necessity in 1754 and captured it. Early in the summer of 1756 he was sent, with de Lery to Fort Frontenac, to build the fort above mentioned and began to attack the garrison of Chouaguen (Oswego) preparatory to the arrival of Montcalm. Fort de Villier was across the bay directly west of the present site of Watertown, N. Y.

R. a Mr. Le Conte—Probably Black River, which enters Lake Ontario at Irving, N. Y.

Cataragaren—Name unknown.

R. au Sable was Sandy Creek, running into Sackett's Harbour. Villiers put his camp at the mouth of that river, and kept the English garrison of Chouaguan (Oswego) constantly on the alert.

R. a Laplanche—Saw board.

R. a la Famine—Well known long before 1757.

R. a la Grosse Ecorce—Thick bark of a tree. These are small cuts at the south-eastern end of the lake.

Lecabaret—An inn, probably established by some French camp follower.

Three leagues east of Chouaguen (Oswego) was a place called Anse aux Cabanes, where Rigaud de Vaudreuil stopped on the 10th August, 1756, to commence the siege of the forts of Chouaguen.

F. Ontario—Also at the mouth of the Oswego.

River des Notagues—Onnontagues, now the Oswego River.

Ft. de Chouaguen—Where the city of Oswego is now.

Fort au Beuf—Otherwise Fort George, 1800 feet from Fort Chouaguen.

Les Bouceaux—Sodus Point, N. Y.

R. du Chicot, Chicot Stump—Not named on modern maps.

Baie des Goyogouins—At Rochester, N.Y.

R. du Fort des Sable—Sandy Creek.

Pte. au Tourtes (aux tourtes, wild pigeons)—Near Carlyon, N. Y.

R. au Beuf (au boeuf, buffalo)—A Buffalo river flows into Lake Ontario near Carlton Hollow, N. Y.

R. a la Fourche—Fork, not indicated on modern maps.

Petit Marais—The small marsh. It still exists on the south shore of Lake Ontario, some ten or twelve miles east of the mouth of the Niagara River.

In 1756, early in the spring, at Fort Frontenac, the French built two barges, one for 12 guns, the other for 16. They cruised on Lake Ontario under the command of Pierre Boucher de la Broquerie and Hyppolite Pepin-Laforce, who succeeded in sinking some of the small vessels belonging to the English, and obliged the others to remain in Chouaguen River. (Ferland: Cours d'Histoire du Canada, 11,541.)

A report published in the collection printed by the Quebec Legislature in 1885 (IV. 37) states the following facts:—

"Our small squadron which is on Lake Ontario and is five ships strong, having met the English squadron, ten ships strong, has fought a battle. We took the English admiral, put the rest of the ships to flight and drove two of their vessels ashore under full sail near Fort Chouaguen."

Edmund Falgairolle, in "Montcalm Before Posterity," says (p. 64) that a French detachment had been posted on the lake, putting at its disposal "a little fleet destined to disturb the English barques." M. de Villiers had the cleverness to hide himself one day behind some clumps of trees, and to harass by the musketry of his weak troop the frail craft of the enemy. The Indians whom he had under his orders on this occasion were of a remarkable and almost foolhardy energy. At the moment when the English vessels, surprised by this unforeseen attack, wished to escape by flight from the fire of our soldiers, the Indians threw themselves into the water, pursued them by swimming, and reached some of them when they sank. This skirmish cost the lives of several English soldiers, and enabled us to make some prisoners. It had one great effect, that of restoring the morale of our Indians."

pointed the rendezvous of the troops. (Ferland II., 541.)

Ferland (11,553) remarks that Montcalm, having taken Oswego, the great abundance of ammunition and provisions found in that place, and in addition the British fleet armed to maintain the supremacy on the lake, all fell into the hands of the French.

The above is enough to show that there were armed vessels on Lake Ontario the year of the taking of Chouaguen.

L^a Broquerie died in 1762, at Boucherville. His descendants are living amongst us. They are all good and intelligent Canadians.

Laforce fought again on the lakes in 1776-82, and lived to a bright old age. Sir Hector Langevin is his great-grandson by his mother's side.

Extract from Journal of Occurrences, 1755-6:

"The navigation of Lake Ontario is an object of consequence and we have four vessels on it. The largest of these carry fourteen 12-pounders. The English have some craft on it also."

June 12, 1756, Montcalm to D'Argenson:

"The navigation of Lake Ontario is most important. The English have three sloops with some three and five pounders. They are building two, which, it is reported, will be of twenty guns. We have four vessels, one of which carries twenty four and six pounders and eighty men; the others have forty men and ten four pounders."

1757, Rev. Claude G. Cocquant to his brother:

"Our little fleet on Lake Ontario, in number about five vessels, having met the English fleet, amounting to ten, gave them battle. We have taken the English admiral. Afterwards we put the others to flight and obliged two to run ashore with all sails set."

1758, August 27, Dorel to Marquis de Belle Isle, giving account of the destruction of Fort Frontenac:

"No precaution was taken with our navy. The English, more careful than we, have burnt it, with the exception of two 20 gun brigs, which they have preserved."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE OLD FORT.

An Official Document That Tells Something of the State of the Old Fort From 1802-4.

In that treasury of Canadian historical knowledge, the Archives Department at Ottawa, are many interesting papers concerning early Toronto. Nearly all of these have been published in the Landmarks, and it was thought that the supply was exhausted, until two interesting official documents were found, concerning the old York Fort, from 1802-4. The first is a letter from R. H. Bruyeres, Capt. Royal Engineers, who had charge of the work in connection with the erection of the fort. The Old Fort was originally erected about 1797. There were built at that time seven officers' huts, two small huts for an hospital, one for a bake-house and one for a canteen; there was also a blockhouse. The seven huts alluded to were on the east side of the fort, and were demolished about twenty-five years ago. The blockhouse alluded to is the one that stands near the east entrance of the Old Fort. The blockhouse in the town of York stood at the Don river. These buildings, except the huts that stood on the left hand side of the east entrance to the Old Fort were not destroyed in the war of 1812, but the blockhouse and other buildings in the fort were burned. These included the magazine, the carriage and engine shed and the storehouse for provisions for the troops and for the Indians. In 1797 the huts referred to in the letter were those in the immediate west side of the Garrison Creek. The letter referring to these is dated 12th September, 1802.

The second letter is dated 2nd January, 1804, and is from Gother Mann, Colonel, commanding the Royal Engineers. He was well known to residents of 1797-1804. Prior to his departure for England in July of 1804 he wrote to the military authorities with regard to the erection of public buildings in York and Upper Canada. In 1804 the log frame covered buildings at the foot of Berkeley street were used by the Legislature. These were burned in 1812. Plans were then submitted for a brick structure for the Legislative requirements as well as for the official residents. These plans had been given in Vol. I. of the Landmarks, but the buildings according to these designs were never built. There does not seem to be any further reference to the carrying out of the suggestions of Gother Mann. The red brick buildings, an account of which is given in Vol. I., were erected in 1816 after the war, and were burned down in 1824, and in 1823-29 the Parliament buildings on Front street were erected.

From Canadian Archives, Series C., Vol. 333, P. 6, York.

The several huts erected for temporary quarters for officers and men, also the blockhouses and store houses, are in good repair for the number of men at present required to occupy them and stores to be lodged. There are:

Sir,—I transmit herewith sundry estimates to be submitted for Lieutenant-General Hunter's approbation; in fact, most of the services they are to provide for have already received the Lieutenant-General's sanction, and are in a great measure performed. All those for York, Fort George District and Kingston have been first sent here by you, except I believe, the sum of £8 17s. 9d. (in No. 1) for connecting the picketting round the Octagon Blockhouse at Fort George, and which, as Capt. Nicolls reports, and as it appears to me, is essentially necessary for the security of that building and the ammunition, etc., therein.

Quebec, 16th July, 1804.

Sir,—The short time I have to remain in this country and the imperfect information I have on the subject of the public buildings in contemplation to be erected at York, in Upper Canada, together with my want of experience as to the accommodations required in buildings of this sort, are circumstances which render it impossible, as I have already stated in a former letter, to comply with Lieutenant-General Hunter's request that I would furnish him with the plans or designs for these buildings and the estimate of their probable expense. To do this would require considerable time and consideration, and more knowledge in the details of what is necessary, than I am possessed of; I therefore cannot judge with the requisite accuracy and confidence what it would be right to propose. Nevertheless, as it is still the Lieutenant-General's wish that I should at least give him some outline of what in my opinion may be requisite, and being desirous to the utmost of my power to assist in any way the public service, I shall endeavour on general principles to convey some idea of the probable expense, premising however that much accuracy is not to be looked for, and that too much confidence ought not therefore to be placed in my calculations.

I shall suppose that the buildings are to be constructed plain, substantial, and of durable materials, the walls of stone and the arches of brick, that every precaution is to be taken to guard them as far as possible from accidents of fire, that sufficient vaults or arched rooms, perfectly secure and dry, are to be made to the offices requiring them, for the deposit of public records of every description, that the buildings are to be uniform and neat but without the expense of ornaments and that apartments will be required for the following services, viz.: Legislative and Executive Councils, House of Assembly, Court of King's Bench and Quarter Sessions, and the proper offices to each, with offices for the Secretary of the Province, Surveyor-General and Auditor for Patents of Land. Judging in the best manner I am able of the extent of room necessary for these purposes, I should conceive that a building not less than from 270 to 300 feet long and from 30 to 40 feet broad will be requisite.

Whether this shall be disposed in one entire line or with wings will make no material difference in the expense, and upon a due consideration of the price of workmanship and materials in Upper Canada, I am of opinion that such a building will cost about £16,800 currency, or £15,120 sterling, and that with proper attention to arrangement and economy this sum may be sufficient.

I have now, sir, only to express my regret in not being able to furnish Lieut. General Hunter with more complete and satisfactory information.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,
(Signed) GOTHER MANN,
M. Gen'l. Com'g. Royal Eng.

CHAPTER XXXV.

VIEW OF YORK (TORONTO) IN 1820.

Front St. From the Garrison on the West, East to the Market and Along Palace St. to Parliament Buildings—1816-24 at Don.

One of the most interesting of the early views of the town of York, now Toronto, is an oil painting, made by Mr. Irving, a Scotch artist, who, prior to 1821, was a visitor in York and a guest of the late Hon. George Cruickshank, who resided at the north-east corner of Front and Peter streets. No views have been found of the entire front of the town of York prior to 1821, and this fact enhances the value of Mr. Irving's work. Mrs. Simcoe made a small sketch of the Garrison or Old Fort, as in 1796, with a bit of the harbour adjacent to the fort, and in 1803 an English officer made a drawing of the east end of Palace street, now called Front street, from the north-west corner of what is now West Market or Jarvis street, to within a few feet of the Don river. Lossing gives the blockhouse at the Don in 1800-13, with a few of the houses in the neighbourhood of Palace street. In 1820 Mr. Irving made an oil painting from a point on the Island near the lighthouse, which gives an absolutely correct and artistic view, with the locations of all the houses on Front street from a hundred yards west of the Old Fort and Garrison to the second Parliament buildings, which stood in 1816-24 on the site of the jail, built in 1841, at the east end of what was then Palace street, but what is now Front street. The site is now occupied by the Gas Company. The buildings in Irving's sketch are given with so much detail as to be recognizable, and it is evident that the artist, before finishing his oil, strolled, pencil and pad in hand, and made an outline of the buildings that he proposed to show in his painting.

The pen and ink sketch given with this landmark is made, through the courtesy of M^{rs}. Stephen Heward, of Peter street, from the original oil, by her son, Mr. Stephen Heward, the architect, a grandson of the late Mr. Cruickshank. The artist has skillfully traced the oil painting, and every building shown is as in the original. The proof of the accuracy of Mr. Irving's oil is shown in Mr. Heward's sketch, for some of the buildings given such as the Old Fort, west of Bathurst street; the Cruickshank house, north-east corner of Front and Peter; the Greenland Fishery tavern, north-west corner of John and Front; Hon. George Markland's house, on Market (Wellington) street; the McGill cottage, where the Metropolitan church now stands, are familiar to many people in Toronto of to-day. The original oil gives the Island, the lighthouse and the bay; but for the purposes of reproduction the foreground of the picture has been omitted, so as to give a better and closer view of the old town.

Where any doubt existed as to the location of the buildings or the names of owners or residents, careful enquiry has been made amongst old residents, such as Mr. William Helliwell, of Highland Creek, who arrived in Toronto in 1818, and also from Mrs. Charles Seymour, a daughter of Dr. Grant Powell, a resident from 1811. Mrs. Seymour was born in 1806, and came with her father to Toronto in 1811. Her memory of the capture of Toronto by the Americans, of the burning of the first Parliament Buildings on the site of the old jail, and her recollection of the residents of the entire front of the city and every house from 1811 to 1860 is perfect. In an interview at Ottawa Mrs. Seymour, now (1896) ninety years of age, recounted to the writer the names and locations of all the houses on Front street, with the names of the residents, prior to 1820, from the Old Fort to the Don.

The key gives the location of the houses on not only Front street, which ran from the garrison on the west to the north-east corner of what is now Front and East Market square, which in the early days was the north-east corner of East Market square, a conjunction of New (Nelson) (Jarvis) street and Palace (Front) street.

The key also gives the location of houses on Market street, now known as Wellington street, for these houses could be seen from the bay, there being then but few houses between the present Front street and Market street, and in some places the houses on King street could be seen from the bay front.

The key commences with No. 1 west of the Fort, and the reader is taken by way of Front street, east to the Parliament buildings then standing (1820), on the site of the old jail, at the south end of Berkeley street.

No. 1. Commencing at the west end there is shown as No. 1 a house situated a hundred yards west of the western gate of the Old Fort, on the embankment above the shore. The house, a frame originally and afterwards roughcast, faced the north. It was removed in the seventies. It was occupied by Mr. Duffy, a master at Upper Canada College. It was built about 1818, and occupied by Mr. Duffy in 1825.

No. 2. The Old Fort at the west side of what was formerly known as the Garrison Creek, was built in 1798, and was burnt, with the exception of some log houses at the east end of the grounds, in 1813. The Fort was re-built in 1816. The row of three houses shown with three chimneys each were of wood and are standing this day (1896). The house with the cottage roof, two chimneys and dormer windows, was the officers' quarters and of red brick. This was burnt in 1830.

The block house shown is the one nearest the east entrance to the Fort and still standing. The depression in the ground east of the block house is the low ground through which the Garrison Creek flowed, emptying into the bay at the King's (Queen's) wharf. From 1820 to 1860 a wooden bridge some forty or fifty feet long joined the east and west sides of the creek.

The first building east of the Garrison Creek, not numbered, is apparently a one-storey building, with one chimney, occupied about the site of the red brick house built by the Hon. J. H. Dunn, receiver-general of Upper Canada, and afterwards occupied by Mr. (Sir) D. L. Macpherson. No one has yet been able to identify the exact site or the resident of the building shown in 1919. The Massey works now occupy the ground. The small building immediately to the west of this, also unnumbered, was a tavern, which stood on the north side of Front street, at the north-east corner of what is now Bathurst. It was long frequented by the soldiers stationed in the fort. It was known for years as the Rescue Inn, and had a sign descriptive of a mother rescuing her child from an eagle's nest in the mountains.

Walking further east, there are three houses before coming to Peter street (No. 5). The occupants of these houses are unknown.

No. 5 is Peter street, which was in 1820 the western limit of the town. This street ran north from Front street to Queen.

No. 6. This was the residence of the Hon. George Cruickshank, at the north-east corner of Front and Peter streets. The drawing shows the building before the new residence was erected in 1823-4. The old house was removed to the back of the lot, and the new house, given in another Landmark in Volume III., erected on the corner. The building was removed in 1860, and the ground is now vacant.

No. 7. A few yards to the east of the Cruickshank house was the residence of John Beikie, who was at one time sheriff of York, and also clerk of the Executive Council of the Provincial Government of Upper Canada. This house stood where Windsor street now opens into Front.

No. 8. The building on the shore was the military storehouse, which was afterwards lengthened and enlarged, and stood on the site up to 1858, when the Esplanade improvements were made.

No. 9. Behind the ship and scarcely visible is the outline of the Halfway House or tavern, which stood about ninety feet west of the corner of John street, on Front. When originally built it was occupied by officers of the garrison as quarters, but finally it became a tavern, which was resorted to by the soldiers on their way to and from the town, and was appropriately called "The Halfway House." It occupied the site of 294 Front street.

No. 10. This was Sergeant Eskerlin's house, which stood directly east of the Halfway House. Eskerlin was an issuer or official of the commissariat department. It was on the site of No. 286 Front street west.

No. 11. The large building on the north-west corner of Front and John, now No. 284, was the Greenland Fishery tavern, which stands to-day as in 1820. The cottage, No. 8 John street, in rear of this house, which for many years was occupied by Edward Wright, who was the proprietor of the Greenland Fishery tavern, was the first building erected in 1817. The large building at the corner was erected in 1819, and not in 1825, as stated in Vol. I., p. 48, Landmarks.

No. 12 shows the line of John street, which in those days ran from Front up to Queen street. At the north end of John street on Queen was the entrance to the Grange, the property of Mr. Boulton. There were two large gates on the north side of Queen street, at its junction with John street. John street was subsequently extended north to the present gates of the Grange.

No. 13 shows the house of Mr. Riley, on Market street, now known as Wellington street. There were no houses in 1820 between John and Graves (Simcoe) streets, where the third Parliament Buildings stand, so that from Front street one could clearly see the houses on Market street. This house was erected in 1815. It is given in the list of that year as Riley's house, and its site was Nos. 264-66 Wellington street west.

No. 14 shows a culvert on the shore, about 150 feet west of the line of Graves street. This was called Russell's Creek, which ran from the north-west part of the town across the now Spadina avenue, Beverley street, through Queen a hundred feet west of John, through the Macdonald property, between Newgate (Richmond) street and Hospital (Adelaide) street, through Upper Canada College play-grounds and the Government House grounds, east of the present Dorset street, finding an exit into the bay in front of the east end of the grounds of the Parliament Buildings on Front street.

No. 15 is the house of Mr. George Ridout, a two storey roughcast dwelling on Market street, known in later years as Dorset House, the site being on the north-west corner of the modern Dorset street and Market (Wellington) street. The front part of the site is now No. 250 Wellington street west.

No. 16. Elmsley House, on the south-west corner of King and Graves (Simcoe) street. It was in 1804-16 the residence of Chief Justice Elmsley, and about 1816 used as the Government house. It was partly brick, log and roughcast. It was burned about 30 years ago and the present Government house was erected.

No. 17. (Graves) Simcoe street, which was originally named after John Graves Simcoe, ran from Front street to Queen street, and subsequently (about 1870), William street, which ran from Queen street north, almost in a direct line with Simcoe, was changed to Simcoe, so that north to Erskine Presbyterian church is known as Simcoe street.

No. 18. This was the red brick residence of Bishop Strachan on Front street, between Simcoe and York streets. It was built in 1818, and is now No. 140 Front street west.

No. 19. To the east of Bishop Strachan's and north across Market (Wellington) street was the cottage house of the Hon. Robert Hamilton (1806), and of the Hon. George Markland (1820), on the north-west corner of Market (Wellington) street and York street. It was Judge Draper's house 1840-55, and in Mr. Markland's time was the house in which a few meetings of the Legislature and all the meetings of the Executive Council were held. It was also for a period the Surveyor-General's office, and was built in 1805-6. It is now the site of an hotel, and is No. 116 Wellington street, at the north-west corner of York.

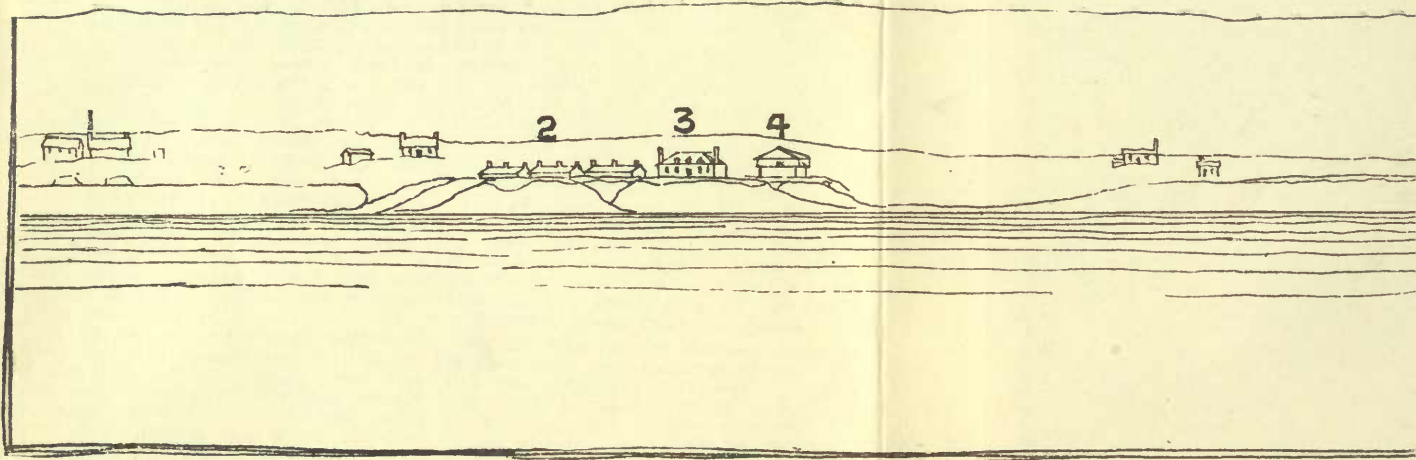

The house directly east of No. 19 and just over the figures 20, was the residence and shop of John Ross, the pioneer undertaker of York. He it was who made the coffin for General Brock, and superintended the funeral at Queenston Heights. This ad led to his following the business of what would now be called "a funeral director." Ross moved in 1825 to Hospital (Adelaide) street, a hundred feet west of the north-west corner of Hospital and Peter streets.

The building shown to the east of Ross' was an outhouse of the residence of Surveyor-General Chewett on the north side of this cottage that the ladies of York sought refuge during the war of 1812

... shows clearly the residence of John McGill, the cottage built in the centre of what is now the Metropolitan church grounds, on Queen, Church, Bond and Shuter streets. This building was erected in 1804. It was in

... now No. 62 West Market Street. No. 33. The low building shown just by the bow of the ship was the first market in York. It occupied the exact site of the present St. Lawrence market. No. 34. Jarvis Street. This street in

This ad led to his following the business of what would now be called "a funeral director." Ross moved in 1825 to Hospital (Adelaide) street, a hundred feet west of the north-west corner of Hospital and Peter streets.

The building shown to the east of Ross' was an outhouse of the residence of Surveyor-General Chewett on the north side of Market (Wellington) street, a hundred feet east of the east line of York. The original Chewett cottage stands to-day, incorporated in the two-storey house, Nos. 101-2 Wellington street west, east of the residence lately occupied by Dr. Thorburn.

No. 20. York street, which ran from Front street to Lot (Queen) street.

No. 21. William Dummer Powell's house on the north-east corner of York street and Front, about 200 feet from Front and on the east line of York street. It was a handsome, old-fashioned house, built of logs and clapboard. The site is now Nos. 100-18 Front street. The house stood on the site of Nos. 51-3 York street.

No. 22. Bay street, which ran from Front to Lot (Queen) streets. The tree over the figures "22" hides the house of Thomas Jobbitt, an ex-soldier of the Rangers, on the north-west corner of Bay and Market (Wellington) streets. Mrs. Jobbitt afterwards lived on the north side of Richmond street, and was popular as the proprietress of a small candy establishment.

No. 23. On the north-east corner of Front and Bay streets was the cottage of Major Hillier, a cottage which was originally occupied by the Hon. George Markland. It was about 200 feet north from Front street, and about 100 feet east of the east line of Bay street. The gable under the figures "23" is part of the house of Andrew Mercer, on the south-west corner of Bay and Market (Wellington) street, now Wyld, Grasett & Darling's warehouse.

No. 24. The outline shows the gable of the house of Judge Macaulay, which was on the north-west corner of Front and Yonge streets, facing on Yonge street, about 100 feet from the west street line of Yonge, and 100 feet from the north street line of Front. It was in rear of No. 32 Yonge street and No. 12 Front street west.

No. 25. Yonge street, which ran from Front street north, as to-day. Partially hidden by a tree the outline of a building, unnumbered, and slightly to the left or west of No. 26 was the cottage home on the north-east corner of Front and Yonge streets, now (1896) the Board of Trade site, about 1830 occupied by Mr. Justice Sherwood.

No. 26. The drawing shows clearly the residence of John McGill, the cottage built in the centre of what is now the Metropolitan church grounds, on Queen, Church, Bond and Shuter streets. This building was erected in 1804. It was in this cottage that the ladies of York sought refuge during the war of 1812 (Vol. I., p. 223).

No. 27. This was Church street. In 1820 this street ran north from Front to Queen street. North of that was farm land, the Jarvis property being to the east of the modern Church street and the McGill property to the west.

No. 28. The building shown in the drawing to the east of the McGill cottage is the residence of Samuel Peters Jarvis, a brick house, which stood where Shuter and Jarvis streets intersect. The gates leading to this house were on the north side of Lot (Queen) and Jarvis streets. There was a circular drive up to the house. When Shuter street was opened and Jarvis street extended the house was removed. The old stable of this house, built in 1818, stands to-day at the west side of Jarvis street, about one hundred feet south of Wilton avenue, in off the street. It has a semi-circular window in its gable. It must be borne in mind that the city front to Queen street was entirely clear of trees, so that all these houses could be clearly seen from the bay front, and, by the aid of a powerful glass, from the Island.

No. 29. This is the Masonic Hall on Market lane, now Colborne street. The hall was originally a one-storey building, built in 1818, and it was subsequently improved by the addition of a second storey. It stood on the south line of a lane that now runs between Church street and West Market square, about the centre of the block on Church street. The building was a famous schoolhouse, and was the first place of worship for the Baptists in Toronto. It was in this building that Simon McGillivray reorganized the fraternity of Masons of Upper Canada in 1822.

No. 30. The Ship Hotel. A large building which stood on the north-west corner of the present No. 20-22 West Market square and Front street.

No. 31. The Farmers' Storehouse, on the shore near the foot of Church street, west of Maitland's Church street wharf. It was built of red brick, in 1819, and was used for the storage of grain.

No. 32. Frank's Hotel, built in 1819-20, which stood on the north-west corner of Market lane (Colborne street) and of the present West Market square. It was in this hotel that the celebrated fancy ball of 1827 was held. The site is now No. 82 West Market street.

No. 33. The low building shown just by the bow of the ship was the first market in York. It occupied the exact site of the present St. Lawrence market.

No. 34. Jarvis street. This street in 1820 ran only north to Queen street.

No. 35. This was Thomas Robson's store, a frame building on the north-east corner of the present East Market square and Front street, which was then known as Palace street. This building is shown in a view of 1803, and was built in 1800. The site is now No. 29 of Front street east, the east side.

No. 36. George street. In 1820 this was the business street of the town, especially that part between Front and Duke streets.

No. 37. The George Monro house. This house stood on the north-east corner of Front and George streets. It was frame, log and roughcast, and stands there to-day, and is now a farmers' hotel. It has been kept in good repair, and, of course, has many modern improvements; but the original structure is there as it stood 96 years ago, for it was erected about 1800, and is shown in the picture of Toronto in 1803. This house is now No. 114 Front street east.

No. 38. Frederick street. This street ran from Front to Duke, and ended in front of the red brick residence of Sir Wm. Campbell, still standing.

No. 39. J. S. Baldwin's house on the north-east corner of King and Frederick streets. The Canada Company originally occupied the building on the south-east corner of the street, now occupied by Mr. Stinson. The building was afterwards the Bank of Upper Canada, prior to its removal to the north-east corner of Duke and George streets. Subsequently the Canada Company occupied Baldwin's store, and a few months ago (1896) removed from that building to a more central location in the Imperial Bank buildings, Change alley. This house is now Nos. 204 and 206 King street east.

No. 40. The small house shown was the residence of the Hon. William Allan. It was on the east side of Frederick street, near Palace, just south of the present Newsboys' Home, No. 59.

No. 41. Allan's wharf, known as the Merchants' wharf, at the foot of Frederick street. This was the first wharf or dock in Toronto. It was built in 1801. (Vol. 1., page 251.)

No. 42. This shows the office of Attorney-General John Beverley Robinson, afterwards Chief Justice, on the north side of Front street, west of Caroline (Sherbourne) street. The building stands to-day, and is known as No. 158.

No. 43. Dr. Burnside's house, on the north side of King street, about fifty feet west of Sherbourne. This building still stands. It has been kept in good repair, and this house, which was a large and commodious residence, has since been divided into two tenements. This house is now Nos. 216-18.

No. 44. Joseph Cawthra's house, north-west corner of Caroline (Sherbourne) and King streets. This was in those days a busy corner, for everything from a needle to an anchor could be found here. The site is now No. 220-22-24 King street east.

No. 45. Caroline, now known as Sherborne street. Owing to a misapprehension on the part of those who surveyed the town in the fifties, the name "Sherbourne" was incorrectly spelt. The street was named after Sherborne, England, the birthplace of the Hon. Thomas Ridout, and should be spelt "Sherborne," and not "Sherbourne." It is to be hoped that the modern directories will make the change. The street was originally named after Queen Caroline.

No. 46. Russell Abbey, on the north-west corner of Palace and Prince's streets. This house brings us once more to Front street. Russell Abbey was the residence of President Russell, and the offices of the Executive of the Provincial Government of Upper Canada, 1797-1824. This site is now No. 184-6-8 Front street east.

No. 47. Princes' street. This street was named after the sons of George III. It is not Princess, but "Princes'" street, another correction which might be made in the directories.

No. 48. Alex. Legge's house. This stood on the north-east corner of Palace (Front) street and Princes street. It is now No. 200 Front street east.

No. 49. Ontario street. This street ran from Palace (Front) street to Duke street.

No. 50. This shows the residence of the Hon. C. C. Small, which was situated on the south-west corner of King and Berkeley streets. The rear of the house is shown, and may be seen to-day in passing along the west side of Berkeley street. It is now No. 355-7-9 King street east.

No. 51. Berkeley street. This ran from Front street north, but not, as originally supposed, to the bay. The directory of 1834 states that this street commenced at the north-west corner of Palace street and ran north. It was subsequently, about 1850, opened through the Fair grounds south to the bay.

No. 52. Parliament street. This street ran from Palace street north. It was called Parliament street from the fact that the Parliament buildings stood at its southern end.

No. 53. This was a large red brick building, used as Government offices. It was built in 1816, after the war, and used for Government purposes up to 1824, when the south building, No. 54, was burnt. From that date until 1840 it was used for emigration purposes by the Government. It is now the site of Nos. 265-7-9 and 271 and other houses on Front street east, the buildings being dwelling houses.

No. 54. This was the Parliament House built in 1816 and burnt in 1824. The Parliament House of Governor Simcoe, of 1797-1813, stood on this site. Seymour, daughter of Dr. Powell, now residing in Ottawa, saw the building burning in 1812, and also the fire of 1824. It is now the site of the Gas Company works on Berkeley street, south of Front street west, the east side.

This finishes the Landmark, and recalls many historical locations. Even with the local knowledge of the writer and an intimate acquaintance with every detail of the history of York from 1792 down to the present time (1896), there may be errors in some of the foregoing locations. It is just possible that there are those who may be able to throw light upon the location of some of the buildings which are in the drawing, but from want of knowledge cannot be referred to. It is almost unnecessary to state that any information which will tend to improve this Landmark will be most acceptable.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

ABOUT POSTAL HISTORY.

A History of the Postal Department of America From the Days of the Sixteenth Century.

L'Union Postale, published at Berne, Switzerland, the official organ of the International Postal Convention, recently published some interesting papers on the postal service of this continent, written by C. W. Ernst, of Boston, Mass. The papers are of interest in connection with the same department in Canada, and really contain a condensation of the entire history of this important branch of public service in America from the earliest times.

The Post-Office Department at Washington holds few records prior to 1789, and a fire destroyed in 1836 many postal papers covering the period from 1789 to the year named. The records of the American postal service from 1775 to 1789, being the period of the Confederation, are nearly all lost, the most interesting relic being a book of memoranda kept by Richard Bache. This book, erroneously published as "The Ledger of Doctor Benjamin Franklin," is preserved in the Treasury Department of the United States, and contains postal memoranda from 1775 to 1780. For the earlier period we have the interesting Journal of Hugh Finlay, which reviews the postal service of 1773-1774 in detail, a chapter in Joyce's History of the (British) Post-Office; an essay upon "The Early History of the Colonial Post-Office," by Mary E. Woolley; a "History of the Postal Service in Boston, Mass., 1639-1893," by C. W. Ernst; and the scattered materials to be found in many American and European archives, in the records of the American colonies, in old almanacs, newspapers, and family papers. Occasionally the local histories give notes on postal affairs.

The postal history of the United States of America has four periods. Up to 1693 only municipal posts existed, though attempts were made to establish inter-colonial posts. The American post from 1693 to 1707 stood under the Neale patent. From 1707 to 1774 the General Post-Office in London controlled. From 1774 to 1789 is the period of transition; but on the whole Congress controlled. In 1789 the Constitution took effect, Washington was President, and the American Post-Office became a national establishment, destined to a growth not surpassed in postal history. The inception of this vast service has abiding interest.

The rates of postage in 1703 were as follows:

"For every letter not exceeding one sheet of paper, 9d.; for two sheets, 1s. 6d.; for every packet weighing 1 ounce or under, 2s. 8d."

There are several reasons why the early American posts were municipal. It should be remembered that England herself had no General Post-Office until the Act of Parliament signed by Cromwell on the 9th June, 1657, gave the necessary authority. The colonies were not likely to have what the mother country lacked.

To provide for ship letters, Massachusetts appointed an agent at Boston in 1639. He forwarded letters not directly disposed of by the captains of vessels. The like arrangement was made at New York. In 1672, before the beginning of Philadelphia, Governor Lovelace of New York tried to arrange a post to Boston. In 1684 Governor Dongan of New York received authority "for setting up post-houses along the coast from Carolina to Nova Scotia," at least 10 p. c. of the profit to go to England. But so far were the colonies from having an exchange of mails that they could hardly be said to have a home post. In 1657 Virginia required planters to forward official letters; a similar law was passed four years later. In other colonies official letters were forwarded by constables, sheriffs, or special messengers. Of a regular post there is no trace. Private correspondence was carried mainly by coast-wise vessels or occasional travellers. Tradition tells of a post along the Delaware river, from Trenton to Newcastle and Maryland; but no record shows that the service was ever performed or needed until 1693, when the American Post-Office began.

This beginning is due to William III., and to the genius of Andrew Hamilton. History has yet to recount the merit of William III. in economic affairs. He founded the Bank of England, he subsidized the post in Scotland, he gave England two extraordinary men for Postmasters-General, Cotton and Frankland, and he perceived the importance of an American post. He carried the great financial, commercial and postal traditions of the Netherlands to England, and he was determined that the colonies should share in the rise of the mother country. A happy solution was found for the legal and fiscal difficulties in the way of the American post.

Acting under the law of 1660 the great King vested the American post in Thomas Neale, master of the mint and otherwise eminent for enterprise and large affairs. This interesting patent, the charter of the American post, was signed on the 17th February, 1691. A few weeks later, on April 4th, Thomas Neale and the Royal Postmasters-General appointed Andrew Hamilton Postmaster-General of America. Except the king, the colonies had never had an officer or master in common. Would they accept an American Postmaster-General, who was given the postal monopoly for twenty-one years? Certainly each colony had the right to appoint a Postmaster-General of its own, to prescribe his duties, and to reap the rewards, if any. The patent itself recognized the right of the colonies to prescribe what postage they pleased. A dozen colonies were to be consulted; each was to surrender a certain right; they were to agree for once, for without a certain agreement an inter-colonial post would be impossible.

Hamilton, the father of the American post, overcame all obstacles; he achieved a novelty in American legislation. Not only did he induce every colony to accept the Neale patent, but he led the legislature of each to pass substantially the same postal act, and he persuaded some of the colonies to pay him an annual subsidy. Hamilton was born in Scotland, and became a merchant in Edinburgh. In 1686 he was sent to New Jersey to look after the investments of certain London merchants, among them William Dockwra, the founder of the London Penny-Post. Hamilton happened to be in London when the American post was proposed, and became the choice of the king, of Neale, of the Postmasters-General, of Dockwra and the other merchants. In the summer of 1692 he sailed for New York, and immediately upon his arrival visited all the colonies in person to win them over to his cause. He was successful beyond reasonable expectation. All accounts unite in praising his talent for dealing with men; even his opponents, William Penn among them, desired his friendship. He was trusted implicitly; he endeared himself even to casual acquaintances. A new element seemed to have entered the American struggle for existence and wealth, the element of union, the power of colonial co-operation. Hamilton's diplomacy was exquisite. On moderate conditions he promised a weekly post from New Hampshire to Virginia; he satisfied each colony of his ability and resources; and he kept every promise.

New York led in granting Hamilton's request; Pennsylvania and New Hampshire followed; Connecticut and New Jersey joined; Massachusetts was the last to enter this postal union of the colonies, and passed a model act. Virginia alone failed. Its postal act of 1693 looked to Virginia only, and demanded too much for that. Hamilton responded by including Virginia in his postal service. This service began on May 1st, 1693, and consisted in a weekly post from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to Boston, Saybrook, New York, Philadelphia, Maryland, and Virginia. Five riders were engaged to cover each of the five stages twice a week. On an average each mail rider travelled near three hundred kilometers a week, in the beginning over a country where roads were in the state of nature. But the service was performed; only in winter, it was fortnightly. The great mail route from Portsmouth to Boston, New York, and Philadelphia is still the most important in America.

The early accounts of Hamilton are happily preserved in London. His own salary was £200 a year. The postmasters had a salary of £20 or less; the mail riders received from £110 down. The total expense from May 1st, 1693, to May 1st, 1697, was £3,817; the revenue but £1,457. This deficit, partly due to Hamilton's liberality, was more than Neale, sometimes called the governor of the American post, was willing to bear. His fortune nearer home had likewise declined, and to get rid of the American post, he assigned it, with all its rights and duties, to Andrew Hamilton. The latter must have had great faith in his Post-office; he took the patent and all it implied. The posts were continued with great regularity; but on April 26th, 1703, he died at Amboy in New Jersey. The post was still in debt; but Hamilton's credit was unimpaired. He had been governor of Pennsylvania and New Jersey; and in the latter colony or province he owned large estates. His death was mourned throughout the colonies. It was equally regretted in England. Men felt that Andrew Hamilton, more than any other man, had united the colonies, had given them a postal service that never failed, and established a communion of interests not known before his day. The chief American port for foreign letters, in Hamilton's time, was Boston. All these letters were treated as ship letters, the captains receiving a special fee for every letter they delivered to the Post-Office. In Hamilton's day no newspaper was printed in America, and in New York the first printing press was set up at the same time as the Post-Office. The first Postmaster of New York, Sharpas, is still remembered faithful clerk he was, beside serving as Postmaster.

In comparing the earliest postal laws of the American colonies it will appear that the postage rates they prescribed were not entirely uniform. This seeming discrepancy is partly due to the fact that each colony had a different currency. Each colony used Spanish silver dollars, but counted in pounds, shillings and pence. But while each colony retained the English names of money, none retained the English currency. Some of the colonies had coined their own money. An English guinea (21 shillings) was 28 shillings in Massachusetts, 36 in New York, and 34 in Pennsylvania. The postal service had to contend with this difficulty during the first century of its existence. Yet the establishment created by the great Hamilton was theoretically perfect. It provided for all contingencies likely to arise. It required postmasters to "mark every letter with a print"; it required the house delivery of every letter not called for within forty-eight hours after arrival; and it provided for the transmission of letters to all parts of the world. A letter from Boston to New York cost a shilling, from Boston to Philadelphia 15 pence; the fee for ship letters was two pence, a part of which was paid to the captains. In addition they were free to charge sea postage. The customary rate for a sea letter became a shilling.

Fortunately for the Post-Office, the country was highly prosperous from the inception of the service. The mail riders of 1693 went through a wilderness; but every succeeding year brought improvements. Population increased, affairs increased. The Post-Office was still in debt when Andrew Hamilton died in 1703, and his son John Hamilton succeeded. Yet the Crown was anxious to possess the service. In 1707 it purchased the good-will of the American Post-Office for £1,664, continuing John Hamilton as Postmaster-General with an annual salary of £200. In the same year the parliamentary and postal union of England and Scotland went into effect; William's Postmasters-General, who began in 1690 with the struggling posts of England, found themselves in 1707 at the head of an imperial post co-extensive with the British empire. They had advised the purchase of the American post. The logical result was the great Post-Office act passed by the British parliament in 1710. That great and memorable act controlled to the time of Queen Victoria; in British North America it ruled until the colonies, first united by Andrew Hamilton in 1692 and 1693, became the United States by the declaration of 1776 and the treaty of 1783. When the American Post-Office, in 1707, passed under the management of the General Post-Office in London, two interesting events had taken place since the death of Hamilton. The first cross-post had been established—from New York to Albany, and in 1704 the first American newspaper began to appear—the Boston News-Letter, which lived until the revolution.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

THE DEPARTMENT A CENTURY AGO

The Progress of Postal Improvement on the American Continent from the Beginning of the Eighteenth Century.

In 1707 the English Crown bought back the Neale patent, under which the great Andrew Hamilton had established regular posts from New Hampshire to Philadelphia. The dismissal of Franklin, in 1774, marks the end of this second period in the history of the North American posts. The principal accounts of this period are the acts of Parliament passed in 1710 and 1765, respectively, known as 9 Annæ chapter 10, and 5 Georg. III. chapter 25. In 1715 Herman Moll, a London geographer, published his "Map of the Dominions of the King of Great Britain on the Continent of North America." This map, often reprinted throughout the period under consideration, indicates the post routes of the time, and gives in the margin "An Account of ye Post of ye Continent of Nth America." In 1772, the London authorities sent Hugh Finlay to America to report on the posts. He arrived in 1773, inspected the posts from Quebec to New York, as well as from Virginia south, and his Journal, published in 1867 gives a perfect picture of the royal American posts at the time of their transition from royal to American control. The Finlay manuscript is in the library of the Post-Office Department at Washington. For the rest, the official accounts of this period are nearly all lost, and the postal history must be gathered from newspapers, almanacs, and the materials accidentally saved in public archives and private collections.

The great Postal Act of 1710, which controlled in North America until 1774, in England until Queen Victoria, was occasioned by the union of England and Scotland, and in part by the purchase of the Neale patent, both these events having taken place in 1707. A new law was necessary, and its postal provisions were suggested by Evelyn and Frankland, of whom the latter was familiar with America. The law finally passed made the London Postmasters General the head of the postal service throughout the British empire, and gave them the postal monopoly; it made New York the head office in North America; it gave the American mailriders free ferries; and it prohibited political agitation on the part of postal officers. The postage rates were to be a shilling for every single letter passing between London and New York. This rate continued until 31st December, 1867, and illustrates Anglo-American conservatism. Domestic postage in North America was fixed at 4 pence per letter carried 60 miles (about 97 kilometers) or less; 6 pence per letter carried more than 60, but less than 100 miles (about 161 kilometers). A letter from New York to Philadelphia was to pay 9 pence, to Boston 1 shilling, to South Carolina 18 pence. These rates were not materially changed by the law of 1765, and controlled virtually until 1792.

The rates so established may seem high to our age; they answered all requirements in North America from 1711 until 1792. They produced enough revenue for an efficient service; and if they did not yield a surplus, they sufficed to maintain the service. They related to letters only, leaving printed matter as a perquisite with the service. They treated every sheet as a single letter; and this view prevailed in America until 1845. The act of 1765 permitted the establishment of Penny-Posts, that is, of local posts for the collection and delivery of letters not transmitted by mail from one post-office to another. No action was ever taken under this provision; but the principle that Penny-Posts did not conflict with the postal monopoly, survived until 1851. On the other hand, the ruling of the King's Bench, 1768 (Annual Register, 1768, p. 65), that a delivery fee could not be lawfully collected on mail letters, was not accepted in America as binding. America accepted the parliamentary post acts with surprising composure. The right of Parliament to establish American postage rates was not free from doubt; its right to establish free ferries was doubtful. America yielded because the several colonies and provinces were not prepared to co-operate, and still less to support a national post by local taxes. Moreover the Crown provided a good service, although the post retained a half-foreign character. Postage rates were prescribed in English sterling, while the American Governments had each a currency of their own, and the American public saw very little money except a fluctuating and depreciating paper currency. It was for this reason that postage rates on letters, up to 1774, were indicated in pennyweights and grains, a pennyweight of silver being the equivalent of threepence sterling. The value of a pennyweight differed from one colony or province to another, and from year to year. This great obstacle was not fully removed until 1792. But the postal service remained solvent by clinging to sound money, and was in a position to pay its servants well.

The Postmaster-General of America received an annual salary of £200, and whatever he saw fit to charge for the transmission of newspapers. Postmasters received a percentage of their gross receipts, and usually had the official frank. This led them generally into the business of publishing newspapers. The mailriders, who are a sort of travelling post-office, treated everything as a perquisite, except the letters charged to them by postmasters. On the whole, the members of the service were both prosperous and respected.

The Postmasters-General, appointed by those at London, were: John Hamilton, 1703-30; Alexander Spotswood, 1730-39; Head Lynch, 1739-43; Elliot Benger, 1743-53. In 1753 Benjamin Franklin and William Hunter were appointed joint Postmasters-General; Hunter died in 1761, and was succeeded by John Foxcroft, while Franklin served under the Crown until his removal in 1774. Hamilton was the son of Andrew Hamilton, the founder of the American post. He lived in New Jersey, he was a good officer, and his removal in 1730 was apparently due to the fact that the Crown expected a surplus, while Hamilton spent the postal revenue in perfecting the service. He established post-offices at Newport in Rhode Island, at New London in Connecticut, and at Annapolis in Maryland; he maintained the service he inherited from his great father, and he established new mail routes. The most important of these is the great route from New York to Albany, which began on the novel principle of supporting new lines by the postage they might yield. Under Andrew Hamilton the mailriders hugged the Atlantic coast; under John Hamilton the inland service began.

His successors, from 1730 to 1753, and in the case of Hunter to 1761, were Virginians. They developed the service from Philadelphia to South Carolina. The post-office at Charleston, S. C., was established about 1740. But on the whole they had limited success, though Spotswood left a noble record. A new era began with Franklin and Hunter, in 1753. Both had postal experience, Franklin having been postmaster of Philadelphia since 1737, while Hunter, also an eminent printer, was postmaster of Williamsburg, Va. Hunter's successor, Foxcroft, lived at New York, and was a very good officer. Franklin was a great man; the work of the post-office may not have suited him. He was generally absent from his post, and was removed for that reason in 1774.

The few postal remains of the Franklin era are the interesting letters printed in his works, a broadside of 1753 on the keeping of postal accounts by postmasters, and the reports of the time. His letter to Todd, dated 29th October, 1769, has world-wide interest as describing the Gulf stream, of which he submitted the first chart and the very name. His letter to Potts, dated 23rd April, 1761, is a masterpiece of ingenuity. His letter to Hector St. Jean de Crevecoeur, not dated, but probably written in 1783, reviews the Atlantic mail service and suggests the compartment system now in general use. The publication, in 1774, was in England, where he had gone ten years before. In fact, during the 21 years that he was American Postmaster-General under the Crown, he was absent from the country two-thirds of the time.

Yet he marks the beginning of a new era. In Philadelphia he introduced delivery by carriers. He established new post-offices; he extended the great post route to Maine and Georgia; and when General Braddock entered upon his famous campaign to the Ohio, to decide whether England or France should control the Mississippi valley, Franklin supplied Braddock with waggons and established the first field-post in America, from Philadelphia to Winchester in Virginia. This campaign, beginning with a great catastrophe to the English, occasioned a postal event of the first importance. Braddock's defeat convinced the Crown that it needed regular communication with America, both to receive and supply information. The entire Mississippi valley was at stake; indeed, both France and England contended for the mastery of all North America. On the 15th of November, 1755, the British post-office despatched its first regular mail packet for New York (2 Pennsylv. Archives 467). The Atlantic mail service thus begun has never ceased. Until July 4th, 1840, when the Cunard steamships began to carry the mails, a monthly mail packet had sailed from Falmouth and New York, respectively, without serious interruption since 1755. These exchanges of mails have rendered very great services. Only a great and ambitious power could afford such a service.

The struggle between France and England for American control was decided in favour of England. Canada was transferred from France to England, and to tie it closer to the English possessions in America, the Crown soon established a post route from New York to Montreal and Quebec. When Finlay was sent out in 1772, to inspect the American posts that consumed all they earned, he began with a survey of a mail route between Boston and Quebec. The Crown and its officers were anxious to hold Canada; they knew the importance of regular posts; they took large views. When the rupture between the Crown and its American possessions was complete, the Crown might well say that it had dismissed a great American from office, but that it had given America a postal service from Maine to Florida, from New York to Quebec, and a monthly service across the Atlantic ocean. It is not believed that the colonies unaided could have achieved so much. They might have maintained municipal posts; they enjoyed a national and international service. In 1773 the mail between New York and Philadelphia was carried every other day; between New York and New Hampshire every third day; and the mail between Boston and Portsmouth, N. H., was carried by stage coach, a service which did not begin in England until 1784, or after the English Crown had recognized the independence of the United States. It was the post-office that led in this movement for independence; and this movement towards an independent or American post-office began in 1773.

when Paul Revere became the confidential post-riders of Massachusetts, and when William Goddard, of Baltimore, advocated what he called a constitutional as opposed to the parliamentary post. The dismissal of Franklin, in 1774, gave this movement a force which the Crown was unable to check. On the 25th of December, 1775, Postmaster-General Foxcroft announced the end of the royal post in North America; Finlay, his associate, retired to Canada, where he served as Postmaster-General until the end of the century; on the 4th of July, 1776, the united colonies issued their declaration of independence, and became the United States of America.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. THE WORK OF A CENTURY.

A Brief History of the Post Office Department from the Founding of Confederation.

The Post-office Department of Canada is under the control of a Postmaster-General, who is a member of the Privy Council, and may be a member either of the Senate or House of Commons. The Postmaster-General is assisted in the general management of the business of the department by a Deputy Postmaster-General.

The post-office service is divided into two divisions—the inside service and the outside service. The inside service comprises the staff at headquarters, where the business is distributed among the following branches:

The secretary's branch has charge of the general correspondence with the public, with foreign post-offices, and with the offices of the outside service. The secretary has charge of the establishment of new post-offices, of all appointments and promotions in the staff of both the inside and outside service, and of the appointments of all postmasters. He has custody of the bonds given by all postmasters for due fulfilment of office. He has also charge of the enquiries respecting missing letters.

The accountant keeps all books of account, and is responsible to the Postmaster-General for the prompt collection of post-office revenue, and for the examination of all vouchers for expenditure and for the payment of all accounts.

The superintendent of the money order office has the supervision of all duties connected with the issue and payment of money orders, and conducts the correspondence connected therewith.

The Savings Bank business is under the charge of a superintendent, to whom is delegated the charge of all matters connected with the receipt and withdrawal of Savings Bank deposits.

There is also a separate branch called the dead letter office, under charge of a superintendent, for the receipt and disposal of all undelivered correspondence, including parcels and everything transmissible by post.

Another branch of the department is the printing and supply branch, the superintendent of which has the sole charge of the ordering, receipt, custody and distribution of the printed forms, stationery, mail bags, locks, stamps, and all other stores used in the post office service.

The charge of the mail service, including letting, execution and general supervision of mail contracts and the correspondence connected therewith, is also confided to a superintendent, and forms a separate branch.

The remaining branch is the stamp branch, the superintendent of which has charge of the ordering, receipt and issue of all postage stamps, cards, wrappers, bands and stamped envelopes.

OUTSIDE SERVICE.

To ensure a proper supervision over the working of the department in its relation with the public, the Dominion is divided into fifteen divisions or districts, each of which is in charge of a post-office inspector, who superintends the performance of the ordinary mail service, establishes post-offices, carries on enquiries respecting missing letters, investigates complaints, and does all those things which have of necessity to be done by local officers.

A certain number of the more important offices, such as Montreal, Toronto, and Ottawa, are included in what is technically known as the outside office service of the post-office. The postmasters and clerks are appointed by the Governor-General in Council, and are paid fixed salaries, come under the provisions of the Superannuation Act, and together with post-office inspectors and their clerks and the railway mail clerks, comprise the outside service of the post-office. Postmasters generally are not included in what is known as the civil service.

HISTORY.

Upon the confederation of the provinces in 1867, an act known as the Post-office Act, 1867, was passed by the Parliament of the Dominion. This act took effect from the 1st April, 1868, and from that date a uniform system of post-office organization was established throughout the provinces of the new Dominion. The domestic rate of postage was reduced from five cents to three cents per half ounce; the rate to the United States was reduced from ten cents to six cents the half ounce, and reductions were also made in the rates of postage upon newspapers, periodicals and other miscellaneous matter.

On 1st January, 1869, there were 3,638 post-offices in the Dominion. The revenue of the department was $1,024,701.

The money order business having been in operation for several years before the confederation of the provinces, this branch of the post-office service was continued with such changes in detail as were necessary to secure uniformity throughout the Dominion.

An act authorizing the establishment of a post-office savings bank was passed in December, 1867, and on 1st April, 1868, eighty-one of the principal post-offices in Ontario and Quebec commenced to receive deposits on savings bank accounts. As there were already in existence in the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Government savings banks, it was not thought expedient to extend the post-office system to those provinces until some experience had been had of its working in Ontario and Quebec.

On the 1st of January, 1870, the rate of postage upon letters from Canada to the United Kingdom was reduced from 12 1-2 cents the half ounce to six cents the half ounce.

When the post-offices of the several provinces of the Dominion came under central administration at Ottawa in July, 1867, it was found that there was great diversity of practice in the mode in which postmasters were compensated for their services, some being paid by a regular fixed salary, some by commission on the business of their offices, and some partly by commission and partly by salary.

A general scale of compensation was therefore adopted—a minimum salary of $10 a year to all small offices where the business did not warrant a higher payment, and in all other cases a salary equal to 40 p. c. on all postal business up to $800 a year and 25 per cent. on all business over that amount, and a special allowance in addition where the work had to be done during the night, and for forwarding or distributing mails for other offices. This change took effect from the first of January, 1870, salaries to be raised every two years.

Regular mail communication was first opened with Fort Garry (now Winnipeg) in 1870, the mails being sent by Chicago, St. Paul and Pembina.

In 1871 arrangements were made for mail service to British Columbia. The mails were made up at Windsor, Ontario, and sent to San Francisco, where they were conveyed by sea to Victoria.

The inclusion of the provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia necessarily involved the department in heavy expenditure to maintain communication with the older provinces throughout the vast extent of country lying between the great lakes of Ontario and the Pacific Ocean. One of the first routes established was from Winnipeg, then known as Fort Garry, to Pembina, at a cost of three thousand dollars ($3,000) a year; another was from New Westminster to Barkerville, in British Columbia, 486 miles, at an annual cost of sixteen thousand dollars ($16,000.)

Postcards were first issued to the public in June, 1871. The convenience thus afforded was rapidly availed of, and nearly one million and a half were issued between June, 1871, and January, 1872.

In 1872 the rate of postage upon letters sent from Canada to Newfoundland was reduced from 12 1-2 cents to six cents per half ounce, and the rate of postage upon other matter made the same as within the Dominion.

The organization of the postal service in Manitoba and British Columbia having been completed, the postal business of those provinces appears for the first time in the report for 1872.

From July 1, 1873, all payments for salaries and other disbursements on account of the city post-offices were made from a special appropriation from Parliament, instead of being paid out of postages collected at the several offices, as had hitherto been the practice, the amount collected from postage being from the above date paid into the credit of the Receiver-General.

In 1873 an arrangement was made for an exchange of money orders between Canada and British India, and in this year the money order system was also extended to Manitoba.

Prince Edward Island entered the Dominion in July, 1873, and arrangements were at once made for bringing the postal system of that island into harmony with the rest of the Dominion.

The system of free delivery by letter carriers of letters and newspapers was commenced in 1874 in Montreal and Toronto, and preparations were made for extending the system to such of the other cities as might, by extent of postal business, seem to be entitled to such additional accommodation; street letter boxes for the reception of letters were also introduced in the larger cities and towns, and persons to be called stamp vendors were authorized to sell postage stamps to the public. Up to this time postage stamps could only be obtained from postmasters.

In 1874 an important change was made in the treatment of dead letters. Heretofore such letters only as appeared to be of value or importance had been returned to the writers; but it was decided that, owing to the unsatisfactory character of the discrimination which a cursory examination of the letters rendered possible, the system should be changed, and all such letters should in the future be returned to the writers.

In 1874 a treaty for the formation of a general postal union, and the adoption of uniform postage rates and regulations for international correspondence, was arranged and signed at Berne, in Switzerland, by representatives of the principal nations of the world, including the United States.

This treaty did not include the British possessions beyond the sea, but Canada, with the concurrence of the British Government, at once applied for admission as a member. Meanwhile the letter rate of postage between Canada and the United Kingdom was, by an arrangement with the Imperial post-office, reduced to the international rate of 2 1-2d sterling, or five cents, the half-ounce.

The Canada Official Postal Guide was first published in 1874.

Post bands were first issued in 1873.

In February, 1875, a postal convention was made between Canada and the United States for the reduction of postal charges and general simplification and the improvement of the postal intercourse between the two countries.

Under this convention an arrangement was made by which each country gave conveyance over its mail routes to the closed domestic mails of the other free of charge when passing in transit through its territory; and letters, newspapers and other ordinary mail matter, posted and prepaid in either country in the ordinary domestic rates of that country, were to be delivered at destination in the other without further charge of postage.

A further convention was made in June, 1875, to take effect from the 2nd August, 1875, for a direct change of money orders between the United States and Canada.

In April, 1875, an act to amend and consolidate the statute law for the regulation of the postal service was passed, to come into force on the 1st October, 1875.

By this act changes of much importance were made in the postal system of Canada, chiefly in the adoption of the principle of compulsory prepayment of the postage upon all letters, newspapers and other mailable matter passing within the Dominion, and in the reduction of the rates on newspapers, periodicals and miscellaneous matter.

The new rates of postage were: Letters, three cents per half ounce; drop letters, one cent per half ounce; post-cards, one cent each; newspapers and periodicals from the office of publication to regular subscribers, one cent per pound bulk weight; transient papers and books, one cent per four ounces; parcels, 12 1/2 cents per eight ounces. Request letters—that is, letters having printed thereon the name and address of the sender, with the request that such letter, if not delivered within a certain time specified thereon, might be returned direct to the writer without passing through the Dead Letter Office—were first recognized by the department in November, 1875.

The free delivery of letters by letter carrier was extended to the cities of Quebec, Ottawa, Hamilton, St. John and Halifax in 1875.

In July, 1876, the opening of the Intercolonial Railway afforded means of communication by rail between the western and the Maritime Provinces, by which a great acceleration in the transmission of mails to and from the Western Provinces and Halifax and St. John was effected.

The establishment in November, 1876, of a mail service between Winnipeg and Edmonton, a distance of nine hundred miles, left but little more to be done to complete the service from Halifax to Vancouver.

The postage on letters to Newfoundland was reduced to five cents per half ounce, and the registration fee on each registered letter passing between the United Kingdom and Canada was reduced from eight cents to five cents.

The opening of this railway also enabled the Post-office Department to make an arrangement for embarking and landing the mails for and from Europe by the Canadian line of mail steamers, at Rimouski, a point on the Intercolonial Railway 191 miles east of Quebec, by which a very considerable saving of time in the transmission of these mails to the principal cities in the Dominion was effected. During the winter the mails were landed at Halifax, instead of being carried on to Portland, Maine.

In January, 1877, an arrangement was made with the general post-office of the German Empire for a regular direct exchange of correspondence, and the rate of postage upon letters was reduced to five cents the half ounce. Reductions were also made in the postage upon other classes of correspondence.

By the convention of Paris, dated 1st June, 1878, Canada was admitted to be a member of the General Postal Union from the 1st July, 1878, and in consequence the rate of letter postage between Canada and all Europe became one uniform charge of five cents per half ounce.

Newspapers, printed matter and samples and patterns of merchandise became subject also to uniform postage rates and regulations for all destinations in Europe.

The existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada were by mutual agreement allowed to remain undisturbed by the entry of Canada into the union.

The postal agreement between the post-office of the German Empire and Canada expired, however, as provided by the agreement.

In June, 1880, an amended convention was made between the Post-office Department of the United States and the Post-office Department of Canada, for the purpose of making certain alterations in the system under which money orders were exchanged between the United States and Canada. Under this convention the maximum amount of each money order was fixed at fifty dollars, with power to increase the amount to one hundred dollars by mutual agreement between the two Post-office Departments. The maximum amount of a money order had previously been forty dollars.

The rate of commission was fixed at ten cents for any sum not exceeding ten dollars, and ten cents additional for every ten dollars or fraction thereof.

In 1881 an agreement was entered into for the establishment for direct steam communication between Canada, the West Indies and Brazil. The first steamer of the line, the Comte d'Eau, arrived at Halifax from Rio de Janeiro on the 31st December, 1881, with mails from Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Pernambuco, Para and St. Thomas, West Indies, and sailed from Halifax on the return voyage on the 11th January, 1882.

On the 17th May, 1882, an act was passed, which came into force on the 1st June, 1882, by which—under certain conditions as to form and manner of posting—newspapers and periodicals printed and published in Canada, and mailed by the publisher in the post-office at the place where they are published, and addressed to regular subscribers or newsdealers in Canada, resident elsewhere than in the place of publication, were transmitted by mail to their respective addresses free of postage.

On the 1st July, 1882, the charge for commission in the issue of money orders in Canada, payable in the United Kingdom, was reduced to the same scale as that agreed upon in the United States in the amended money order convention of 1880.

A convention for the exchange of money orders between France and Canada was signed by Earl Granville, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Waddington, Ambassador of France to the Court of St. James, on 20th June, 1884, and went into operation on the 1st November following.

During the years 1883 and 1884 special money order conventions were made between the post-offices of the German Empire, Italy, Switzerland and Belgium and Canada, and arrangements were made by which Canada could exchange money orders with Germany, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Austria, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Barbadoes, and Jamaica, Victoria (Australia), Tasmania and New Zealand, and generally with all British possessions and foreign countries with which the British post-office had money order arrangements.

On 1st January, 1885, a post office and money order office was established for the convenience of the large number of men engaged in connection with the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway, the post-office and home of the postmaster being in a railway car, which had been fitted up as well as circumstances would permit for that purpose. As the laying of the track progressed the car moved westward until the section of the road coming eastward was met, when the necessity for the office having ceased, the "end-of-track" post-office became a thing of the past. To give an idea of the convenience afforded by this office, it may be stated that during the ten months in which it was in existence money orders to the value of $65,304 were issued there.

On the 1st November, 1885, the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway was completed to Winnipeg, and a mail service by railway, with postal car and mail clerks in charge, was commenced from Montreal and Ottawa to Winnipeg, the trip being made in about sixty-six hours, the distance 1,430 miles.

On Monday, the 29th June, 1886, the first through line left Montreal for the Pacific, and reached Port Moody, the then western terminus of the Canadian Pacific railway, on the 4th July. This train carried a post-office car, in the special charge of the chief post-office inspector, Mr. John Dewe, under whose supervision the arrangements which had already been made for daily postal car service over the whole line of 2,892 miles, went into operation.

The Canadian Pacific railway thus, in connection with the railways already in existence in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces afforded a continuous daily line of mail service by postal car over Canadian territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a distance of 3,740 miles.

In August, 1885, an arrangement was made with the Imperial post-office for the transmission of closed parcels by mail between the two countries, no single parcel to exceed three pounds in weight.

On the 1st November, 1885, the Post-office Savings Bank system, which had for several years been in operation in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, was extended to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The completion of the Canadian Pacific railway to the Pacific Ocean enabled the Canadian post-offices to send mails direct to China and Japan by vessels sailing to and from Vancouver.

An amended postal convention for the purpose of making better postal arrangements between the United States and the Dominion of Canada was signed in January, 1888. One of the chief provisions was the admission to the mails of a variety of miscellaneous articles so put up as to be liable to inspection, at a rate of postage one cent per ounce, an arrangement which afforded great convenience to the people of both countries.

The above was amended by a further convention signed on the 25th April, 1888, establishing a uniform rate of one cent per ounce upon all merchandise, and a rate of one cent for two ounces upon all books, pamphlets, circulars, and all printed matter generally.

On the retirement from office, after a service of forty-eight years, of Mr. H. A. Wicksteed, the accountant of the department, the several accounting branches of the department were placed under the control of one officer, who was called the Financial Comptroller, but the change was not found to meet the expectations which had been formed of its utility, and on the death of Mr. J. Cunningham Stewart, who had been appointed to the office, the position was not, and has not since been filled.

The 1st of July, 1888, was marked by the retirement of Mr. W. H. Griffin, Deputy Postmaster-General, after a service of fifty-seven years; he had been the permanent head of the post-office of Upper and Lower Canada from the time when the control of the department was handed over to the principal authorities in 1851, until Confederation, and Deputy Postmaster-General after the union. Lieut.-Col. William White, who had been secretary of the department since 1861, succeeded him, and has done much to bring the department to its present state of efficiency.

Colonel White's is a somewhat striking personality; he is a Justice of the Peace for the County of Carleton and lieutenant-colonel of the 43rd Battalion of Canadian Militia and was born in London, England, January 6th, 1830, and was educated at a private school near London, England, and shortly after leaving school he was appointed (19th Feb., 1846) to the Civil Service as a clerk in the General post-office, St. Martin's le Grand. This appointment he resigned in April, 1854, in which year he came to Canada. He remained at Goderich, in Western Ontario, during the summer of 1854, and in November of that year, entered the Civil Service of Canada as chief clerk in the money order branch of the Post-office Department. This position he retained until January, 1861, when he was promoted to the secretaryship of the department. He was gazetted a lieutenant in the 3rd Battalion of Toronto militia on 31st March, 1859, and transferred to the unattached list on the 18th May, 1860. At the time of the Trent affair in 1861 he joined the Civil Service Rifle Company, and served as a non-commissioned officer therein until the Civil Service Regiment was formed, in which he commanded a company (commission as captain, dated 21st September, 1866,) until it was disbanded in December, 1868. He was appointed to the command of an independent rifle company on the 23rd July, 1869, and promoted to the rank of brevet-major, 25th January, 1872. On the organization of the Governor-General's Foot Guards in 1872, his company became No. 1 Company of the Guards, in which regiment he was appointed senior major on the 20th September, 1872. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel by brevet, 25th January, 1877, and was transferred from the Foot Guards to the 43rd Battalion as lieutenant-colonel on the re-organization of the Ottawa and Carleton Rifles, on the 5th August, 1881. He commanded the Canadian team at Wimbledon in 1884, on which occasion they won the Kolapore Cup. He has likewise been president of the Ottawa Athenaeum and Mechanics' Institute, secretary of the Ottawa Natural History Society, and president of the Ottawa Field Naturalists' Club. Colonel White was appointed in June, 1880, a member of the Royal Commission to enquire into the Civil Service of Canada. He has never taken an active part in politics, and cannot be said to belong to either of the two great political parties. He married at St. George's, Hanover Square, London, on 1st October, 1853, Elizabeth, daughter of George Keen, of Lambeth.

In June, 1889, a convention was signed with Japan for a direct exchange of money orders between Japan and Canada, the conditions being similar to those in the conventions already made with other countries.

By the Post-Office Act of 1889, the limit of weight of a single rate letter was increased from half an ounce to an ounce; the rate on drop letters was fixed at two cents the ounce. The charge for registration was also made uniform and fixed at five cents.

The mail service established between Canada, the West Indies and Brazil some years since did not answer the expectations formed of it, and was finally discontinued. In January, 1890, however, it was thought that as far as the West Indies at any rate such a service might be re-established with advantage, and a service was therefore inaugurated between St. John, New Brunswick, and Demerara, touching en route at some of the West India Islands.

Through the courtesy of the Imperial Post-Office an arrangement was made by which parcels could be received from or forwarded to (via England) all countries with which the United Kingdom had a parcel post.

A convention, taking effect from 1st October, 1890, was made with Japan for the establishment of a parcel post between the two countries, and a similar convention with Barbadoes taking effect from 1st April, 1891.

On the 28th April, 1891, there arrived at Vancouver the magnificent steamship the Empress of India, the first vessel of the line which had been established by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company under the contract with the Imperial Post-Office. The route taken by this line between Vancouver and China and Japan is 300 miles shorter than any other route from the American continent, and as the vessels of the line run at a high rate of speed, the time hitherto taken to reach China and Japan has been materially lessened.

A convention for a direct interchange of money orders between Canada and the Leeward Islands was concluded on the 11th February, 1892. Similar conventions were concluded between Canada and Bermuda on the 6th December, 1892, and between Canada and British Guiana on the 7th December, 1892. A convention was made with British Guiana for a direct exchange of parcels on the 7th December, 1892.

Arrangements were also made for increasing the weight of parcels sent between Canada and the United Kingdom from seven pounds to eleven pounds, and for a slight reduction in the charge upon all parcels exceeding one pound in weight.

The arrival at Vancouver on the 9th June, 1893, of the Miowera, which had sailed from Sydney on the 18th May, marks an epoch in the history of the Canadian post-office, which well may be the starting point from which a great future may develop, and whilst it is the last event to be reached in this short sketch of the growth of the Canadian post-office since the confederation of the North American colonies, no event which has occurred is more pregnant with interest to the inhabitants of both Canada and Australia, or more likely to exercise an important influence upon the Empire to which we are all so proud to belong, because in connection with the fast service across the Atlantic, and the wonderful facilities afforded by the Canadian Pacific railway for the transmission of mails and passengers between Vancouver and Halifax, it will make Canada the great highway to the Australian colonies and the islands of the Pacific, as it already is becoming to China and Japan.

A comparison of the transactions of the Canadian post-offices for the year ended 30th June, 1868, with those for the year ending 30th June, 1895, will show at a glance the enormous increase in the operations of the department during the quarter of a century which has elapsed since the confederation of the provinces.

For the year ending 30th June, 1868, the revenue was $1,024,701.98.

For the year ending 30th June, 1895, the revenue amounted to $3,815,455.71, an increase of $2,990,753.73.

At the close of 1868 there were in Canada 3,638 post-offices; on 30th June, 1895, 8,832 post offices were in operation.

On the 30th June, 1869, the total amount standing to the credit of depositors in the Post-office Savings Bank was $856,814.26. On the 30th June, 1895, the amount was $26,805,542.47.

Classification of balances to the credit of depositors on 30th June, 1895:

	Number.	Amount of Average Balances.	Balance.
Amts. $500 and under	104,627	$10,615,176.37	$ 101.74
Amts. over $500 and under $1,000	9,611	6,712,482.06	698.41
$1,000 and over.	6,330	9,447,884.04	1,478.54
	120,628	$26,805,542.43	$222.22

The amount paid for mail service on railways in 1868 was $196,247.94. In 1895 it was $1,241,115.31.

The following article, copied from a paper published in the Province of Quebec, the Journal Des Trois Rivières, dated August 16, 1869, gives some interesting details of the Canadian Postal System. From this paper we learn that on the cession of this country to Great Britain, a regular mail carrier was established between the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The celebrated Benjamin Franklin was the Deputy Postmaster-General for the English colonies from 1750 to 1774. In 1776 this functionary, while giving evidence before a committee of the British Parliament, stated that, as a rule, the mail carrier kept the route by the water highways, seldom penetrating into the interior. From this evidence, also, we learn that the mail communication between Quebec and Montreal was not more frequent than once a month. For not having established intermediate post-offices between the two towns, Franklin alleged the great distance between the settlers on the banks of the St. Lawrence, the isolation of the Canadian villages, and the excessive difficulty of inter-communication in his day. The fact is, however, that Benjamin Franklin was a great enemy to Canadian prosperity, and always looked with aversion upon the people of the newly acquired colony.

In 1774 war having broken out between the mother country and the English colonies, Franklin was deprived of his office, and Mr. Hugh Finlay, a subordinate of the great republican philosopher, was appointed Deputy Postmaster-General for Canada. Mr. Finlay had given great proofs of capacity under the previous regime, and being a man of very high character and probity, he was armed with large discretionary powers to put the mail system of Canada on a better footing, and to make its operations more extended and regular. Until 1790, there were added but two intermediate postoffices between Quebec and Montreal; in the year following offices were opened at Three Rivers and Berthier. Every month, however, a mail messenger was sent by Halifax to England. At this date the local mail betwixt Quebec and Halifax was bi-weekly in summer and once a week in winter. The local mail between Quebec and Montreal had increased to twice a week. In 1800 Mr. Hugh Finlay was succeeded in office by Mr. George Heriot. This gentleman, being also commissioned as Deputy Postmaster-General for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, as well as for the two Canadas, had to oversee the service throughout all these provinces, and to visit them from time to time. In the four first years of his administration he opened but one new postoffice in Lower Canada, and five in the upper province. Matters progressed slowly enough until 1816, when Mr. David Sutherland succeeded Mr. Heriot. In 1817 he opened six additional offices of delivery in Lower Canada, which made the total number of offices in operation thirteen. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island were placed under the management of independent officers, and in that year the mails were still sent but weekly to New Brunswick. In 1824 Mr. Sutherland was succeeded by Mr. Thomas Allen Stayner, and it was in this year that New Brunswick was endowed with an independent postal department. Mr. Stayner administered his important office for the space of twenty-seven years with great zeal, and giving entire satisfaction to the public. He greatly increased the number of local offices, and inaugurated many of the reforms which have since developed into that vast and safe system of communication with which our people are familiar. On the 6th April, 1851, the Canadian mail department was transferred from the Imperial to Provincial control, the first Postmaster-General being the Hon. John Morris. Some idea of the progress made from 1760 to 1781, a period of twenty years, may be obtained by contrasting the department under which Benjamin Franklin, and that over which Mr. Morris was called to preside. The carrier, who made monthly journeys on horseback between the military posts of Quebec and Montreal, and whose safe arrival at either of those then distant cities would no doubt cause the utmost satisfaction to the King's lieges, male and female, had been replaced by the steamboat, and soon would be by the railway, and the two primitive post-offices of Canada had extended into a network of 601 local offices, transmitting among them letters to the number of 2,132,000 annually. In 1861 these figures had attained to 1,775 offices, and the number of letters transmitted to 9,400,000; in addition to a weekly line of ocean mail steamers to Europe, over 1,200 miles of railway, doing mail service from one end of Canada to the other, and a magnificent network of telegraphic wire supplementing the postal system. What number of offices were open and the number of letters carried for the year ending July, 1867, when the postal system of the Dominion was placed under one head, we have not at hand, but we may state that during the official term of the Hon. Mr. Langevin, the revenue from this source attained almost $900,000. In the year 1851 the system of cheap postage was tried in Canada, the rate being reduced from an average one of fifteen cents to a uniform rate of five cents prepaid, and seven cents for unpaid letters. In the following year this reform resulted in doubling the number of letters carried, with the reduction of only one-third of the previous revenue, and in a short time the receipts not only increased to the former figure, but greatly exceeded it.

CHAPTER XXXIX. CANADIAN PARLIAMENTS.

Simcoe's First Legislature—The Early Members—Contested Elections and Their Results—Where the House Met and When.

The first Parliament of Upper Canada was elected in 1792. The infant town of York formed a portion of the constituency of York County, the member being Mr. James Baby, who also represented Lincoln. He was succeeded in 1796 and in 1801 by Richard Beasley, and in 1805 by Solomon Hill and R. Nelles. In 1801 Henry Alcock represented East York, and Angus McDonell was the member in 1802 and 1805. Mr. William Weeks sat for what is described as the second riding of York in 1805, and Justice Thorp in 1806. In 1813 the West Riding of York was represented by John Wilson, and in the latter year Mr. Thomas Ridout also sat for the same constituency, combined with the county of Simcoe. He appears to have had for his colleague Robert Nelles, who was also member for the First Riding of Lincoln and Haldimand. In 1817 Peter Robinson represented East York, and in 1820 the town of York obtained separate representation, Mr. John Beverley Robinson being the first member. Very few of the records of the early Parliaments are complete, many having been irrecoverably lost, so it is impossible to give a list of the members for the county with any great degree of accuracy. As far, though, as can be ascertained, from 1792 to 1820 they were as follows:

- 1792—James Baby, York.
- 1796—Richard Beasley, W.R.
- 1801—Richard Beasley, W.R.
- Henry Alcock, E.R.
- 1802—Angus McDonell, E.R.
- 1805—Solomon Hill, W.R.
- R. Nelles, W.R.
- Angus McDonell, E.R.
- William Weeks, 2nd Riding.

1806—Justice Thorp, 2nd Riding.

1809—John Wilson, W.R.

1813—Thomas Ridout, W.R.

—Robert Nelles, W.R.

1817—Peter Robinson, E.R..

W.R. and E.R. stand for West and East Riding respectively.

The earliest record, as has been stated, of a member being returned to the Provincial Parliament by the town of York was in 1820, when the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, afterwards Chief Justice, was elected. He continued to hold the seat until 1829, when the late William Lyon Mackenzie was elected. He sat for about a year, when he was displaced by the late Hon. Robert Baldwin; but again was elected in 1831, and held possession until 1836, when the late Chief Justice Draper was elected in his place.

A general election followed Lord Sydenham's act for the union of the two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada in 1841, when Isaac Buchanan and John Henry Dunn (the latter had been for many years Receiver-General of Upper Canada) were elected. They were both Reformers, while their opponents were George Monro and Henry Sherwood, Conservatives. There was a great deal of rioting and noise at this election, but no very serious disturbance.

Mr. Buchanan resigned January 2nd, 1843, and was succeeded by Hon. Henry Sherwood, the elections taking place on March 6th, 1843. Capt. Macaulay was the unsuccessful candidate. Both were Conservatives.

At the general election of 1844 Wm. Henry Boulton and Henry Sherwood were returned. In 1848 there was no change in the representation of the city, the old members securing re-election.

In 1852, though, there was a change, George Percival Ridout succeeding Mr. Sherwood, and having as his colleague W. H. Boulton. The latter resigned in February, 1853, and a new election followed, when Mr. Sherwood once more came in.

In 1854 John George Bowes and John Hillyard Cameron were elected.

At the election of 1857 the candidates were for the Conservatives John B. Robinson and W. H. Boulton, the Reformers, George Brown. The poll resulted thus:—Brown, 2,365; Robinson, 2,303; Boulton, 2,204.

A bye-election took place in September, 1858, on Mr. George Brown accepting office. Mr. John H. Cameron was the opposing candidate. The result was: Brown, 2,665; Cameron, 2,510; majority for Brown 155.

At the general election of 1861 Toronto was divided into east and west, the members being John Crawford and John Beverley Robinson respectively.

The last Parliament of Upper and Lower Canada was elected July 3rd, 1863, when Mr. A. M. Smith and Mr. John Macdonald were elected respectively for East and West Toronto.

The Confederation Act of 1867 came into force on July 1st, in that year, Toronto being divided into East and West. In 1872 a Redistribution Act was passed and under its provisions the constituency of Centre Toronto was created thereby giving the capital of Ontario three members. In the last Parliament this act was still further amended by giving West Toronto two representatives instead of one.

The following is a complete list of those members who have represented York and Toronto since 1820:

1820—John Beverley Robinson, C.
1825—John Beverley Robinson, C.
1829—John Beverley Robinson, C.

The Provincial Parliaments from 1792 until the Act of Union were as follows:

- Sept. 17, 1792, to June 1, 1797.
- June 1, 1797, to May 28, 1801.
- May 28, 1801, to February 1, 1805.
- February 1, 1805, to February 2, 1809.
- February 2, 1809, to July 27, 1812.
- July 27, 1812, to February 4, 1817.
- February 4, 1817, to January 31, 1821.
- January 31, 1821, to January 13, 1825.
- January 13, 1825, to January 8, 1829.
- January 8, 1829, to January 7, 1831.
- January 7, 1831, to January 15, 1835.
- January 15, 1835, to November 8, 1836.
- November 8, 1836, to Act of Union, 1841.

The first Parliament met in Niagara in 1792, all the rest from 1797 until the Union in 1841 met in York and Toronto.

Since the union of the provinces in 1841 the Parliaments of Canada have been as follows:—

- PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENTS FROM UNION.
- 1st—April 8, 1841—December 9, 1843.
- 2nd—November 12, 1844—July 28, 1847.
- 3rd—January 24, 1848—August 30, 1851.
- 4th—December 24, 1851—June 22, 1854.
- 5th—August 10, 1854—June 10, 1857.
- 6th—January 13, 1858—May 18, 1861.
- 7th—July 15, 1861—May 12, 1863.
- 8th—July 3, 1863—July 1, 1867.
- Confederation Act passed July 1st, 1867.

DOMINION PARLIAMENTS.

Nov. 1, 1867 to July 8, 1872.
 March 5, 1873, to Jan. 2, 1874.
 March 26, 1874, to Aug. 17, 1878.
 Feb. 13, 1879, to May 18, 1882.
 Feb. 8, 1883, to Jan. 15, 1887
 April 13, 1887, to Feb. 3, 1891.
 April 29, 1891, to April 4, 1896.

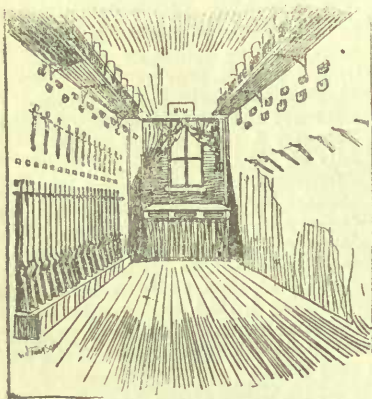

The Parliament of 1841 to 1843 met in Kingston, then it was removed to Montreal, and in 1848 to Toronto, in 1852 it again removed to Quebec, and back to Toronto in the autumn of 1855. In 1859 it returned to Quebec and remained there until it went to Ottawa in 1864, where it has remained since.

CHAPTER XL. THE OLD ARMOURY.

The History of the Building—The Troops who Have Occupied it—Some Notable Reminiscences.

On April 4th, 1895, the Royal Grenadiers vacated their quarters in the old armoury in Jarvis street, and the building from that date ceased to be used for military purposes. The history of the building is as follows:

Owing to the fact that the roof of the old drill shed on Wellington street had fallen in, about 1875, it was deemed advisable by the authorities to provide better accommodation for our citizen soldiers. Indeed, at that particular date so bad was the accommodation that it is great wonder the various corps were kept together. Their commanding officers, though, held on. Of course, they expressed at mess and in their orderly rooms their very decided opinion "that the service was going to the devil," but still they stuck to their commands, and worried the City Council, the Provincial and Dominion Legislatures, and everyone else concerned until better quarters were given them.

Early in 1876 the movement to erect the armoury took definite shape. The City Council had before them a petition for pecuniary aid, which was answered as is set forth in the following paragraph:

Extract from Report No. 3 of the Standing Committee on Finance and Assessment of the Council of the Corporation of the City of Toronto, February 11th, 1876:

"Since the last meeting of the committee they have had referred to them by the Council the petition signed by numerous and influential ratepayers, asking that a grant be made towards erecting a drill shed for the volunteers. The committee would suggest to the Council that the site for the proposed new drill shed should be left in abeyance for the present, so as to afford the committee an opportunity for further conference with the Government and officers of the volunteer force. In the meantime, however, they would recommend that a grant, not exceeding the sum of $7,500, be made by the Council for the purpose indicated."

The agitation for better quarters was by no means a new one, but the site was a vexed question. Some two years previously to the date referred to in the resolution just quoted, the City Council had decided to give a site, where the armoury was subsequently erected, and this decision was adhered to. The City Council dealt with the matter as is here related:

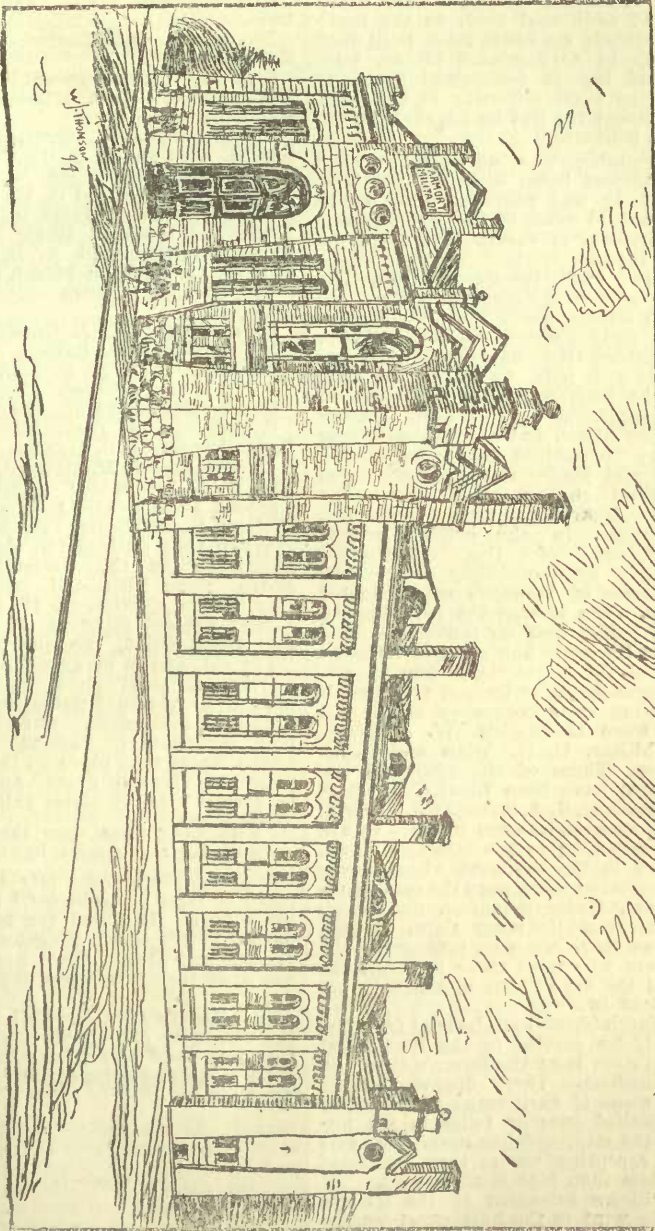

Extract from Report No. 7 of the Standing Committee on Finance and Assessment of the Council of the Corporation of the City of Toronto, March 13, 1876:

"The committee, having had under consideration the question of a site for the new drill shed, are of opinion that the interest of the city and the convenience of the volunteer force will be best served by adhering to the decision arrived at by the Council of 1874, viz., the appropriation therefor of the property in rear of the City Hall, formerly occupied as a cattle market."

There was some little difficulty at first, when the site was finally decided upon, as additional space was required for the armoury. This slight obstacle was soon overcome by the action of the City Council. They proceeded as is told in the following:

Extract from Report No. 13 of the Standing Committee on Finance and Assessment of the Council of the Corporation of the City of Toronto, April 29, 1876:

"The committee have had under consideration a communication from Lieut.-Col. Otter, stating that it is very desirable that additional land, to the north of that already set apart for a Drill Shed site, may be appropriated for an Armoury, and beg to recommend that, as there is no legal difficulty in the way, an additional ten feet be granted for the purpose indicated."

The building was at once proceeded with, the cost being borne by the Government. It was provided that, whenever it should cease to be used for military purposes, it should revert to the city of Toronto.

In March, 1877, the Queen's Own, then under command of Lieut.-Col. Otter, and the 10th Royals, under Lieut.-Col. Boxall, took up their quarters in the Armoury, and remained there uninterruptedly until April 4th, 1895. Of course, in 1880, when the 10th were reconstructed on the resignation of Lieut.-Col. George Alexander Shaw, and a practically new regiment organized under Lieut.-Col. Grasett and Major Dawson, there was a nominal change, but, in so far as the quarters were concerned, the changes in the officering and nomenclature of the corps did not affect anyone. They were the headquarters of Toronto's scarlet-coated regiment, when it was the 10th Royals, and the public took no interest in the fact that the corps had changed its name to that of the Royal Grenadiers.

The commanding officers of the Queen's Own during their occupancy of the Armoury were Lieut.-Cols. W. D. Otter, A. A. Miller, D. H. Allan and R. B. Hamilton. Those of the 10th and the Grenadiers have been Lieut.-Cols. Boxall, W. Stollery, G. A. Shaw, H. J. Grasett, G. D. Dawson and James Mason. Of the officers belonging to the Queen's Own, who were in the regiment when it was first quartered there were the commanding officer, Major Delamere, and Quartermaster and Honorary Capt. Heakes. Of course there were no officers in the Grenadiers who were there in 1877, the whole of the old officers of the 10th being retired in 1880.

On March 30, '85, marched out from the drill hall for service in the North-west 250 men each from the Queen's Own and the Grenadiers. They departed amid such a scene of excitement as has only been equalled once or twice in the history of the city, and has never been surpassed, excepting when they returned rather less than four months later.

The officers belonging to the Queen's Own who went to the North-west were:—
Lieut.-Colonel—A. A. Miller,
Major—D. H. Allen.

Adjutant—Capt. J. M. Delamere.
Surgeons—Drs. Leslie and Wm. Nattress.

Paymaster and Quartermaster—R. Heakes.

Captains—Thomas Brown, P. D. Hughes, I. C. McGee, W. C. McDonald, H. E. Kersteman.

Lieutenants—A. T. Scott, R. J. Casseis, H. Beck and C. F. Gunther.

Second Lieutenants—H. W. Mickle, A. B. Lee, I. George and G. H. Baird.

Of those officers Major Delamere, Drs. Leslie and Nattress, Major McGee and Capts. Gunther and A. B. Lee were still in the corps on March 31st, 1895.

The Grenadiers were officered as follows:—

Lieut.-Colonel—H. J. Grasett.

Major—George D. Dawson.

Adjutant—Capt. F. F. Manley.

Surgeon—Dr. Ryerson.

Quartermaster—Lieut. Lowe.

Captains—F. A. Caston, James Mason, O. L. Spencer, C. G. Harston.

Lieutenants—D. M. Howard, A. M. Irving, W. C. Fitch, G. P. Eliot.

Second Lieutenants—A. C. Gibson, Jno. D. Hay, F. M. Michie, John Morrow.

When they quitted the old Armoury, remaining in the Grenadiers of the above were Lieut.-Col. Mason, Major Hay, Capts. Caston, A. M. Irving, Adjutant Gibson, Surgeon G. S. Ryerson and Capt. Eliot, the quartermaster.

The old, and in many respects most inconvenient, drill shed was the scene of many a pleasant gathering and many notable excursions were made by both regiments to various cities and towns. From that place as their starting point the "boys in green" and "the lads in scarlet" many times sallied forth

"With their guns upon their shoulders And their bayonets by their sides," not to "capture some fair ladies, and make of them their brides," but to have "two hours' drill and ten hours' divilment" in Montreal, Kingston, Ottawa, London and other places, and if reports are true they "on those days did their duty."

The Queen's Own farewell parade was the strongest on record, more than 650 bayonets, and the Grenadiers likewise made a record attendance.

CHAPTER XLI.

SCARBORO'S CENTENNIAL.

Those Who Settled the Township — Their Struggles and Difficulties—Reminiscences of the Century.

Wednesday and Thursday, June 17th and 18th, 1896, were red letter days in the history of Scarboro' township, for they were the two days which the inhabitants of that thriving municipality set apart whereon to celebrate the hundredth year of the settlement of that part of this fair Province of Ontario.

Just a century since one David Thomson, who was the youngest of three brothers named respectively Archibald, Andrew and David, who were sons of Archibald Thomson, a small landed proprietor and also a tenant farmer in the County of Dumfries, Scotland, took up his abode on what was then forest land near where now stands St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and fixed upon it as the future home of himself and his wife. No house stood there, no place other than the open air, was there where he could lay his head, so he and two or three others at once set to work to fell the trees with which to construct a dwelling house. This was accomplished within a few days, not, though, without increasing labour and peril from the wolves which then infested that part of the country. As soon as ever the house was built David Thomson was joined by his wife, Mary, like himself a native of the "land of brown heath and shaggy wood," and there for years they dwelt until a more suitable dwelling could be erected.

For seven months Mrs. Thomson never saw the face of another female, and when she did see one of her own sex that woman was not of her "ain coun-tree," but an Indian. The sight though was a gladsome one, and though Mrs. Thomson's visitor was unable to speak a word of English, and Mrs. Thomson was equally ignorant of the Indian tongue, they were able by the subtle instinct inherent in woman's nature to understand that the visit was pleasurable to both. Years afterwards Mrs. Thomson used to relate what pleasure this chance visit of the Indian squaw gave her.

Very shortly after David Thomson settled in Scarboro' came not only his brother Archibald, but members of the Johnston, Elliot and Walton families, all of whom have now many descendants in the township, in Toronto and in many different places.

Archibald Thomson was a U. E. Loyalist, and first settled in Kingston about 1786, after the revolutionary war, he having emigrated from Scotland to the American colonies about the year 1770. He was a builder, and built in Kingston the first Episcopal church erected in that city.

When he settled in Scarboro', at the close of the century, he took to farming.

The Johnstons, Elliots, Waltons, Littles, and other of the pioneer settlers all were farmers, and in many cases their descendants still hold the land which their great grandfathers cleared nearly a hundred years ago.

David Thomson died aged 71, on June 22nd, 1834, and his widow on November 8th, 1847, aged 80. On her tombstone in St. Andrew's churchyard she is spoken of as the "Mother of Scarboro'."

The graveyard adjoining St. Andrew's church, where David Thomson and his wife lie buried, and where other "forefathers of the hamlet sleep" well repays an hour's stroll among its tombstones and grassy knolls. It contains at least one hundred stones to the memory of different members of the Thomson family. Besides these just mentioned, though, there are great numbers of others. In the eastern portion of the ground lies James Richardson, who died August 27th, 1825. Many of this worthy's descendants were at the celebration.

Close to James Richardson lies John Skelton, another pioneer, who was born in 1772, and died in 1856. Near John Skelton reposes John Thomson, a cousin of David's. He was born in Scotland in 1782, came to Canada in 1796, and settled over the Don the same year on the river's eastern bank. He was noted as the man who carried the declaration of war in 1812 for General Brock from York to Penetanguishene. The whole journey was on foot, and Thomson was accompanied only by an Indian guide. John Thomson died in 1873, aged 91 years.

Besides these, there are the graves of Robert Johnston, who died in 1833, aged 75. He was all but contemporary with David Thomson in Scarboro'. William Devenish, born in 1772, died in 1856; Alexander Neilson, died aged 91, in 1850. He came from Lanarkshire, in Scotland, and left children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. Then there is Thomas Walton's tomb. He was born in 1779, settled in Scarboro' in 1818, died in 1852, "leaving over 100 descendants." Of other old pioneers may be noted John Thom, born in 1791, died 1877, and Andrew Paterson, who died on March 15th, 1884, in his 87th year.

The day was everything that could be desired for an outdoor celebration, such as was that of Scarboro's centennial. Though it was very hot, there was just enough breeze to temper the sun's rays, and there was nothing to interfere with the enjoyment of those who came from every part of the township, from Toronto and from distant parts of the country. Men and women were there who had never seen the place before, but were drawn to the spot, being as they were the grandchildren, great grandchildren, or even a generation later than that, of those who lived, worked and died in the township a century previously.

The day's proceedings began with a service in St. Andrew's church at 10.30, when addresses were delivered by Revs. D. B. Macdonald, Drs Fletcher and Ball. These addresses were devoted principally to a comparison of the past with the present and to reminiscences of religious efforts made in the township in its earlier days. Dr. Fletcher for eleven years was the Presbyterian minister at St. Andrew's.

Following the service came dinner, and then a public meeting was held, commencing about two o'clock, in a large marquee, capable of seating about 600 people, erected in the field to the west of the churchyard, opposite the site of David Thomson's house. On that particular spot stood a tall flagstaff, from which the British flag floated.

A choir no less than 250 strong, under the leadership of Mr. Stouffer, rendered the hymn "Before Jehovah's Awful Throne," and then prayer was offered by the Rev. G. W. Stephenson, followed by another hymn from the choir.

Rev. D. B. Macdonald presided, and on the platform were: Messrs. John Richardson, M.P.P., Simpson, Rennie, Rev. Father Gallagher, J. Chisholm, Dr. McDiarmid, Levi Anniss, J. A. Scarlett, James Ley, William Helliwell, J. McLeod, G. Secor, F. Armstrong, W. Oliver, J. Gibson, J. Buchanan, James Weir, James Stirling, A. W. Malcolm, J. Thomson, D. Thomson, T. Thomson, J. Chester, Fred Reesor, P. Reesor, W. Mason, R. Armstrong, T. Armstrong, C. J. Clark, George Elliott, Rev. J. A. Brown, and scores of others.

Rev. D. B. Macdonald first said a few words and then called on Mr. John Richardson, M.P.P., who spoke of Scarboro' past and present, and of what great cause they all had for thankfulness at the great progress the township had made, not only from what it was one hundred years ago, but in their own time. In concluding he hoped "that all Scarboro' men would live so that the world would be better for having known them."

He was followed by Mr. Rennie, whose address was principally taken up by contrasting the state of agricultural labour with what it was when he began farming 50 years ago.

Then followed other addresses by Messrs. James Ley, Rev. J. A. Brown, Dr. McDiarmid and Levi Anniss.

"Rule Britannia" by the choir, lustily joined in by the audience followed the speeches, then came the National Anthem and the meeting concluded with prayer by the Rev. Father Gallagher.

The second and last day of the Scarboro' centennial celebration was an unqualified success, and was, if possible, an improvement on the first day. The weather was absolutely perfect, a trifle too warm, possibly, yet glorious sunshine, which caused the hundreds of visitors to appreciate all the more highly the leafy glades and cool spots to be found on the banks of the stream beside which David Thomson pitched his tent one hundred years ago.

It would be impossible to form even an estimate of the numbers present. There were certainly three, perhaps even four, thousand. The vast driving sheds near St. Andrew's church were crammed with vehicles, certainly two hundred of them. Amos Thomson's barn and yard presented the appearance not so much of a quiet farm yard as of a country hotel on market day, which was doing a thriving business. Down the lanes, up the lanes, in every fence corner, nay, even in the churchyard itself, were rigs stationed or horses tethered.

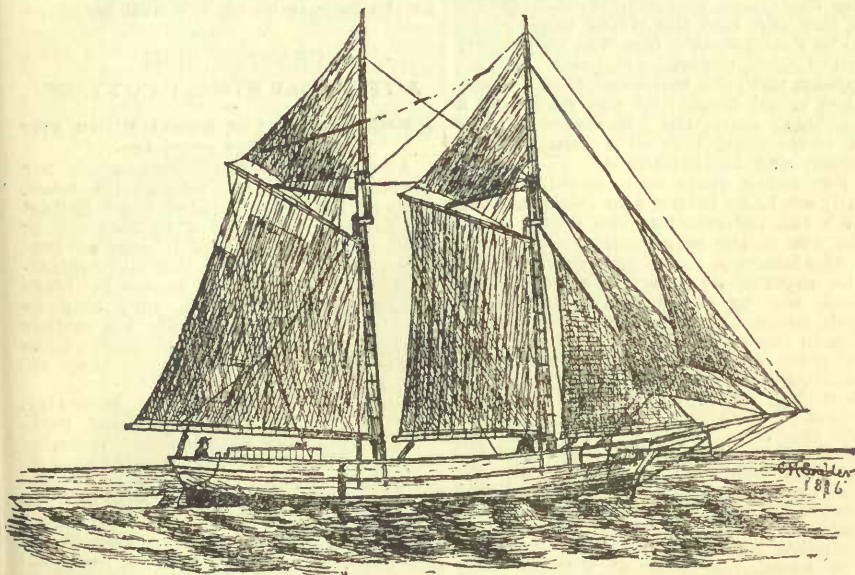

As on Wednesday, the day's proceedings commenced with divine service in St. Andrew's church, when speeches expressing thankfulness for the past and hope for the future were delivered by Rev. Dr. McGillivray, of Kingston, sometime of Scarboro', and Mr. E. S. Caswell, of Toronto. The choir sang delightfully, and the congregation was simply enormous.

About 2.30 arrived the Lieutenant-Governor, accompanied by Commander Law and Mr. T. C. Patteson. He was cheered again and again on his arrival, and took his seat on the platform close by the chairman, the Rev. D. B. Macdonald. Others on the platform were: Mrs. Curzon, S.A.C., always a welcome guest; Mr. O. A. Howland, M.P.P., Messrs. W. F. Maclean, H. R. Frankland, E. M. Morphy, John Richardson, M.P.P., Rev. C. E. Thomson, C. J. Clarke, Levi Annis, David Boyle, Elias Wood, D. B. Read, Q. C., and many more. Rev. D. B. Macdonald welcomed the guests, and then Mr. Stouffer's choir sang "Raise the Flag," and all the flags on the masts surrounding the central tent were run up to the summit and gaily floated in the breeze. There followed "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" by the band, and cheer after cheer was given by the crowds present.

made them all justices of the peace."

Following the Lieutenant-Governor came Mr. W. F. Maclean, H. R. Frankland, Mr. Elias Wood and Mr. D. B. Read, Q.C. Mr. O. A. Howland also spoke, dwelling on the way in which history was made. Then came more speeches, and at 5.15 "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, and the most enthusiastic meeting ever held in Scarboro' came to an end. Sports followed, and the celebration concluded with cordial handshakings, embraces and mutual congratulations.

SCHOONER ANN BROWN.

The chairman then called on his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to address the meeting, who in a brief but happy speech spoke of the progress Scarboro' had made in the last century. His Honour in his reminiscences told one very amusing story of a former resident of the township, Rev. Mr. McDowell. The clergyman was a bit of a "sport," and liked a good horse and always rode one. Well, one day he was riding along and he met a certain Mr. Frazer, who had just been made a justice of the peace. The newly-made J.P. took upon himself to rebuke the parson for riding a horse, saying "His Master was meek and lowly, and rode upon an ass." "Ah, weel," replied McDowell, "I couldna get a jackass, for they've

CHAPTER XLII.

THE SCHOONER "ANN BROWN."

An Old Time Stone Hooker that has had a Checkered Career.

There are few vessels in the stone trade but what have centre-boards. But the Ann Brown, although she has been a stone hooker for forty years, is an exception to this rule, having a standing keel, and when loaded drawing about six feet of water. This at once shows those acquainted with stone-hookers and their ways of working that she was not built for the trade she is now engaged in. And in truth she was not. The Ann Brown was built and intended for trading on the upper lakes with the Indians, and is one of the pioneer traders in those regions; her history has been a chequered one, and not without interest in its way.

The Ann Brown was built about sixty years ago at the corner of Front and Bay streets, by a day labourer, who worked at her in his spare time and in the evenings after his day's work was done. His wife lent him all the assistance she possibly could, and received the reward of having the vessel named after her. The vessel was launched from where she was built, for at that time the Esplanade was simply the bottom of the bay, and the water came right up to Front street. She was only about thirty tons burden, yet small as this appears now, she was considered a good-sized vessel then. She was rigged as a schooner, and, like all the schooners of those days, carried a square foretopsail and top-gallantsail.

For three years she traded successfully on Lake Huron and Georgian Bay with the Indians, but one night, when she was in the neighbourhood of Manitoulin Island, a squall struck the vessel. The captain was in the cabin at the time, but he abandoned the vessel in such haste that he left $500 behind him in the cabin locker. Together with his crew of two men he reached Manitoulin Island in the yawl boat. Next morning to their surprise they saw the schooner riding at anchor, bottom up, not far from shore. When she capsized the anchor had got clear of the cat-head, and the chain running out through the hawse-pipe, had taken firm hold of a boulder on the bottom, and so prevented the vessel from pounding herself to pieces on the shore. The vessel was righted without very much trouble and continued to trade with the Indians for some time. The captain found his $500 quite safe, and on the whole may be considered to have come off from the adventure very fortunately.

In 1850 William Pollock, a veteran stone-hooker captain, bought the Ann Brown, but he sold her next year to Samuel Goldering, one of Toronto's vessel men. He sailed her for three years and in 1854 sold her to Abraham Block, who came out to Canada in 1834 and settled down at Port Credit. When he bought the Ann Brown she was considered an old boat, so she must have been built before 1840. She has remained in the Block family ever since her purchase from Mr. Goldering, and Thomas Block now sails her. She was rebuilt in 1876, but is of practically her original shape. In 1876 her old transoms, which were rather square, were removed, and rounder ones substituted giving the stern a prettier appearance, and materially improving the vessel's sailing qualities. When she was built she was painted black, but she has been painted white with a lead colour bottom for many years now. Her dimensions are: Length over all, 36 feet; beam, 11 feet; draught when loaded, 6 feet. It is a question whether the Ann Brown or the Barque Swallow is the older. But the former, if not the older, is, perhaps, the more interesting, both from her history and from the fact that her hull is built on the model of a regular sailing vessel, not on that of a scow, as the Barque Swallow's hull is.

CHAPTER XLIII.

A TERAULY STREET COTTAGE.

A Residence Built by Robert Millen over Seventy-five years Ago.

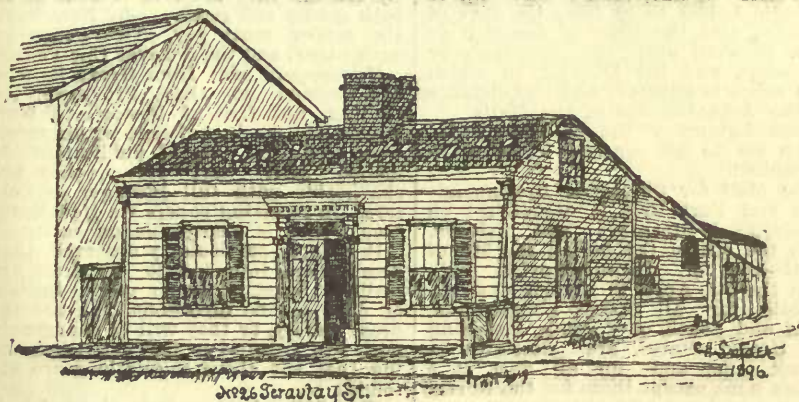

About eighty years ago, when our nineteenth century was in its teens, Robert Millen emigrated from Belfast to Canada, and settled in Toronto, or rather York, for such it was at that time. He was a carpenter and cabinet-maker, and must have known his trade thoroughly, for before very long he was able to send back for his mother and sisters, and had a comfortable home ready for them when they arrived.

He bought a lot from Dr. Macaulay, and on this he erected a neat little cottage, which is now 26 Terauly street. Though rather small, this cottage was a very pretty one. It was nicely painted, kept very trim, and the lintel and door posts were very highly ornamented by Mr. Millen himself, for he was a very skillful carver in wood; and in this connection he is said to have told his children to go to St. Michael's Cathedral, if they wanted to see a proof of his skill, for he carved the ornaments of the altar there. The fanlight above the cottage door was composed of many small panes of glass, set in lead so as to form fancy patterns, and fastened with brass. Even to-day, although the old fanlight has been replaced by another one, by no means so ornamental, the elaborate carving above the door and on either side of it, shows that the little cottage must have been really beautiful at one time. The chimney was of such a size as to easily accommodate the most rotund Santa Claus without any trouble; and there used to be two white seats, one on either side of the door, but as the neighbourhood became more thickly populated, and, we regret to add, its moral tone became deteriorated, the seats had to be removed, for they were too convenient resting places for loafers and other obnoxious individuals.

This cottage must have been built seventy-five years ago, at least, if not earlier, for Mr. Millen's daughters, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Manning, to whom we are indebted for a great deal of this information, say that their father lived in the cottage with his mother and sisters for some time before his marriage, and that they were both born in the house, and one of them is seventy years old.

As Mr. Millen's family increased, addition after addition was made to the rear of the cottage, so that it runs quite a distance back, as may be seen in the accompanying drawing. In the yard at the back of the house Mr. Millen built quite a large workshop, which is still standing, and in which he used to pass many a busy day, working at his trade. He died nearly a quarter of a century ago, at the ripe age of seventy-seven.

After his death Mr. Wright occupied the cottage for some time, and it is now a tenement house. Small as it is, it is so laid out that two families can occupy it. Although it is rather faded in appearance and somewhat the worse for wear in reality, to the mind of the old residents it calls up the time when all the land in the neighbourhood was a field, dotted here and there with trees, when Teraulay street was only the road leading up to Teraulay Cottage, where Dr. Macaulay lived, and when Millen's cottage, with its huge, old-fashioned chimney, and wide door, was the only house on the west side of this road.

CHAPTER XLIV.

The City as it was at the Rebellion—Names of Old Time Officials and Institutions—Many Interesting Details.

The Toronto Directory for the year 1837 was published by George Walton, and printed for him in Toronto by T. Dalton and W. J. Coates. It was a small octavo volume of some 290 closely printed pages. It commenced, after the title page and several indices, with an advertisement of the Preparatory School for Young Ladies, kept at Carfrae Place, Bay street, by Miss Mary Ann Steward, which was followed by another advertisement, that of "The Royal Floating Baths," of whom the proprietor was Mr. Cull. Strangely enough the advertisement does not mention the locality of these baths, though they were on Front street. Then come the following notices:

PRINCIPAL HOTELS OF THE CITY.

John Cotter's New British Coffee House, corner of King and York street, at the west end of the city.

James Hutcheson's City Hotel, Front street.

David Botsford's Ontario House, Front street.

William Campbell's North American Hotel, Front street.

John Grantham's Old British Coffee House, Front street.

NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED IN CITY.

Upper Canada Official Gazette—Robert Stanton; published on Thursday.
 Courier of Upper Canada—George

Gurnett, editor; published Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The Patriot—Thomas Dalton, editor; published Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Christian Guardian—Ephraim Evans, editor; published on Wednesdays.

Correspondent and Advocate—W. J. O'Grady, editor; published on Wednesdays.

The Albion of Upper Canada—James Cull, editor; published on Saturdays.

The Constitution—W. L. McKenzie, editor; published on Wednesdays.

POST-OFFICE, CITY OF TORONTO.

Duke street, near the Upper Canada Bank.

James S. Howard, Postmaster.

List of Post-offices in Upper and Lower Canada, corrected to the first of September, 1836, with the Postage of a Single Letter to or from the City of Toronto, and the time of despatch to each, showing also the Seigniorly or Township, and the District, in which each office is situated, and the distance by the Actual Route of the Mails.

Here follows a list of Post-offices, which we do not consider it necessary to publish.

The Mail for Chippewa, Drummondville and Fort Erie is despatched on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from the 5th of October to the 5th of April—and for Drummondville daily from the 5th April to the 5th October.

Mails for all Offices lying North, West and South of Toronto, including the United States, are closed at 11 o'clock a.m.; and for all East at 4 o'clock p.m., except those for the North, which are closed at 9 o'clock a.m.

Letters can be sent after the hours of closing, up to twenty minutes past 9 a.m., ten minutes to 12 a.m., and to ten minutes to 4 p.m., on payment of Three Pence with each Letter, exclusive of the Postage, whether that is paid or not.

The Western and Southern Mails due daily (except Sundays) at 1 o'clock p.m.

The Northern Mails due on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 1 o'clock p.m.

The Eastern Mail due daily, except on Mondays, at 6 o'clock a.m.

Letters for the United States must be paid to Lewiston; and such as are intended to go that way to Europe, must be paid to New York. Letters for Europe can be sent by way of Quebec, between the 20th of May and 1st of November, in Merchant Vessels. They can be forwarded by Halifax (per Falmouth packet) and New York at any season.

The Postage must be paid either way.

A Letter with one inclosure is double; and with two or more inclosures, if it does not weigh an ounce, is treble. Letters weighing an ounce are chargeable four single rates; and for each quarter-ounce over that weight, a single rate is chargeable.

Newspapers, Magazines, and other printed papers not subject to letter Postage, must be paid at the time of mailing, at the rate of One Penny per sheet, or per every 16 pages; or they will be charged with full letter postage.

Letters can be sent to most parts of the World by way of New York or Boston.

Colonial Newspapers may be sent to Great Britain and Ireland, either by way of Halifax, or by way of New York. By Halifax they are free of Postage to both sender and receiver—by New York the sender must pay Two Pence on each paper, and the receiver One Penny.

Newspapers sent from Great Britain and Ireland to these Provinces, via Halifax, are free of Postage to both sender and receiver if sent within seven days from the date of publication. If mailed after that period, they are chargeable with full Postage, as Letters. On receiving papers via New York, Two Pence is chargeable on each.

It is to be particularly observed, that Newspapers intended to go free, via Halifax, must have no mark, initials or date on the directions, but the address merely, or they will be chargeable with full Letter Postage, notwithstanding that the above regulations are attended to.

This Office is open from eight o'clock a.m. till seven o'clock p.m., daily, Sundays excepted, on which days it is open from nine till ten a.m.

THE ACT OF INCORPORATION OF THE CITY OF TORONTO.

4th William IV., Cap. 23.

An Act to extend the Limits of the Town of York; to erect the said town into a City, and to incorporate it under the name of the City of Toronto. (Passed 6th March, 1834.)

(Condensed.)

The Preamble of the Bill recites the reasons for incorporating the late Town of York, and altering its name.

1st. Enacting clause repeals all such Acts and portions of acts likely to interfere with the operations of this Act, so far as they relate to the City of Toronto.

2nd. Limits of the City and Liberties, commencing at the distance of one chain, on a course south 16 degrees east, from the south-westerly corner of Lot No. 2, in the first concession from the Bay, in the Township of York; thence southerly in the direction of the side line between lots 2 and 3 in that concession to the distance of 500 feet from the point at which the said line intersects the margin of the water on the shore of Lake Ontario; thence westerly through the waters of Lake Ontario, following the curvatures of the shore and keeping always 500 feet from the margin of the water, till the point is attained, that is 500 feet from the north-westernmost point of the peninsula, forming the harbour; then across the water to a point where a line drawn southerly from the north-easterly corner of Park Lot No. 29, in the direction of the easterly boundary line of the said Park lot intersects the margin of the water on the shore of Lake Ontario; thence northerly along the said line so drawn to the north side of the allowance for road between the Park lots and the second concession from the Bay; thence easterly along the said north side of the allowance for road to the easterly shore or water's edge of the river Don; thence southerly along the easterly edge of the river Don to the point where the water's edge intersects the southerly side of the allowance for road in front of the first concession; thence easterly along the south side of the said allowance for road in front of the said first concession to the place of beginning, except the lands that have been conveyed to the University of King's College.

3rd. Limits of the City, commencing at the distance of one chain on a course north, 74 degrees east from the south-east angle of Park Lot No. 3, in the Township of York; thence south 16 degrees east upon a continuation of the allowance for road between Park Lots numbers 2 and 3 to the water's edge of the Bay in front of the Town of York; thence westerly along the water's edge of the said Bay to the point at which the westerly limit of the allowance for road between Park lots numbers 18 and 19 in the said Township of York being produced southerly intersects the said water's edge; thence northerly in the direction of the said westerly limit of the said allowance for road to the distance of 400 yards north of the northerly boundary line of Lot street; thence easterly parallel to Lot street, to the easterly boundary line of the allowance for road between Park lots numbers 2 and 3; thence south 16 degrees east along the easterly boundary line of the said allowance for road 400 yards more or less to the place of beginning, and that the said City be divided into five Wards, to be called respectively St. George's, St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's, St. David's, and St. Lawrence's.

4th. St. David's Ward, all that part of the City north of the north side of King street, and east of the west side of Yonge street.

5th. St. Andrew's Ward, all that part of the City between the north side of Lot street, and the north side of King street, and west of the west side of Yonge street.

6th. St. Patrick's Ward, all that part of the City north of the north side of Lot street and west of the west side of Yonge street.

7th. St. Lawrence's Ward, all that part of the city south of the north side of King street, and east of the west side of Yonge street.

8th. St. George's Ward, all that part of the City south of the north side of King street, and west of the west side of Yonge street.

9th. Attaches the liberties immediately adjacent to each Ward, to such adjacent Ward.

10th. City by Act of Common Council may erect any part of the liberties into outer wards, such outer wards not to exceed five in number.

11th. The liberties of the ward, when it has as many inhabitants, and contains as much assessed property as the smallest ward at the first assessment after the passing of this Act, must be erected into an outer ward, by proclamation of the Mayor.

12th. From the date of the proclamation such part of the liberties to be a separate ward, and have all the privileges of a ward, but not to return members to the Common Council until the time of the next City Election.

13th. All that portion of the Liberties (commonly called the Bay) to constitute the Port of Toronto.

14th. The inhabitants of the said City to form a Body Corporate and Politic by the name of the City of Toronto, to have a Common Seal with power to change the same, to be capable of suing and being sued, and of purchasing and holding estate, real and personal, and of giving and receiving Bonds, Judgments, etc., etc.

15th. Two Aldermen and two Common Councilmen to be chosen for each Ward, who shall choose the Mayor from among the Aldermen, in case of equality of votes that Alderman who is highest assessed to give the casting vote.

16th. Qualification for an Alderman, to have been resident householder for one year next before the election, to be so resident at the time of election, and to be possessed of real property within the City or Liberties, rated at two hundred pounds.

17th. Qualification for a Common Councilman the same as that for an Alderman, except the property, which is one hundred and fifty pounds, including additional fire-places.

18th. That the Aldermen and Common Councilmen of the said City shall be elected respectively by the majority of votes of such persons being male inhabitant householders within the ward for which the election shall be holden, or the liberties attached thereto, as shall be possessed at the time of the election, either in freehold or as tenant for a term of years, or from year to year of a town lot or dwelling house, within the said Ward or Liberties, provided always, that a portion of a house in which any inhabitant shall reside as a householder, and not as a boarder or lodger, and having a distinct communication with the street by an outer door, shall be considered a dwelling house within the meaning of this clause; and provided also, that no person shall vote at any such election who has not been a resident inhabitant within the said City or Liberties thereof for the period of twelve calendar months, and who has not resided within the Ward for which the election shall be holden, or the Liberties attached thereto, for the period of three calendar months next before the election.

19th. The Mayor, Aldermen and Common Councilmen, and voters at any election for city affairs, to be natural born or naturalized subjects of his Majesty, of the full age of twenty-one.

20th. The legislative power of the City is vested in the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen in Council.

21st. That all legislative Acts of the said City are to be expressed as enacted by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of Toronto, in Common Council assembled.

22nd. The City shall have power to make and alter any laws for regulating streets, roads, walks and highways, to prevent cattle, etc., running at large, to tax and regulate dogs, to prevent encumbering and injuring the streets, etc., to prevent selling by retail in the public highways, any meat, vegetables, fruits, etc., to prevent the sale of intoxicating drink to children, to prevent immoderate riding, driving, or riding or driving horses or cattle on sidewalks, to regulate wharves, and to prevent obstructions in the harbour, to regulate and prevent fishing, fishery lights, bathing, tipling houses, etc., to enforce observance of the Sabbath, to regulate or prevent public shows, to prevent cruelty to animals, billiard tables, theatres, to regulate auctioneers, butchers, cartmen, and cartage, hawkers and pedlars, puppet-shows, etc., firing guns, fire-works, slaughter-houses, tanneries, nuisances, taverns, places of public entertainment, the sale of hay, fish, country produce, coal, cordwood, juts, lime, bread, vegetables, fruits, etc., to regulate markets, party walls, chimneys, fire companies, dangerous manufactures, alms houses, jails, etc., to appoint and remove city officers, police watchmen, to inflict penalties for refusing to serve in municipal offices, to regulate voters, to tax the property in the city provided that such tax shall never exceed in one year four pence on the pound on the assessed value of property lying and being within the limits of the city, or two pence in the pound upon the property lying or being within the liberties, to make all laws for the city not repugnant with the Statutes of the Province, provided that the penalty for the breach of any city law shall not exceed ten pounds or thirty days imprisonment, and that the fine for refusing to fill any municipal office shall not exceed ten pounds.

23rd. The city shall have the power to protract or widen the streets.

24th. The city shall have power to borrow money, not exceeding the revenue to accrue within the next five years.

25th. Two Aldermen and two Common Councilmen to be elected for each ward.

26th. The Mayor is to hold his office from the first Monday in February to the same day in the following year.

27th. Place of election for any ward to be in said ward; return to be made to the Clerk of the City on the same day.

28th. The Aldermen and Common Councilmen to be chosen annually, on the second Tuesday in January, five days notice to be given of any election.

29th. The Aldermen and Common Councilmen to hold office from the first Monday in February till the day before the first Monday in February following.

30th. The Mayor to be chosen on the Thursday following the choosing of Aldermen and Councilmen—to enter upon his office on the first Monday of February following.

31st. Persons disqualified to be elected or to vote at elections, officer holding election, may give a casting vote.

32nd. Persons not compelled to serve any Municipal office: Ministers of any Religious persuasion, the Judge of Court of King's Bench, his Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor-General, all practising Physicians and Surgeons.

33rd. Until registry be made, voters may be required to take the oath of qualification.

34th. After registry, voters to produce certificate of qualification, and if required, to take the oath.

35th. Persons swearing falsely, guilty of perjury.

36th. Ward elections.

37th. Vacancies occurring in wards, by death, resignation, etc., persons to be elected for remainder of term.

38th. The Mayor to swear in Aldermen and Councilmen.

TAXATION IN UPPER CANADA.

The general revenue for the purpose of supporting the Government in Upper Canada, and administering of the laws, is raised by a duty of 2 1-2 per cent. on all goods and merchandise, imported by sea, at the ports of Quebec or Montreal. Wines, liquors, and certain articles of luxury, have a specific duty laid upon them. This duty is paid by the importer, to the officer at Quebec, Upper Canada receiving one-third of the sum collected each year. This amount, with a duty upon shop and tavern licenses for vending spirits, Distillers, Hawkers, Pedlars and Auctioneers, and a duty upon certain imports from the United States, which are also paid by the importer, form the public resources of the Province, and is at the disposal of the Provincial Legislature, for the payment of public officers, and for such general purposes as may be deemed essential to the welfare of the people and interest of the Province.

LOCAL TAXES OR DISTRICT RATES.

Every Stove erected and used in a room where there is no fire-place is considered as a fire-place.

*A Merchant's Shop is defined to be where any foreign articles are sold.

Note.—The Rate of Assessment in any District is limited to one penny in the pound, which when collected is paid into the District Treasury, and is applicable to local purposes within the District for which they are levied.

HIGHWAY RATES.

Every person inserted on the Assessment Roll is, in proportion to the estimate of his property, held liable to work on the highways or roads in every year, as follows:

If his property be rated at: £25, 2 days; £25 to £50, 3 days; £50 to £75, 4 days; £75 to £100, 5 days; £100 to £150, 6 days; £150 to £200, 7 days; £200 to £250, 8 days; £250 to £300, 9 days; £300 to £350, 10 days; £350 to £400, 11 days; £400 to £500, 12 days. For every £100 above £500 to £1,000, 1 day; £200 above £1,000 to £2,000, 1 day; £300 above £2,000 to £3,500, 1 day; £500 above £3,500, 1 day.

Every person possessed of a Wagon, Cart, or Team of Horses, Oxen, or beasts of burthen or dratt used to draw the same, to work on the highways three days.

Every male inhabitant from 21 to 50, not rated on the Assessment Roll, is compelled to work on the highways three days.

Persons emigrating to this Province, intending to become settlers, and not having been resident six months, are exempt; and all indigent persons, by reason of sickness, age, or numerous family, are exempt at the discretion of the Magistrate.

Any person liable may compound, if he think fit, by paying 5s. per day for each cart, etc., and 2s. 6d. for each day's duty, to be paid within 10 days after demand made by authorized Surveyor, or the Magistrates can issue their distress for double the amount and costs.

In addition to the particulars given there is a list of the sheriffs, the judges of the District Courts, clerks of the peace, treasurers and surrogates and registrars of Upper Canada. Then there are the names of the officials of the Indian, the License, the Land Registry and Customs Departments. After these come the list of directors and officials of the following banks, all now defunct: The Bank of Upper Canada, Commercial Bank, Farmers' Joint Stock Banking Company, People's Bank, which was on New street, now Jarvis street; Agricultural Bank, on Front street, and Exchange Office. The Directory concludes with a Clergy list, which is of little value, though there are some interesting notices of the various denominations; a table of the Royal family, and the following list:

CHAPTER XLV.

DIRECTORY OF 1846-47.

Toronto's Residents at that Date—Changes in Street Nomenclature — Institutions which no Longer Exist.

Old directories, like old letters, bring back many memories of the past to those who peruse them—some pleasant, some painful. The Toronto Directory of 1846 looked at in 1896 serves to recall a very different city to what exists at the later date. It is not only that the people have changed, that is only natural, but the names of the streets in many cases have also changed, while hundreds of thoroughfares are now to be found for which we look in vain in the directory of 1846. We shall take no notice of new streets, but briefly refer to those found in the directory under a different name to that which they now bear. Boulton street, for instance, is now Pearl street, Caroline is Sherbourne street, then only extending from the bay to Queen street east. College avenue has been transformed into Queen street avenue, Crookshank street is Wilton avenue, Dummer has been changed to William street, and Don street no longer exists, while the houses which stood on it have been pulled down to effect the Don improvements. Hunter's lane is another vanished street, the present Hunter street having no connection with it. March street was first changed to Stanley, and is now Lombard street. Nelson street, formerly known as New street, running from King street east to Queen street east, now forms the southern extremity of Jarvis street. Palace street was the eastern portion of what is now Front street, it began at the south-east corner of the Market square. Park lane is the present University street, and Sayer has become Chestnut street. William street in 1846 was that portion of what is now known as Simcoe street, extending from Queen street west northwards. Yorkville has no longer any existence. It was that portion of the city now lying to the north of Bloor street.

The following is the list of streets and residents:—

GUIDE TO THE NUMBRES OF THE HOUSES.

The numbers are those put upon the houses in chalk, by Mr. George Walton, in conformity with a plan adopted by the Corporation, as follows:

All those streets which run the full length of the City, and cross Yonge street, are divided into two, east and west; the numbers of both divisions begin at Yonge street, and strike off east and west; thus the store of Messrs. Ridout Bros., is No. 1 King street east; and that of Messrs. Sutherland, the opposite corner, is No. 1 King street west; the next houses each way, are Nos. 3 east and west, respectively—the odd numbers being on that side, and the even ones on the opposite; thus Betley & Brown's establishment is No. 2 King street east; and that of Messrs. Lynes & Brown, No. 2 King street west, and so on.

In all the streets running in the same direction as King, although not crossing Yonge street, the numbers begin at the end nearest Yonge street, and rise as they advance east or west.

In all the streets running east and west, parallel with the Bay, the odd numbers are on the north side, and the even ones on the south; and in all those running north and south, at right angles with the former, the odd numbers (beginning at the end at or nearest the Bay) are on the west side, and the even ones on the east.

By a plan of the Corporation, where vacant lots occur, a given space is allowed for a number, to prevent any disturbance of the order arising from the erection of new houses upon such lots. In some instances, this plan has not been strictly adhered to; indeed it was almost impossible for a person, without accurately measuring the ground, to place the numbers properly; but they are sufficiently correct for all the purposes of this work.

CHAPTER XLVI EXECUTIONS IN TORONTO.

The First Man Executed—Strange Scene on the Scaffold—The Kinnear and Other Murders—Some Sad Memories.

Among the many emigrants who arrived in the infant town of York between the years 1793 and 1807 was a young Irish tailor, named John Sullivan. He was accredited with being a good workman, but was very ignorant and dissipated. In the beginning of the year he fell in with a man named Flannery, who was nicknamed "Latin Mike," because of his penchant for making Latin quotations, learned probably at church. The two occasionally got on the spree together. In June, 1798, Flannery wrote out an order for three shillings and ninepence, and put the name of one Fisk to it, then prevailed upon Sullivan while he was intoxicated, to get the order cashed. They then spent the money in whiskey, and Flannery finding that the forgery had been found out, fled across the lake, leaving poor illiterate John Sullivan to pay the penalty. The latter was arrested, pleaded not guilty, but was convicted of having uttered the note, knowing it to have been a forgery, and was sentenced to death. He was confined in the "old log jail," a primitive looking structure situate on the south side of King street, on the site of the Leader building, nearly opposite Toronto street, until about October 11, when he was led into the yard, the place of execution. The scaffold consisted of two pieces of scantling set upright with a stout cross-piece nailed, over which a rope was thrown, while one end was held by the executioner, a man named McKnight, the other was adjusted in a noose around the doomed man's neck. The common, for the whole vicinity was but sparsely settled, was crowded by men, women and children, who were dressed up in holiday attire and looked as if they intended to thoroughly enjoy the occasion. At a given signal the hangman pulled on the rope, and with a sudden jerk suspended Sullivan in the air. It was but for a moment, however, the rope having broken or the knot having got twisted. The executioner coolly proceeded to readjust the rope, and as he finished Sullivan as coolly exclaimed, "McKnight, I hope to goodness you've got the rope all right this time." And then his soul was launched into eternity, without prayer, and without hope, for having uttered a forged order for less than a dollar.

Three years after the above occurrence the Stotenburg brothers began to trouble the neighbours by their depredations, and finally they were arrested and convicted on a charge of having stolen two horses from Mr. Thomas Bright, uncle of Mr. Thomas Bright, who for thirty-five years was an official of the County of York. The brothers were sentenced to death, and every preparation was made for the execution, but on the day previous to that on which they were to be hanged a reprieve arrived, and they were allowed to spend their remaining years in prison.

In 1816 the next murder occurred in "Muddy York," the criminal being a farmer named Elijah Dexter, and his victim James Vanderburg. The two men had a quarrel, and for several months were deadly enemies. Finally, on the 8th or 9th of July, the two met on Yonge street, near the Rosedale ravine, and after an exchange of some hot words and a blow given by Vanderburg, Dexter presented a gun and shot Vanderburg dead on the spot. There was a great deal of excitement over this trial, many being of the opinion that Dexter acted in self-defence. However, he was convicted, and was sentenced to die on the 10th August following. A scaffold, the first proper one that had ever been built in the neighbourhood, was erected, and on the day of the execution Dexter was led forth by the jailer, the Rev. John (afterwards Bishop) Strachan accompanying him. There was a great crowd of people surrounding the yard, and when Dexter was led out a great cheer went up. Farmers had driven their families for miles to witness the sight, and business for the time was entirely suspended. When Dexter reached the foot of the scaffold he paused, and, eyeing the dread structure, solemnly shook his head. The jailer tried to prevail upon the doomed man to ascend, but the latter firmly refused. Rev. John Strachan then approached, and in a tender, sympathetic voice exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Dexter, do please come up; do come up, please." But Mr. Dexter remained obdurate, and the jailer was in a quandary, not wishing to use force on such a solemn occasion. However, a happy thought struck him, and procuring a horse and cart, placed Dexter in the vehicle with his back to the scaffold, and conveyed him under it. The noose was then adjusted around his neck, and when all was ready the horse was lashed, and, starting forward, left the unfortunate murderer hanging by the neck. When the jail yard was being extended, some time afterwards, the remains of a man were found in a pine box, and they were supposed to be those of either Sullivan or Dexter.

For some years after the execution of Dexter things in this district were very quiet, but on the morning of the 15th February, 1819, the community was horrified by hearing of a most diabolical murder which occurred near Whitby. The murderer was a Frenchman named De Benyon, a dissipated farm hand, who lived in a log cabin on a side road. With him lived a step-son about 13 years of age, and one bitterly cold night this demon first turned his step-son out of the house, and when he crawled in half frozen, De Benyon tied him in front of the fireplace, and, piling more wood on the fire, literally roasted him to death inch by inch. When the poor lad's legs were burned almost black and were unable to support him, the inhuman step-father pushed him forward into the flames until his hair caught fire, and in this position he was roasted, the murderer all the time gazing on his work. De Benyon attempted to escape, but was captured near the Don, where the G. T. R. bridge now crosses the river, and was summarily disposed of by being hanged to a tree. This is the only case of Judge Lynch which is known to have occurred in Ontario.

In the year 1828 Charles French and James Christie were hanged in the rear of the second, or what was then known as the new, jail, near the corner of King and Toronto streets, opposite the site of the old log jail, and on the former site of the establishment of Messrs. Rice Lewis & Son. There were present at the execution over ten thousand people, and the greatest excitement prevailed. They ascended to the platform together, and their souls entered into eternity simultaneously.

Charles French was a printer, in the employ of William Lyon Mackenzie, and, but for his sporting proclivities, would have made a steady workman. He was in the habit of attending the theatre on Church street regularly, and one evening meeting with a man named Thos. Joslin, the two had some drinks together, and before the performance was concluded had a quarrel. The fight was renewed near Colborne street, in which French drew a pistol from his pocket and deliberately shot Joslin. He then ran away and took refuge in a tavern on Queen street west, where he was arrested. A great deal of influence was used to secure his acquittal, but in spite of this influence he was convicted and sentenced to death. Wm. Lyon Mackenzie did everything in his power to get a reprieve, and he was not the only one who struggled for the unfortunate printer. Attorney-General Robinson and Dr.

Strachan, of the Executive Council, refused a reprieve, and upon this being announced, the night before the execution Sir Peregrine Maitland, the Governor, roused up his butler, a man named Raper, in the middle of the night, and succeeded in securing a midnight session of the Executive Council. Still the reprieve was not granted, and French went to his death without a murmur or apparent fear.

James Christie and his wife lived with a farmer named Wood, near Whitechurch, on Yonge street, but, determining to go to the States, the farmer paid him all his wages. Mr. Wood also offered to allow his son Charles, a boy about 14 years of age, to drive him into town. The offer was accepted, and the three started in a waggon, with a pair of horses. Not satisfied with his own property, Christie envied his late employer his horses, and determined to become possessed of them, and so determining, concocted a devilish plan. When they arrived at a place known as the Oak Ridges, Christie turned to the boy and remarked:

"Charles, do you see that squirrel over there? Let's go and get a shot at him." The unsuspecting lad jumped from the waggon with his gun, and when they had travelled a short distance through the woods he bent forward to get a shot, when Christie stole up behind him and knocked his brains out with the butt of his rifle. The inhuman monster then threw the body behind a decayed log and returned to his wife, making some excuse to account for the boy's absence. He then came to town, drove around by Hamilton to Lewiston, and crossed to the United States. Meanwhile the mother of the lad, when he did not return next day, became anxious, and set out on horseback to find him. Upon arriving at the Oak Ridges the horse would go no further, but attempted to break through the fence. At first the mother endeavoured to make her horse go ahead, but finally she gave him the reins, and leaping the fence the faithful and intelligent beast carried her to where her son's body had been hidden. Bills containing a description of Christie were sent in every direction, and finally the murderer was captured in Albany by the jailer, who noticed him driving about with the stolen team of horses. He was brought back, tried, when the whole plot was revealed, found guilty and was hanged at the same time as French.

On the 14th December, 1837, Julia Murdoch was hanged for having wilfully murdered her mistress. The murderess was a woman about 21 years of age, unmarried, and worked as a servant for a Mrs. Harriet Henry. She was well thought of by the family, and when Mrs. Henry became ill Julia was called in to wait on her. For a time everything progressed favourably with the invalid, but one evening she died very suddenly. At the time it was not suspected that Mrs. Henry had been murdered, but shortly after Julia Murdoch was discovered selling some silver spoons and other articles, which had belonged to her mistress. She was arrested for larceny, and it was then that the first suspicion of foul play was entertained. It cannot now be ascertained if Mrs. Henry's remains were buried and the body exhumed, or whether the burial had not taken place; but at any rate, a post-mortem examination was made, when it was discovered that Mrs. Henry had been poisoned with arsenic. The girl was charged with the crime, and although she strenuously denied all knowledge of the poisoning, yet it was brought home to her. The poison had been mixed in some fish which had been prepared for dinner. The girl Murdoch denied her guilt. The day of execution was cold, snow on the ground, and the scaffold was erected on Toronto street, where now stand the York Chambers, near the old jail. The day before her execution she stated that she considered the dreadful circumstances in which she was placed as a merciful arrangement of Divine Providence for the purpose of leading her to a true repentance of her misimprovement of early religious advantages. She readily submitted to be pinioned. The Christian Guardian of that date says that the utmost decorum marked the conduct of the vast assemblage of persons who witnessed the fatal result. "It was, however, exceedingly revolting," says the Guardian, "to see among the spectators a large number of females." On the day of her execution fully four thousand people congregated about the jail yard, a large proportion of them being women and children. The prisoner was dreadfully agitated, and as she walked to the gallows leaned for support on her spiritual comforter's arm. When she arrived at the platform she appeared to regain courage, and after prayer had been offered up she knelt on the trap-door, and was hurried into eternity. A portion of McGrath's troopers surrounded the scaffold, and by hard work succeeded in keeping the crowd away from the structure. This was the first and only woman hanged in this district.

The Christian Guardian of April, 1838, contains the following account of the execution of Samuel Lount and Peter Matthews, in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. The Guardian says:—"The drop was erected in the open space between the jail and court house. Early in the morning persons began to assemble to witness the awful exit of the unhappy men who had forfeited their lives by the prominent part which they took in the late unnatural rebellion. A highly creditable degree of commiseration for them appeared to prevail almost universally, but not the slightest indication was given of any intention to interrupt the administration of the laws. An armed force composed of the volunteer companies in the city was in readiness under the direction of the civil authorities to preserve order; but we are happy to say their interference was not required. The criminals were attended to the place of execution by the Revs. James Richardson and John Beatty, the former of whom offered up an impressive prayer on the scaffold, in which the unhappy men appeared to join, highly suited to their awful circumstances. It affords us unfeigned satisfaction to state that we learn from the rev. gentlemen who attended them subsequently to their condemnation, that they were brought to acknowledge the enormity of their offence, and with every indication of true repentance to acquiesce in the justice of their sentence. During the last few days of their earthly existence they appeared to possess a considerable measure of religious comfort and hope."

Their bodies were committed to their friends and were interred in the Potter's field and afterwards in the Necropolis. Petitions praying for pardon were presented to the Lieut.-Governor but he declined to interfere on the ground that Lount was the leader of the first band of rebels who marched to Montgomery's, beyond Yorkville, on the night that Col. Moody was murdered, and that Matthews was the leader of the party who burned the property of Mrs. Washburn, attempted to burn the Don bridge, killed a man and fired at a woman. This statement was afterwards declared disproved.

On July 30, 1843, Thos. Kinnear, a Scotch gentleman of good family and fortune was found brutally murdered in his home at Richmond Hill, and suspicion fell on one of the stablemen named James McDermott, and a female servant named Grace Marks. The murder was discovered by Mr. Francis Boyd, who was going to Kinnear's to keep an appointment. On going to the house he saw signs of a struggle, and upon investigation found Kinneer's body in the cellar. He also found the body of the housekeeper, Ann Montgomery, in a wash tub, doubled up, with a handkerchief tied over her mouth, showing that she had been strangled. Kinneer was in the city on Saturday and had drawn money from the bank, and was murdered that night on his return. The fact having been ascertained that McDermott and Grace Marks had taken a steamer for Lewiston, Mr. F. C. Capreol, an intimate friend of Mr. Kinneer's, engaged another steamer and with Mr. Kingsmill, the High Bailiff, left Toronto at 1 a. m. on Monday in pursuit. Landing at Lewiston they soon had possession of both prisoners. At the trial conclusive evidence was brought against McDermott and he was sentenced to death, which sentence was carried out at the old jail on Berkeley street. Grace Marks was convicted as an accessory and was sentenced to the penitentiary for life, but some few years afterwards received a pardon and went to the United States.

If Wm. Turney had not received a good education he probably never would have been hanged, but his fondness for letter writing betrayed him as a miserable murderer, and he expiated his crime on the gallows in the year 1847, at the old jail on Berkeley street, hooted and jeered at by a crowd of over three thousand people. The executed man was a discharged soldier, and resided at Markham, where he spent the greater portion of his time in consuming bad whiskey and quarrelling with his neighbours. One day he called at a store kept by a Mr. Logan, and instructed the clerk, a man named Walter McPhillips, to draw him a jar of whiskey. The latter stooped down to the barrel to get the liquor, and while in this position Turney quietly slipped up behind him and struck him on the back of the head with a heavy club, killing him instantly, his brains being scattered over the barrel. Turney then stole about $11 from the till and escaped from the store unnoticed. Shortly afterwards the murder was discovered, but at the time the authorities were at a loss on whom to fix the guilt. Turney, who had been drinking to excess, was suspected, and was taken into custody. A few days before the trial he managed to have delivered to his wife a letter, in which he informed her that she would find the money he had taken from Logan under the floor of a water closet on the premises, and to use it in his defence. The wife was unable to read, and took the letter to a neighbour to read for her.

This neighbour at once informed the authorities of the contents, and on these statements, backed by a chain of circumstantial evidence, Turney was adjudged guilty, and suffered on the gallows, along with James Hamilton, another murderer. In his dying speech Turney stated that he had been a trooper in Sir De Lacy Evans' corps in Spain, and stated that he and four other troopers some years before went to the house of a Spanish grandee, and forced the wife and two daughters to get them something to eat. While they were carousing one of the troopers attempted to kiss one of the daughters, and the son resented the insult and struck him. The troopers, half crazed with liquor, then murdered the whole family and escaped.

In 1846 Robert Hamilton hired out to a farmer named Noah Eaton, who lived on lot 9, 5th concession of Toronto Township, new survey, and was well thought of. He effected an arrangement that he was to supply Eaton with all the necessaries of life, keep him in comfort on the farm, pay him £10 annually, in exchange for which he was to have control of the property, and at the death of Eaton was to receive the title deeds. They were getting along nicely until Robert one day came to the city, became ill with cholera, which was at that time prevalent, and in two days died. His brother James conveyed the news of Robert's death to Mr. Eaton, and after some trouble stepped into Robert's place. But failing to receive the stipulated £10 he neglected his business, and Mr. Eaton became dissatisfied with him. One day Hamilton came to the city, and, securing the companionship of a young man named Brown, son of a blacksmith, proceeded to the residence of Mr. Eaton. After talking with the old man for a few minutes the two young men left, but they had not proceeded far down the road before Hamilton turned and ran back to the house, saying that he had forgotten something. When James entered the house Mr. Eaton was in the act of stirring up the fire. Picking up a poker, James struck his victim on the head, the blow stunning him. The would-be murderer fled, leaving the old man's body lying across the red-hot coals. This occurred on Saturday afternoon, and as the neighbours could see no smoke coming from the chimney, they forced open the door, and found Eaton's body lying on the fireplace, burned to a crisp. Hamilton then joined Brown, but the latter, upon hearing of the murder, became frightened, and fled with his companion to Trafalgar Township, where they were arrested. They were tried in the Court House on Church street, when Brown was declared innocent, and Hamilton was condemned to death, he being hanged along with Turney. On the gallows he could hardly stand, and he died a pitiable spectacle.

On the 14th day of November, 1849, Robert Smith, a private in the Rifle Brigade, stationed at the Old Fort, was hanged at the jail on Front and Berkeley streets, for the murder of Richard Eastwood, a private in the same regiment. It appears that these two men were not on friendly terms, and were continually "chaffing" each other. Eastwood was spoken of as a well-behaved soldier, but Smith was somewhat dissipated, and of a jealous disposition. It was proposed to draft Eastwood into the Royal Canadian Rifles, and upon hearing this on the 13th August previously, Smith said sneeringly to the other, "So you've got to go in with the — Canucks; I'm — well glad we're rid of you." Eastwood made some retort to the effect that Smith was not fit to be in a Canadian regiment, and then left the guard room. He returned in about an hour, and as he entered the room Smith got behind him, and, raising his rifle, deliberately shot him through the back, the bullet passing through the unfortunate man's body, and lodging in the bed-post. Smith was immediately taken into custody, and was handed over to the civil authorities. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to death, the sentence being carried out on November 14. Before his execution Smith made a confession, blaming whiskey as the cause of his ruin. He ascended the scaffold with a firm step, and when he reached the platform he drew up to "attention," and saluted the great crowd beneath him, who were shoving and jostling one another to get near the doomed man. He muttered something inaudible, and then, turning to the fatal trap door, drew himself up to his full height, and gave a signal of readiness. He neither blanched nor quivered, and looked more like a soldier on parade than a man about to face his Maker.

On Tuesday, October 24, 1854, Martin Richard Kehoe was placed on his trial, charged with the murder of his wife, Ellen Kehoe, on the 30th July, 1854. The trial took place before the late Mr. Justice Burns. The prisoner resided on Power street with his wife. The woman's throat was cut in three places in such a manner that it would have been impossible for her to have committed the act herself. No evidence was called for the defence. Mr. Dempsey, in defending the prisoner, claimed that it was most improbable that in the middle of the day, with a slight partition dividing the house from the next one, and no property or money to induce the prisoner to murder, that Kehoe should have committed the deed. Mr. Dempsey urged the stronger cases of circumstantial evidence which had been tried before and acquitted secured; he, however, admitted that the medical testimony was strong. The jury found a verdict of guilty.

On Saturday, November 4th, Kehoe was placed at the bar and asked what he had to say prior to sentence. The prisoner said: "I call upon the Supreme God, before whom I am probably shortly to appear, to acknowledge my innocence. I had neither hand, act nor part in the matter, notwithstanding the evidence of the medical gentlemen to the contrary. I know not how the act was committed."

His Lordship—The jury have found you guilty of the crime with which you were charged, and I have no doubt they came to a proper conclusion. The crime is that of murdering her whom you led to the altar and promised to love, honour and cherish. There is no discretion allowed to the court, no punishment, save one. It is only by that which your life is forfeited. I can hold out no chance of mercy this side of the grave. That could only be thought of, if a certain kind of evidence was produced in relation to the crime with which you were charged. But in this matter I can hold out no hope to you whatever on this earth. Only this remains with me—to give you time to make your peace with God. A month, I hope, will be sufficient for that purpose. To that God now look for mercy, for there is none to be expected from the offended laws of your country, and I hope and trust that you will make use of your time, so as to obtain a complete and successful atonement for all your misdeeds in this world. Employ your remaining time in condoning for future punishment for all your offences, as well as for this. The sentence of the court is that you be removed to the common jail, and from that, on the 4th December, you shall be brought to the place of execution, and there hanged until you are dead.

Upon the conclusion the prisoner again protested his innocence.

On Monday, 4th December, Kehoe was led to execution. The scaffold was erected on the west wall of the old jail on Front street. The execution was a public one, and thousands were present, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather. Shortly after 10 o'clock Kehoe, accompanied by two Roman Catholic clergymen, the sheriff, the governor of the jail and others, was pinioned in his cell and led out for execution. He walked to the gallows with a firm step and an unflinching look that betokened none of the bearing of a hardened criminal, or a would-be hero, but the demeanour of a humble penitent. He ascended the steps which led to the scaffold, and standing on the front part addressed those assembled. He stood boldly forth, with the air of an injured martyr, and addressed the people beneath in a voice no way shaky with emotion. He spoke for several minutes; said he was innocent of or unconscious of having committed the crime for which he was now about wrongfully to suffer. He exhorted all Catholics and others who were present to pray for his soul and be liberal to him in their opinion; spoke of the course of his past life as one that should be guarded against; thankful to the governor of the jail for his considerate and suitable treatment; begged them to be good men and temperate, and said it was to liquor he owed his present misfortune. Having concluded his "dying words," which he delivered with a fluency and theatrical manner that ill befitted the occasion, he bowed his head, and the executioner immediately covered him with a cloth, adjusted the fatal noose and led him back to the trap door. Here he knelt down composedly, and the clergyman bent toward him, and after he had uttered some inaudible words they retired to the rear of the wood-work. The spring bolt was pulled by the hangman and Kehoe was in the other world. While the body dangled in the air the blood spurted from Kehoe's mouth and eyes, to the horror of all present. He confessed to having been imprisoned in the States for having stabbed the wife he afterwards murdered.

John O'Leary was executed on March 4th, 1859. He had been tried on the 28th October, 1858, for the murder of Hugh Kelly, in the township of Georgina, on the 26th July previous, but the jury, being unable to agree after being locked up for one night, were discharged. Prior to this trial he attempted to escape from the jail. Kelly had given evidence favourable to one Cole, who had a lawsuit with O'Leary, that prompted the murder, which was accomplished by stabbing with a dirk. The evidence was partially circumstantial. Mr. Justice Hagarty charged the jury to find him guilty of manslaughter if the evidence showed that he had done the stabbing in the heat of passion and without premeditation. If he did it coolly and vindictively they should bring in a verdict of murder, but if they were not convinced of his identity they should acquit him. At the next Assizes he was convicted at the time, and sentenced by Mr. Justice McLean. O'Leary said Kelly was on top of him and he pulled out a knife and struck him in the arm. He had not had a fair trial, as the Government had refused to pay his witnesses. On the scaffold he made the following statement:

"My Dear Friends,—As reports are going abroad in the newspapers that I have not expressed a contrition for my sins, neither have I, they say, made any confession, I beg leave to contradict it before you all. With my whole heart I do feel contrition for my sins, and particularly for that crime for which I am going to offer up my life, and would a thousand lives if I had them, for what use is this life for that in the world to come? I also tell you, my dear friends, that I have made my confession with as good a disposition as I am capable of. And, besides, I would not at this moment change my situation for that of the Queen of England, because I feel confident that I am prepared. I hope to meet my Creator with a clear conscience, and therefore I trust in his great mercy that I will participate in His glory before the setting of the sun. I humbly beg, therefore, my dear friends, that you will pray to the Lord that the Lord may have mercy on my soul."

William Fleming was executed on the same day (March 4, 1859), hour and scaffold, as John O'Leary, for the murder on 6th December, 1858, of Thomas Maddigan, or Riordan, by which name he was better known, as he had been adopted and reared by a person of that name. The murder was committed in the lane in rear of Mr. Hawkes' then residence, on the north-east corner of Bay and Wellington streets, now in rear of Gwatkin's warehouse, where a scuffle occurred between Maddigan and Fleming. One, William Scott, rushed between the two, and saw a dirk in the hands of Fleming. Maddigan fell, and Scott thought he was drunk, but it was subsequently discovered that he was stabbed and was dead. His body was then conveyed to Welch's tavern, on the corner of Bay and Wellington streets, where the party had been drinking previous to the murder. Fleming was afterwards arrested in the Young Canada saloon, on the corner of Church and Front streets, though the landlord tried to hide him. When arrested he feigned drunkenness. A number of abandoned females, who had been carousing at Welch's with Fleming, Maddigan and Scott, were also arrested. Maddigan was 18 or 20 years of age, and a salesman in the employ of Mr. Laidlaw, King street, dry goods merchant. Fleming was but 19 years of age, and was employed as an operator by the Montreal Telegraph Company. The weapon with which the murder was committed was a bowie knife, with an ivory handle. A coroner's jury found that the deceased had come to his death by a stab inflicted by Fleming, and he was subsequently convicted and executed on the same scaffold with O'Leary. Strong efforts were made by Alex. Manning, H. P. Dwight and others to get the death sentence commuted, on the ground that Fleming was so young and that the blow which caused death was an accidental one, but they were unsuccessful. An immense number witnessed the dual execution at the old jail, a large proportion of which were women.

James Brown was executed at the old jail on Monday, the 10th March, 1862, for the murder of Mr. J. S. Hogan, M. P. P. The latter had disappeared about the 1st December, 1859, and the Government subsequently offered a reward for his discovery, or that of his body, and commissioned Detective Wartell, of the Toronto police force, to trace his movements. He went to several American cities, but could find no trace of him, and the matter was almost forgotten. About sixteen months after his disappearance a human skeleton, having yet some flesh on the bones and enveloped in male attire, was found in the marsh. The clothing was identified as that of Mr. Hogan, and an abandoned woman, one of the old Brooks' bush gang, named Ellen McGillick, made a statement to Detective Colgan which led to the arrest of Brown. She stated that she had witnessed the murder of Mr. Hogan on the King street Don bridge one night in December, 1859, by another abandoned woman named Jane Ward, Brown, and two other men named Sherrick and McEntamery, the last-mentioned of whom had meanwhile died. Brown, Sherrick and Ward were arrested, and McGillick's evidence was to the effect that Ward had struck Mr. Hogan on the head with a stone tied in a handkerchief, when Brown and Sherrick robbed him and threw him into the river. Her evidence was partially corroborated by Maurice Malone, Dr. Gamble, and others. Police Magistrate Gurnett committed the three for trial, which took place before the late Chief Justice Draper in April, 1861. Mr. James Doyle, counsel for the prisoner, succeeded in establishing an alibi for Sherrick, several witnesses swearing that at the time at which the murder was alleged to have been committed he was living at Clover Hill, 50 miles from Toronto. The result was that the jury acquitted Sherrick and Ward. Mr. Doyle offered the same evidence to show that McGillick's statement was unworthy of credence, but the Chief Justice ruled it out. The jury found Brown guilty, but Mr. Doyle succeeded in getting a new trial, when Brown was again found guilty and sentenced by Mr. Justice Burns to be hanged on March 16, 1862. The late Mr. Henry Eccles prosecuted at the first trial, and the late Chief Justice Morrison and the late Mr. Richard Dempsey at the second. When sentence was passed upon him Brown declared his innocence. He had a dogged and sullen aspect, which was made more obnoxious by a scar on his nose caused by disease. He was born in Loulam, Cambridgeshire, Eng., and was 32 years of age when executed. He expressed contrition before his death, and declared his innocence unswervingly to the last, and with such earnestness that the ministers who attended to him, among whom were Rev. H. J., afterwards Dean Grasett, and Revs. Edmund Baldwin and S. J. Boddy, expressed their belief in his innocence. He was executed at the old jail, before an immense concourse of people, whom he addressed as follows:

"This is a solemn day for me, boys. I hope this will be a warning to you against bad company. I hope it will be a lesson to all young people, old as well as young, and rich and poor. It was that brought me here to-day to my last end, though I am innocent of the murder I am about to suffer for. Before my God I am innocent of the murder. I never committed the murder. I know nothing of it. I am going to meet my Maker in a few minutes. May the Lord have mercy on my soul. Amen. Amen." The "amen" was echoed by a few near the scaffold. When he was launched into eternity three or four strong spasms shook his frame and then all was over. The body was delivered at the request of deceased to Mr. Irish for burial. The crowd was not as large as that which witnessed the execution of Fleming and O'Leary. The fair sex was largely represented.

Robert Coulter was convicted on 17th April, 1863, of having murdered James Kenny on the night of the 18th November, 1861, and sentenced to be hanged on the 1st June ensuing by the late Chief Justice Draper. During a fight between Coulter and Kenny, on the south-west corner of Edward and Yonge streets on the night mentioned, the latter had six ribs broken and received such further injuries that he died some days thereafter. It was proved that the deceased was an habitual drunkard, and Dr. Sipple swore that he died from natural causes, while Dr. Aikins gave the opinion that his death was caused by inflammation of the lungs, resulting from the injuries he received. Coulter was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and was 35 years of age when executed. He married at 30, and settled in the village of Angus. Subsequently he left his wife and came to Toronto, where he lived a loose and dissipated life. A mistress of his who lived in Yorkville disappeared, and never was heard of after, while he was suspected of killing an Indian about ten years previous to his execution; had served two years in the penitentiary for a murderous assault on a policeman, and afterwards joined a gang of horse thieves in the vicinity of Barrie; also killed a man named Coots, of Angus, on the occasion of a quarrel caused by Coulter's intimacy with Coots' wife. He escaped to the woods, and, so desperate was he known to be, that no one could be got to follow him, especially as he was known to be armed with a rifle. Rewards having been offered, he was subsequently arrested and tried, but, strange to say, was acquitted. He was, however, convicted of robbery, and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary therefor, which was commuted to two years, on the expiration of which he joined the Brooks bush gang. In the fall of 1861 a man named Rebbell died on Centre street, his death being attributed to a kick received from Coulter. There was a woman at the bottom of the Kenny murder, after which he escaped to the county of Huron and got married a second time. He then went to Michigan, where he was afterwards arrested. He was a powerfully built man, and died hard. He made no confession. Between 2,000 and 3,000 witnessed the execution, being a much smaller crowd than attended that of O'Leary and Fleming.

William Greenwood, who committed suicide while under sentence of death, was convicted of having murdered Catharine Walsh at a cottage on the west side of Sayer st. (now Chestnut), two doors north of Elm street. He was the late Mr. J. Hillyard Cameron's gardener, and lived in a cottage on Mr. Cameron's grounds, Queen street west, but subsequently the cottage was removed and his wife went to live with her mother on the Kingston road, while Greenwood remained at Mr. Cameron's. Catharine Walsh had also been a servant at Mr. Cameron's, but had got married to one McNuty, who afterwards left her and went to the States. According to evidence of Dr. Aikens death was caused by strangulation, the marks of a man's thumb being visible on deceased's cheek, as if a hand had been held firmly across her mouth, until she was quite dead. She was enciente by Greenwood, which was proven by one George Stayes, who swore that she told him so. The body of a child was also found in the cupboard of the house, which was found after the deed was done. The medical evidence went to show that the child was smothered. He was tried on October 3, 1863, before the late Chief Justice Adam Wilson and a jury. Mr. Stephen Richards, Q. C., afterwards Chief Justice, prosecuted, and Mr. M. C. Cameron, afterwards Chief Justice, defended the prisoner. Mr. Cameron made a lengthy and powerful speech, and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, but he was detained in custody on the charge of being accessory to the death of the child of Agnes Marshall. Mr. Duckett, a coloured man, who lived next door to where the murder occurred, swore that the prisoner had a peculiar tooth, whereupon Mr. Cameron instructed the prisoner to open his mouth, which he did, but there was no peculiar tooth. Mr. Cameron dwelt on this discrepancy, and it no doubt had a great effect on the jury. After the trial it was discovered that two teeth had been extracted prior to the trial, one of which might be the peculiar one. At the next Assizes he was tried for arson, convicted and sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary.

On the 22nd January, 1864, he was tried for the murder of the child of Agnes Marshall, and was convicted and sentenced to be hanged on the 23rd February following. He declared that he was innocent. On the night before the day fixed for his execution he hanged himself by means of a towel, thus cheating the gallows, as in the De Coursier case. In order to kill himself he had to crouch on the floor, the bar to which the towel was attached not being sufficiently high to enable him to produce death otherwise.

John Traviss was convicted of the murder of John Johnson, on the 23rd November, 1871, near Queensville, in the township of East Gwillimbury. He was tried here on the 10th and 11th of January, 1872, before the late Chief Justice Wilson and a jury, which was locked up all that night, and the trial concluded next day. He was sentenced to be hanged on the 23rd February following. Mr. Kenneth (afterwards County Judge) Mackenzie prosecuted, and the late Mr. R. A. Harrison (subsequently made chief justice) defended the prisoner, who had shot Johnson in the back of the neck while they were riding together in a sleigh. The motive to which the murder was ascribed was that Travis was engaged, or at least was in love with one Miss Nicholl, and that Johnson had effected an estrangement between them. On being sentenced, he said: "I have one favour to ask the sheriff, and that is that I may see my friends before I go to jail." His request was complied with. On the 22nd November, 1871, Travis called at Johnson's house, on the 5th concession of East Gwillimbury, but his victim was not then at home. That he went there with the set purpose of taking Johnson's life he afterwards admitted on the scaffold. After he shot Johnson he went to the house of his sister, Mrs. Wilson, and exultingly announced that he had shot Johnson, and had had his revenge. Though he was but nineteen years of age he was a symmetrical giant, standing six feet two inches in his stockings. On the day prior to the execution there was a parting scene of a most distressing character between Travis and his brother-in-law and two sisters, and Miss Nicholl, for whom he had sacrificed his life. Before the bolt was drawn he said it was his wish that all present should know that it was he who killed Johnson, and that he intended to kill not only him, but also his wife, and had gone to his house for that purpose, but God had saved him from that further crime. He admitted that it was a dreadful thing to do to shoot a man like that. For himself he was quite resigned to his fate, and felt the hope that he was going to his God. He felt that Jesus had hold of one of his arms and his mother the other, and bid them adieu. His death was instantaneous, his weight being over 200 lbs.

The case of John Williams, of Weston, is the next on the list. On the night of the 21st September, 1877, an unfortunate woman named Annie Williams, nee Bennett, was virtually pounded to death by her drunken husband, John Williams, in a humble cottage in the vicinity of Weston. Williams was a Welshman, who was employed by Mr. Eagle, of Weston, in making bricks, at a price per 1,000. He was very frequently under the influence of liquor, and when so, invariably thrashed his poor, patient, hard-working wife, the blows inflicted on her on the night mentioned having been but the finishing touch of numerous poundings she had previously received at the hands of her inhuman husband. When arrested he brutally remarked, "She's a goner this time." The body of the unfortunate woman, when found next morning, presented a horrible spectacle, having been pounded black and blue, her features being smashed out of recognition. She was the mother of fifteen children, all living except one. A man named Stone, who was employed by Williams, had an altercation with him in the cottage, both being drunk, and also a scuffle, when Stone went to the hay loft near the cottage, where it was his custom to sleep. Williams, maddened by his dispute with Stone, then turned on his unfortunate wife, and at intervals during the night bestowed blows and kicks on her which caused her death. The children were powerless to prevent him, and Stone and one Chapman were lying in the hay loft hard by stupefied with liquor. The actual cause of death was a rupture of the liver, effected, it is surmised, when Williams jumped on his wife, as stated by a child of tender years. He was convicted at the Assizes held here on the 29th and 30th October, 1877, before Chief Justice Hagarty and a jury, who made a strong recommendation for mercy. He was sentenced to be hanged on the 30th November following. He was executed on that morning at the jail, being the second execution at that edifice, that of Travis being the first. The hangman on that occasion, a man named England, scorned to wear a mask. The execution was witnessed by about 150 persons, admitted by passes procured from the sheriff. At midnight preceding the execution Rev. Mr. Johnston wrote a letter to Williams' children and his friends, at his dictation, in which he inculcated the duty of attending church, the violation of which had brought him to the gallows. Some days before the execution his four daughters, only one of whom was of tender years, bade him a last and tearful farewell, which was described by Governor Green as the most affecting he had ever witnessed. He was attended on the scaffold by Rev. Mr. Johnston, who linked arms with him as he was escorted from his cell to the scaffold, where, with the aid of some prompting by Mr. Johnston, he spoke as follows: "I would wish to thank the Governor of the jail, the Deputy Governor and all the officers under his charge for the kindly way they have used me. I also wish to thank my counsel for the way they have defended me. I am happy that I got a fair trial, and I thank the public at large for what they have done for me. I am also deeply grateful to my clergyman. That's all."

And then he was launched into eternity.

The Du Coursier murder threw the residents of the neighbourhood of Lambton Mills into a state of horror. Robert and Edward Du Coursier, two brothers, who were continually quarrelling, met at Lambton Mills on the 26th September, 1879, on the roadway, and Robert, raising his shotgun, deliberately fired a charge of buckshot into Edward's body. He then stepped up to his victim and fired a second time, being so close that the burning powder set fire to Edward's clothing. Robert then went home, swallowed a dose of poison, and laid down to die; but was found in time to prevent death from ensuing. He was tried, found guilty, and was sentenced to be hanged on the 16th of June, 1880. On the day before the execution was to take place he, by some means at present unknown, secured a phial of poison, and, swallowing a portion of it, died in two minutes, thus cheating the gallows of a victim.

At an early hour on July 23rd, 1880, George Bennett, also known under the alias of George Dixon, made expiation on the gallows for the murder of Hon. George Brown, managing director of the Globe Printing Company. When Bennett secured work as assistant engineer at the Globe office he was living with a young woman named Mary McGowan, who alleged that she was married to him. He was in the habit of abusing her, and finally, after they had separated several times, she had him arrested for having neglected to support her. Previous to this it had been stated that Bennett was the son of a coloured man, and on this point he was exceedingly sensitive. He accused Banks, the chief engineer of the Globe, of having "given him away," and cherished against him a feeling of deadly enmity. When Bennett was discharged on account of his carelessness and drunken habits, he blamed Banks for having secured his discharge, and he openly threatened that nothing less than Banks' death would satisfy him. For several days previous to the shooting of Mr. Brown, and after he had been released on bail in the case of neglecting his wife, Bennett had been drinking to excess, and had haunted the Globe lane with the avowed intention of killing some one. On Thursday, the 25th March, at about four o'clock in the afternoon, he entered the Globe office by a side door, and immediately proceeded to Mr. Brown's private room, from which shortly afterwards came the report of a revolver. When the employes ran to see what was the matter they found Mr. Brown and his assassin in a deadly struggle, the revolver lying on the floor. It required but a few moments to overpower the assassin, but the bullet had sped, and accomplished its deadly work after Mr. Brown had suffered a long and painful illness. The coroner's jury sent Bennett to the Assizes, and on 22nd June he was sentenced to death. Upon hearing his doom pronounced the prisoner did not appear to be greatly concerned, but, quietly folding his arms across his breast, remarked: "I have nothing to say except I would rather you would make the sentence a little shorter; it would suit me better." A very strong feature of the evidence against the prisoner as to the felonious intent was a letter found with others on him at the time of the arrest, in which he threatened to kill Banks and his late master for fancied ill-treatment and to complete the tragedy by committing suicide.

The unfortunate man did not seem to have many friends, or, if he had, they were very careless as to his conviction. His brother and two sisters called at the jail for the purpose of taking a last farewell with him, but he refused to see them, saying that he had taken leave of all things earthly, and did not wish his attention to be distracted from what was before him. He wished to be certain of his peace with God. During the early hours of the evening he spent most of his time in reading and writing and occasionally addressing a commonplace remark to the two watchmen. All the officials who had anything to do with him were very kind, which fact he appeared to appreciate. At midnight he retired, and for a time slept quite soundly. He occupied the cell in the east wing, from the windows of which could be seen the scaffold, and although Bennett did not seem the least concerned, Governor Green considerably had him removed to the west wing, and placed him in the cell known as the debtors' room. At about two o'clock the doomed man started suddenly up from his bed and commenced to rub his neck vigorously, and then with a ghastly smile and a muttered word sank back on his pillow and was soon asleep again. He had been dreaming that he had been hanged. Just as the first streak of light dispersed the shadows from the room he again sat up and repeated the motion of rubbing his neck, his head falling to one side as if he had already taken the fatal drop. Although but half awake, he seemed to at once detect the delusion, and the look of relief which overspread his face showed how much he appreciated the short reprieve. At five o'clock he arose, and, making a careful toilet, took his Prayer Book and commenced to read his prayers in an earnest manner, occasionally varying his position by walking up and down the room. He was dressed in a suit of black broadcloth and blue silk necktie, his beard, which had been allowed to grow, half covering the latter. At 5.30 he was notified that his breakfast was ready, but he declined to eat anything, saying that he felt perfectly well and in good spirits without partaking of any nourishment. About 6 a.m. his spiritual advisers arrived, and they continued in prayer with him until the arrival of the sheriff. England, the hangman, had arrived at the jail the night before, and was accommodated with a cell. At seven o'clock he commenced his preparations. When he hanged Williams he neglected to wear a mask, but walked out before the spectators and coolly pulled the lever which sent the doomed man to eternity and then turned his face to the spectators as if for approval. A few days afterwards a mob attacked him with bricks and stones, near the Don, and he had to flee for his life. On this occasion he probably remembered the lesson, as when he appeared in the corridor he wore over his head a mask of black glazed linen with small apertures made for his eyes. With a couple of leather straps in his hand, which he swung jauntily as he walked, he proceeded to the debtor's room, apparently little moved by his surroundings or by thoughts of his part in the approaching scene.

At 7.45 Mr. Sheriff Jarvis entered the condemned man's room, followed by the executioner, Mr. Langmuir, the Government Inspector of Prisons, Dr. McCollum, the jail surgeon, and the representatives of the Glob, Mail and Telegram. Bennett, as the door was opened by Governor Green, was taking a few short steps up and down the floor and conversing with his spiritual advisers.

The sheriff said:—

"Well, Bennett, my poor fellow, are you ready?"

"Yes, sir, quite ready." The hangman then brought his arm straps out, and pinioned the arms of the doomed man. When it was nearly done, Bennett said:—

"Don't make it so tight; it's not necessary, is it, to hurt a fellow?"

"It's all the better for you, my friend," said the hangman.

"All right, if you think it necessary," replied the prisoner, and the pinioning was completed.

Bennett had in his right hand an ebony crucifix. All being ready, Mr. Bright, who had gone outside to lengthen the rope a foot, as Bennett intended to stand on the drop, returned and reported to the sheriff, who directed the procession to the gallows to move on, the sheriff leading, followed by Mr. Langmuir, Rev. Fathers Eagan and Sheehan, Turnkey Allen and the condemned man, the hangman, Mr. Green, the governor of the jail; Dr. McCollum, the deputy governor, Mr. Ewan, and the reporters of the press. The procession moved out of the room in the west wing, and across the main hall of the jail to the east wing, and down a stairway to the basement, out into the prison yard. In the walk Bennett was firm, and stepped out as confidently as if the occasion was an everyday one.

As the solemn procession passed through the winding corridors, a few of the spectators who had not gone into the yard, crowded forward to catch a glimpse of the doomed man. Few there were who did not feel a thrill of admiration for the manner in which the murderer conducted himself. Linked to the arm of a constable, he walked with his head thrown back, not a trace of fear being discernible in either his deportment or in his features. For fully an hour before the doomed one left his cell members of the press, officials and spectators had been arriving, and even up to the last five minutes the door bell continued to tinkle, announcing fresh visitors. Hardly a word was spoken above a whisper, and all the spectators appeared to be deeply impressed with the sombre surroundings.

When the sheriff appeared at the top of the stone steps leading to the yard, followed by the reverend fathers, a low murmur went up from the spectators, and more than one face blanched as they caught sight of the hapless victim, who continued to walk with firm and unflinching step. At the foot of the gallows he paused a moment, and, sighing heavily, he turned his head to one side. Taking a momentary glance at the spectators, who numbered about seventy, he proceeded upwards, not failing to change his step so as to walk in time with the constable. Immediately upon reaching the floor of the scaffold, Bennett stepped forward and addressed those present, speaking without faltering, and holding a crucifix upraised in his hand:

Gentlemen, I am going to die, and I am innocent of the crime. By no words that I can possibly say can I clear myself, and I cannot say more than that I am innocent, as the act was beyond my control. The act by which Hon. George Brown met his death was done in an excited moment. I suppose he could not foresee the consequences. He thought I was going to use the revolver when I drew it from my pocket, and he grasped at it, and it caused the act which caused his death. His hand must have struck the trigger, as the shot was fired simultaneously with his catching it. I am going to meet my God now, and it would be a foolish thing for me to die with a lie on my lips. What I say here you may accept as a fact. I would not likely speak false when I am about to die. I am possessed of spirit enough to have acknowledged the crime if I did it. The blood does not tingle in my veins that would let me do such an act. I am not false at heart nor a coward. It would have been a shameful thing to have done such an act, as Mr. Brown did not deserve it. He was a most popular man throughout the world, and deserved it, and he went to his death through an oversight on my part. I went to him for a very simple reason, and not to commit a crime. I could not control the event. There was liquor in me, and the accident occurred, and the result—was the fatal act.

Bennett then turned his back to the spectators, and, motioning with his right hand, in which he held a crucifix, remarked quite coolly, "I am prepared to die. All I have to say is, 'May God have mercy on my soul.'"

Quietly stepping on the trap door, Bennett made a motion with his hand, and the hangman stepped forward, secured his legs by placing a strap around them between his knees and ankles; the noose was fastened about his neck; the sheriff gave the signal; rapidly England drew back the bolt, and, a moment later Bennett's body was suspended in mid air, having taken a drop of about eight feet. For a moment the body remained limp and motionless, turning round and round, then there was a convulsive twitching and drawing up of the legs, repeated at intervals for about eight minutes, and then all was still. Dr. McCollum examined the body, and, finding life extinct, ordered the corpse to be lowered. A constable untied the rope from above, and Mr. McCabe, undertaker, lowered the body into the plain stained pine coffin.

Dr. H. H. Wright had a jury empanelled, and after the usual formalities had been gone through, a verdict of death by dislocation of the neck was returned. There was no post-mortem examination.

Immediately behind the scaffold there was a stone in the wall marked "J. T., 1872," showing where Traviss was executed. His body was buried on the north side of the scaffold. Williams was interred next to him, and to the south of this Bennett's body was interred.

Bennett before death handed to Governor Green the following letter:

Toronto Jail, July 22nd, 1880.

Warning to Young Men.

The sands of time are continually crumbling beneath our feet, and we are drawing towards that awful moment which marks the boundary between time and eternity. In general we know not the day nor the hour, but when by man the day, the hour and the place are fixed, then the mortal must seriously reflect on the past, the present and the dark mysteries that lie before him. It is appointed for man once to die, and after that the judgment. I must soon present myself before the bar of that judgment which is just, to give an account of my stewardship. Now I behold the earth which at one time I would have been sorry to leave, now I see how false are the charms of the world, how powerful its attractions, how dreadful its allurements, how sweet its honey appears though it has the sourness of vinegar. In the days of my childhood I was brought up in the Catholic faith, and though for years I have, to my grief, wandered like a stray sheep from the precepts, wise counsels and frequently the sacraments of the church, yet I wish to die in her bosom, and my greatest consolation at the last moment will be to be fortified by the sacraments which Christ has left in his Church. Too soon, alas, I lost best friends, my dear parents, who would no doubt, have brought me up in the fear and love of God, and in the practice of approaching the sacraments. The result was that I soon fell an easy victim of evil associates.

Among my new companions I learned to regard the practice of going to confession as an intolerable slavery, but in abandoning its restraining influences I fell into a slavery of a different kind—the slavery of passion and sin—and my career downwards was very rapid. Now that I am on the brink of eternity, how vain and wicked do the false maxims of bad companions appear to me. Those who boast of liberty, of free thought, and who would banish away the thought of God, of a future life and man's superiority, what do they offer instead to heal the wounds of society, to heal the wounds of a sinful soul and make it resolve on a better course? Nothing but false maxims and the pleasure of sin without restraint or remorse. If I had attended my religious duties I would not be here to-day, occupying my present unenviable position. The confessional would have saved me from the tyranny of passion, and would have prevented the habit of sin to become a second nature. I was taught all this in my boyhood. I was made fully aware that one who approaches the sacraments must resolve on leading a good, moral and Christian life. I abandoned the sacraments, and now I am reaping the bitter fruit. I courted the vain pleasures of life, and became acquainted with sin. I went about from day to day with a weight of trouble on my heart, that was eating my life away. Through my late misfortunes I shaped my course alone. I felt that I had been grievously wronged by man, and every day some additional cause would arise to fan the flames already making a hell within my breast. If before this feeling obtained control of me I had unburdened myself in the tribunal of penance of the load of sin and trouble which I was unable to bear alone and obtained the wise counsels of one in whom I could confide, things would be different with me now. Instead of doing this I brooded over it alone and endeavoured to drown my feelings in the current of human pleasures, and without such counsel to aid me or the grace of God to guide me I came to grief. I have no motive in appearing before the Judge of the living and the dead with a lie upon my lips. It would serve no purpose here, and would confine me hereafter with a full consciousness of the position in which I am placed. I say that I never intended to injure Mr. Brown; he never deserved it from me, and I am morally innocent of the crime for which I am doomed to die. I have enough besides that to atone for to the justice of God. I am resigned to my doom, and would offer now, if I had them, a thousand lives in atonement for my sins. I freely and from my heart and soul forgive my enemies and all who have injured me, as I hope that God, in His great mercy, will forgive me in my offences against Him. The sun which rises in the horizon hastens his course and pursues the night, and the light solicits the light of day; the rivers flow on to the ocean, as if the ocean, which is their centre, ought to give them repose; the winter deprives the trees of their foliage in order to give us a lesson on death. I am no longer attached to earth by any tie or affection; I have resigned all my desires in the hands of God. The sentiments of the world, which are now dead in me, have taught me a lesson of death. The rivers flow into the sea; the seasons of the year follow one another in invariable order. Oh! Great God, I must now render an account. Thy judgments make me fear, but Thy infinite mercy makes me hope. I cast myself into Thy arms and implore pardon. Good people, pray for me. May God have mercy on my soul.

Toronto Jail, July 23, 1880.

I here express my sincere thanks to the officials of Toronto Jail. I have received from them the kindest attention and utmost civility in contributing to my wants during my confinement here. It is remarkable the discipline that is exercised in the discharge of the various duties to be performed, and the caution, promptitude and despatch which accompanies all work done within the building. The persistent watchfulness with which innocent and guilty alike are regarded when once beneath the shadow of this roof makes Toronto Jail a credit to the city and the country at large. I have found Mr. Green a kind, shrewd, observant man. Nothing can escape his notice. The manner in which the business of the place is conducted is worthy of all praise.

Farewell, Toronto Jail.

GEORGE BENNETT.

The following letter was received from the young woman Mary McGowan, whom the executed man repudiated as his wife, but who said she was married to him at Yorkville about five years before:

Sir,—I take the liberty of writing these few lines to express my sorrow that my husband has spoken so falsely about me. I see by the papers that he says I was not to him; but the God in the Heaven knows that I was not. He will certainly be punished for the wrongs he has done to me, and any sins that are on my soul he has driven me to it. I have done no wrong to him or to my sister that they should try to ruin me for ever, and I hope God will forgive them. While with him my life was a burden, and although I endured terrible sufferings I plunged to him till he cast me aside, and then attempted to take my life. He said that after we parted that I tried to get him out of his situation, but he knows that to be untrue. After I have gone down to the Globe office with his supper, in the pouring rain, and after he had taught me the gauge of steam, I used to put coal in the furnace and light the gas, while he lay drunk on the table. This is a terrible confession for a wife to make against her doomed husband, but in justice to myself I must tell the truth, and show the public how he has treated me. He denied his own father and mother because one of them was coloured, and would he not deny me?

For the murder of John Rutledge, a guard at the Central Prison, Robert Neill was executed in the eastern jail yard on Tuesday, February 28th, 1888. On that occasion a new form of scaffold was used. The old drop scaffold was superseded by an arrangement worked by releasing a suspended heavy weight, which in dropping lifted the victim into the air with sufficient force to sever the vertebral column or produce strangulation. Neill was about twenty-one years of age, and had vicious criminal instincts. He had a bad record, and before committing the crime for which he forfeited his life to the demands of the law he was suspected of having robbed and murdered a citizen. At the time he murdered Guard Rutledge Neill was serving out a long term of imprisonment in the Central Prison for theft. An intractable convict most of the time, he had been condemned to solitary confinement for gross misconduct. On one occasion he hurled a heavy iron template at a guard, and the following day threatened to murder another guard. For these serious breaches of the discipline of the institution he was flogged. For a minor offence he was subsequently ordered to solitary confinement, and while undergoing his punishment planned an attack on the unsuspecting guard. On the morning of January 13th Guard Rutledge stepped into Neill's cell to remove a bucket, when Neill plunged the keen blade of a broom maker's knife into his abdomen. Rutledge died two days later from the effects of the wound. Neill was tried at the Criminal Assizes in Toronto before Judge Falconbridge and a jury on Thursday, January 26th, 1888, and the evidence being of the most straightforward character, the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder.

As the outcome of a drunken debauch, Thomas Kane, a labourer, murdered his putative wife in a small house at 150 Defoe street, on the evening of Saturday, November 16th, 1889. The pair when under the influence of liquor were quarrelsomely inclined, and their domestic brawls were usually unnoticed by the neighbours. The following evening, however, the woman was found lifeless, her face battered almost beyond recognition. Kane was present when the discovery was made, but too drunk to appreciate his position. When his attention was called to the bruised and bleeding corpse he muttered something about the deeds of whiskey drinking and walked out of the house. Two hours afterwards Kane was captured on Chestnut street. The crime was a most brutal one. The interior of the house resembled the shambles. The woman had apparently retreated from one room to another to escape the brutality of her paramour, until exhausted and weak from the loss of blood she sank on the kitchen floor helpless. Kane then kicked her on the head with his heavy boots. The walls, the floors and the furniture were all bespattered with blood. Kane had also used a carpenter's hammer and flatiron on his victim. He was convicted of wilful murder at the Criminal Assizes on Tuesday, December 12th, and sentenced by Judge Street to be hanged on Wednesday, February 12th, 1890. On that day, in the western yard, Kane paid the penalty of his crime, the scaffold being the one used at the execution of Neill two years previously.

CHAPTER XLVII.

BRIGANTINE SEA-GULL.

One of the Few Lake Traders that Sailed on Salt Water — Fortunes of a Famous Vessel.

"The sixties" are looked back to by many vesselmen as the Golden Age of lake shipping. Those were the days, they will tell you, when every little lake port owned its fleet of sailing vessels, and lots of money was being made in the carrying trade. They will tell you of the many different vessels which were once the pride of the lake, and among these you will hear them mention the "brig" Sea Gull. She is remembered, not on account of her size, or her beauty, or her speed, for in none of these particulars was she remarkable, but because of a voyage she made, in the year 1865 down the river St. Lawrence and south-eastward, over the broad Atlantic, across the line to Port Natal, in Cape Colony, South Africa. This voyage never was attempted before, or accomplished since by a lake vessel.

The Sea Gull was built in Oakville, in 1864, by John Simpson, who with his brother built a great many of the once famous Oakville schooners, some of which are still afloat. The vessel was owned by John Murray, of Oakville, and Frank Jackman, sr., of Toronto, and was registered in this port. When she first came out she was a fore-and-aft centreboard schooner, of 201 tons register. These were her dimensions: Length over all, 105 feet; extreme beam, 42 feet; draught, when loaded, ten feet; when light, 4 feet 6 inches. She had the peculiarity of most Oakville vessels—her masts had quite a "spread." The raking mainmast was stepped rather far aft, and the foremast pretty well forward. She is said to have cost her owners some $15,000.

There was a brisk trade in those days between Toronto and Oswego, lumber and grain being carried down the lake and coal on the return trip. The Sea Gull was engaged in this trade for the first season.

In the spring of 1865 Mr. Davids, of Toronto, chartered her to take out a consignment of lumber, buggies and sundries to a man named Lysle, at Port Natal, South Africa. Alterations were made in her rig, to fit her better for her long voyage, and she was changed from a schooner to a brigantine, this rig being considered handier for use on salt water. She carried fifteen different pieces of canvas, there being five square sails on the foremast. Her crew amounted to ten men all told. There were four men and two boys before the mast.

She left for Port Natal in June, 1865, and after a three months' voyage, in which she met with no mishap, or, in fact, anything at all extraordinary, reached her destination. She crossed "the bar" at Port Natal under canvas, without the assistance of a tug, a thing very seldom done. She excited considerable comment in that port by the length of her voyage, and by the fact that she was the smallest vessel which up to that time had entered the harbour, and the only Great Lake trader which had ever made the voyage. The cargo was delivered to the consignee, and it might be mentioned that the lumber was sold at the modest price of 8d. per foot. After discharging her cargo, the Sea Gull lay in the harbour for three months, waiting for a charter and making repairs and alterations, for experience had taught the fresh water sailors that several improvements might be made. Among the changes was a reduction this port after a voyage of thirteen months and was placed on exhibition at Yonge street wharf, where great crowds flocked to see her. The voyage had been a very fortunate one; none of the crew were lost, the vessel suffered no damage, and there were no mishaps whatever. Frank Jackman, sr., was captain, and his nephew, James Jackman, mate. Captain May, a salt water sailor, acted as navigator. About $9,000 was paid for the trip, and after all bills were settled there was $2,000 profit. A sample of South African rum of eight feet in the height of the main-mast.

In January, 1866, the Sea-Gull sailed for Boston with a cargo of sugar, molasses, pepper, arrowroot, ivory and some thirty-seven passengers, and arrived at her destination after a voyage of ninety-eight days. There she discharged her cargo and loaded flour for St. John's, Newfoundland, sailing from that port in ballast for Sydney, Cape Breton, and there received a cargo of coal for Montreal. She came up light from Montreal to Kingston, and there got a cargo of wood for Toronto.

In July, 1866, the Sea-Gull arrived in was brought back, and kept on tap in the captain's cabin. Verily, a little of it went a long way—thousands of miles—and old marines declare it was strong enough to knock a man down.

After this remarkable voyage the Sea Gull continued to earn money for her owners in the lake trade. She carried grain and coal from Chicago to Kingston for a couple of years, but in 1870 she was sold to the well known firm of ship owners, Smith & Post, of Oswego. They kept her for about a dozen years, and she was very successful as a lake trader. Her American owners changed her rig as the square canvas wore out, and Americanized her, making her a Tore-and-aft schooner once more.

Years passed by, and the Sea Gull, though remarkably well built, commenced to show signs of wear. How well she was built may be judged from the following facts. While passing through the old Welland canal she ran into one of the gates near Port Colborne. The water from the higher level immediately rushed in and drove the vessel backwards till it crashed into the gates at the northern end of the lock. With such force did it strike that the stern was crushed in. So solidly was the vessel built, however, that she did not leak a drop or have to go on the dry-dock afterwards.

THE SHAW COTTAGE.

An Old Time Residence — When and by Whom Erected — Its Past and Present Occupants.

A pretty little low-roofed cottage still stands on the north side of Bloor street west, a little to the west of Avenue road, known as No. 222, which irresistibly reminds one when they look at it of a roadside cottage in rural England. It is more or less covered with pretty climbing plants, and all around it are beds filled with blooming flowers, radiant in almost every colour. The garden is by no means a small one, even for a large house, but it appears very large in comparison with the almost tiny residence to which it is an adjunct. Besides the flowers and shrubs of different kinds with which the garden abounds, there are several fruit and shade trees, some of the latter being of very considerable beauty. This old time house was built about 1818, or possibly a year earlier, by Robert Shaw, who was a son of the late Mr. George Shaw, builder, of this city, and brother of Alderman Shaw, who now resides in the cottage. Up to about 1885 a similar cottage, built by Mr. John Metcalf, stood to the east of the Shaw cottage on the opposite side of the slight ravine which ran there, and of which some traces still remain. This cottage was removed en bloc to Prince Arthur avenue, on its southern side, and now exists, though very greatly altered as No. 11 in that thoroughfare.

THE SHAW COTTAGE ON BLOOR STREET WEST IN 1897.

As has been said the Sea Gull began to show signs of wear. Accordingly, Smith & Post sold her in 1882 to Geo. E. Mapes, of Detroit. He rebuilt her, gave her smaller spars, turned her into a lumber barge and placed her in the lumber trade on the upper lakes. She afterwards was sold to J. G. Miller of Marine City, who converted her into a steambarge, and she continued in the lumber trade. Her eventful career was closed in 1888, when she was destroyed by fire at Tawas, Michigan.

The land on which the Shaw cottage stands formed originally a portion of the Baldwin estate, and was deeded by Mr. W. A. Baldwin, of Mashquoteh, as a contribution to the endowment of the Church of the Redeemer.

The first occupants in this quaint old residence were Mr. John Kendrick and his wife, who had been Miss Susan Jackson. Mr. Kendrick was an Englishman, a shoemaker by trade, though he farmed in a small way after coming to Canada. His wife had two sisters, one of whom married Mr. John Dempsey, a well-known Toronto man, and the other was the wife of Mr. George Shaw, already referred to. Mrs. Kendrick was a woman who left many pleasant memories behind her. She had no children herself, but delighted to entertain and amuse those of her friends, and there are now living in the city those who remember with the keenest pleasure the happy hours they as children passed in the old cottage, with Mrs. Kendrick as the kindest of hostesses. Mr. Kendrick died in the sixties, and Mrs. Kendrick survived him until 1874. Mr. John Shaw purchased the lease in 1877 and has resided there uninterruptedly since. This old cottage is the last one left of the very earlier residences on Bloor street west. When it was built the ground opposite to it was all forest land. Bloor street was a sand road, known for its dust in summer and its mud in the spring and autumn. To the east of the cottage, on the corner of Yonge street, was the Potter's Field burying ground, and, standing on the verandah of this cottage, any one could watch the funerals taking place in this cemetery. There were not half-a-dozen houses west of the cottage until George Cooper's house on Dundas street was reached, and no school or place of worship nearer than St. Paul's Anglican, on Bloor street east, nearly a mile distant. St. George's church, on John street, was the nearest church to the south. A very short time longer and the Shaw cottage, in the march of modern improvement, will be taken down and its site occupied probably by far more pretentious dwellings, but there will not be the interest attached to them that is connected with this old-time forest residence.

CHAPTER XLIX.

OLD TIME CELEBRATIONS.

"When George III. was King" — How the Accession of George IV. and his Successor was Observed.

The Jubilee festivities in the Dominion having come to an end it will be interesting to call to mind the incidents attending former celebrations in the province, on the accession or coronation of the various sovereigns who have occupied the throne since the Constitutional Act of 1791.

George III. had been King of England for more than thirty years when the province of Upper Canada was created, out of what was vaguely called Canada, previous to the time named. The country thus designated was that portion now included in the province of Quebec and Ontario, which, by the Act of 1791, became Lower and Upper Canada, respectively.

The first public celebration of which there is any record was that by the Legislative Council and Commons House of Assembly at their meetings on the 5th and 6th day of February, 1806, when they passed a loyal congratulatory address to King George III. on the naval victory of Lord Nelson at Trafalgar in the previous October. It may be noted that it took more than three months for the news of Lord Nelson's victory and death to travel from Europe to York, Upper Canada, it not being received in the latter place until February 1st, 1806. Trafalgar was fought October 21st, 1805.

There are no records of any celebration of Waterloo's victory in 1815, being held in Upper Canada, probably Canadians had enough to do in repairing the effects of their own struggle with the United States, then only just concluded, to have much heart or inclination to be joyful over anything.

George III. died January 29th, 1820, and was succeeded by his son, George IV. The news arrived in York in the following March, and the new King's proclamation was duly read in the market place and at Government House by Sheriff Samuel Ridout. There are no records of any public rejoicings a year later, on the occasion of his Majesty's coronation, though it may safely be taken for granted that a royal salute was fired from the battery at the Old Fort on the occasion.

George IV. died June 26th, 1830, and his next brother, William IV. (the sailor king) reigned in his stead. When the news reached York it was at once publicly announced by the crier, and the then sheriff, W. B. Jarvis, proclaimed William IV. as King.

The Patriot, then published in Kingston by Thomas Dalton, had the following remarks on the occasion:

"George IV. has closed his illustrious career amidst the regrets of his affectionate subjects." After several paragraphs of regret for the deceased monarch, the article goes on: "William IV. is now our lawful Sovereign; to him is due our undivided loyalty, which let us manifest by keeping the closest watch upon whoever may be his Secretary of State for the Colonies for the time being."

It does not appear that any public celebration of William IV.'s coronation took place either in York or in Kingston, and the Montreal papers are silent on the point. The coronation took place June 28, 1831.

All but seven years elapsed when on June 20th, 1837, William IV., like his predecessors, also died, and his niece, our present Queen, ascended the throne. The intelligence arrived in Toronto—no longer York—on August 2nd, 1837, and was then and there announced, and again did Sheriff W. B. Jarvis read the young Queen's proclamation. This was somewhat of a ceremony, the sheriff accompanied by various officials going in an open conveyance, first to the City Hall then to Government House, in front of each place reading the proclamation. Among those with him were the local members of Parliament, the clerk to the Executive Council, Mr. John Baikie, the Mayor of Toronto, Mr. Powell, and others.

The Queen's coronation took place at Westminster Abbey on June 28th, 1838, amidst great pomp and ceremony, and was not by any means allowed to pass unnoticed in Toronto. Here a grand procession of the firemen took place under the direction of the then Chief of the Brigade the late Mr. Thomas Denny Harris. The order of the procession was as follows:—First came the bands of the two local militia regiments, the Queen's Rangers and the Queen's Foresters, then the chief officers of the brigade, viz., T. D. Harris, chief engineer, Richard Woodsworth, assistant engineer, Robert Beard, David Paterson and James F. Westland, the first two of whom were chiefs of the Hook and Ladder Company and Toronto Fire Engine Company, and the latter was the secretary.

Following the officers was a fireman who carried a mace, gilded from top to bottom and surmounted by a lion. Then came two silk banners with emblematic devices, one having the word "Victoria" in its centre, surrounded by a wreath of the rose, shamrock and thistle, and underneath "British supremacy." The other banner had a representation of the British-American fire engine on it, and the name of the company underneath the engine. Forty firemen were with the engine, which was gaily decorated. The firemen were arrayed in scarlet jackets and white trousers. These banners were painted by Alexander Hamilton. On the engine was a painting representing the death of Wolfe and the taking of Quebec. Then came two more flags, the work of Hart & March, and the hook and ladder waggon, followed by six axemen and twenty-eight firemen, then was borne the Royal Standard, and the rear was brought up by more firemen. The route of the procession was along Yonge and King streets to the Garrison common, where it dispersed. Royal salutes were fired from the Old Fort, and a public banquet took place in the evening and fireworks.

In Kingston the day was observed by the ladies of that place presenting the 1st Frontenac Militia Regiment with a stand of colours, the ceremony taking place near Block House No. 3, in front of Colonel Bonnycastle's residence. Mrs. Kirby presented the flags for the ladies committee, and Lieut.-Col. Markland, commanding the regiment, accepted them and thanked the ladies. A display of fireworks took place at night, and during the day there was a boat race at Barriefield.

In Montreal and Quebec the day was celebrated by military parades, and all through the two provinces the occasion was not allowed to pass by unnoticed. Few of those who were present then are with us in 1897, yet it is not uninteresting once more to recall the events of Auld Lang Syne connected with the Victorian era.

CHAPTER L.

DUNDAS STREET TOLL GATES.

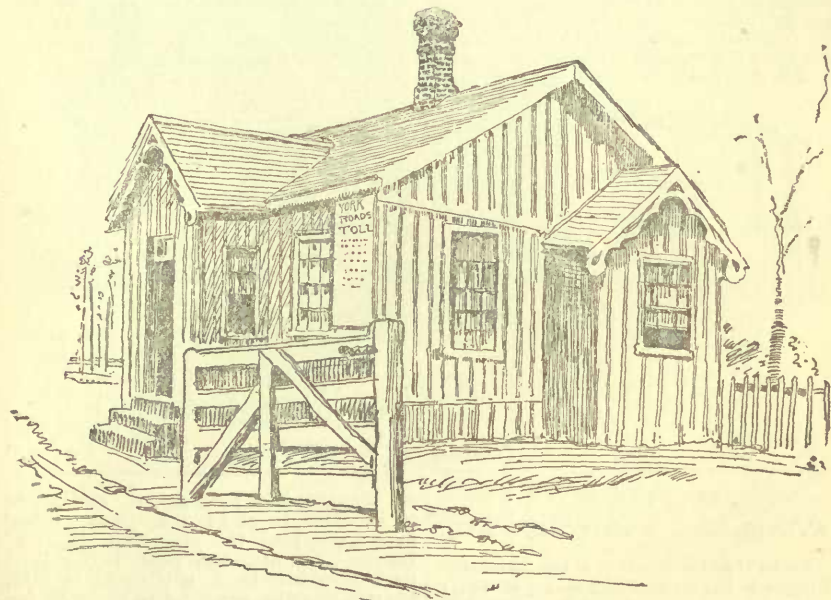

The Check Gate at Lambton — The "Blind" Toll Gate at Bloor Street—Some Reminiscences of a Toll Taker's Troubles.

The old building depicted in the cut represents the check toll-gate which for exactly forty years stood on the north side of Dundas street at its junction with the concession now known as St. Clair avenue, which extends from Dundas street on the west to Yonge street on the east. Forty years ago, that is, in 1857, toll-gates abounded in every direction west, north and east of the city. As in England, they are now things of the past; but whether rightly or wrongly, they were the source of constant trouble, quarrels and annoyance while they did exist.

The gates on Dundas street within ten miles of Toronto at the time referred to were: No. 1, at Brockton, on the north side of the street, about half way between Sheridan and Brock avenues; No. 2, always known as the "Blind toll-gate," on the north-east corner of the concession now known as Bloor street and Dundas street. This was built for the purpose of catching those people who, coming from Toronto, drove along Dufferin street north to the concession, thence proceeding west to Dundas street, thus avoiding the Brockton gate. It often happened that a teamster going to the city would turn out of the way and proceed east along the concession, so as to escape, or in the hope of escaping, Brockton toll. The keeper of the "blind" gate rarely missed noting the occurrence, and looked out for the return of this man. If he came by himself, he was all but certain to find the bar down and passage impossible.

DUNDAS STREET TOLL HOUSE.

was a peculiar construction of two storeys, with a covered way extending across Dundas street. No. 3 gate was the one first mentioned in this article, and the fourth was the Mimico gate, some little distance to the west of St. George's church, Islington. Teams proceeding to Toronto from beyond the fourth gate paid toll at the fourth and the first, being free of the two intermediate ones; but those who came from places between the fourth and the third paid at the latter and also again at the first. The "blind" toll-gate never exacted a toll from teams proceeding direct along Dundas street, but

Then would follow a war of words, and "langwidge" flowed that would be extremely forcible even from a London cabby's point of view. Sometimes even blows were struck, which occasionally resulted in a meeting before the magistrates, with sometimes a conviction for assault. As a pretty general rule, though, the toll taker settled his own quarrels. Neither he nor his employers had much liking for Police Court proceedings. They knew that to a great extent they were Ishmaelites; every man's hand was against them. Precisely such scenes as have been described as happening at the "blind" gate took place over and over again at No. 3 gate with delinquents who tried to dodge the toll by going along St. Clair avenue.

The "blind" toll-gate disappeared when the city boundaries were extended in the north-west, as also did the Brockton gate, and in 1897 the old check gate at Lambton followed suit. Of them it may safely be said they were "unwept, unhonoured and unsung."

ered with scrub and undergrowth, and having no other owner than the Crown.

On September 4th, 1800, the land on which these buildings stood was patented by the Hon. Peter Hunter, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, to William Bowkett as a free gift, subject to no other dues than the patent fee to the Crown.

Upon this land Mr. Bowkett erected a dwelling house, which was probably

THE "BLIND TOLL GATE."

CHAPTER LI.

N.W. COR. KING AND YONGE STS.

An Account of the Owners of the Land, the Builder of the Houses and Some of Their Occupants — Value of the Land in 1837 and in 1897.

The row of brick buildings on the north-west corner of King and Yonge streets, which were pulled down in 1897, to re-erect on their site handsomer and more modern structures, were among the earliest, though not the very earliest, of Toronto's brick houses.

It will surprise not a few readers of The Landmarks to learn that, although it was one hundred and four years since Major-General Simcoe laid out the infant town of York, now the city of Toronto, that the lot on the corner of King and Yonge streets, so long known as Dineen's, and previously to that as Sutherland's corner, was in the year 1800, seven years after the foundation of the town, still unpatented land, covered with scrub and undergrowth, and there is nothing to show that any other house occupied the site, save that of Bowkett's, until the year 1832. William Bowkett, by a will made in 1832, bequeathed the property to his wife for her life, and upon her death it was to pass absolutely to Mr. Laurence Lawlor—a relative of Mr. Bowkett's probably. Mr. Lawlor duly succeeded, and in turn willed his interest in the property to his son, Dr. Michael Lawlor, who for some years occupied a cottage on the western side of Spadina avenue, north of Queen street west. Later Dr. Lawlor lived and practised at 187 Richmond street west.

Upon the death of Dr. Michael Lawlor the property descended to his son, the present owner, John Laurence Lawlor, who is an officer in H. M. 6th Iniskilling Dragoons.

William Bowkett, the original owner, does not appear to have made any use of his land for some years after obtaining his patent from the Crown, for in 1805 he was not even resident in York. He was a mariner by profession, and in 1828 was part owner and also captain of the schooner Canadian. Whether he resided here at first is of little consequence. He certainly did a few years later, and it is evident he took an interest in the welfare of the young town, for in 1801 his name appears as a subscriber of six dollars in aid of the projected improvement of Yonge street.

In the year 1832 William Bowkett leased the land which is the subject of this article to John Ewart, for the space of 21 years, at an annual ground rent of $240 per annum. Mr. Ewart thereupon built the houses which have just disappeared from the site. In 1853 the lease was renewed to Mr. Ewart at

CHAPTER LII. AN OLD HOTEL

Built for Dwelling Houses Sixty Years Ago and Used as the First Site of Knox College — Other Changes in Its History.

The late Captain Thomas was a man famous as being one of the pioneer steamboat men. In the thirties his name is frequently mentioned in the newspapers, in relation to steamboat matters. It was he who commanded the lake steamer Experiment, and was afterwards appointed to the steamer Queen Victoria when she first came out. Captain Dick was not only famous as a sailor, but he acquired prominence by his increasing wealth. He made considerable money as a steamboat captain, and purchased a lot on an advanced rental of four times the original amount, namely, $960. In 1874 the lease was again renewed to the Messrs. Staunton for 21 years, at a rental of $6,000 per annum, just twelve and a half times more than it was first rented at, 42 years previously.

Of well-known business firms who have occupied this noted corner, may be mentioned Kenneth M. Sutherland & Co., the old-time grocers; Haycroft, Small & Addison, music dealers; Moses Staunton, paperhanger; and Messrs. Dineen, the well-known furriers. Other firms on King street have been John Jackson, chinaware; A. Gemmell, boots and shoes; Carson Bros., and R. W. Anderson, both photographers.

the north side of Front street, and here he built the large brick structure now known as the Queen's hotel.

This was in 1838. The buildings formed a row of three-storey dwelling houses, four in number. In the rear of the buildings for many years a frame house stood. This was the Toronto Academy, at the head of which was the late Rev. Alexander Gale (Landmarks of Toronto, Vol. I., page 295), who for some time held the position of secretary for Knox College.

The buildings were used for some years as dwelling houses, one of them being occupied by the late W. B. Jarvis, Sheriff of Toronto. In 1844, when Knox College was founded, the four dwellings were thrown into one, and formed the first Knox College building. In 1856 Knox College was removed to Elmsley Villa, situated at what is now the corner of Grosvenor and St. Vincent streets. This place had at one time been occupied as the Government House, and was the home of Chief Justice Elmsley, from whom it took its name.

After the removal of the college, the buildings which form the subject of the landmark, were turned into a hotel. A Mr. Sword was the first to occupy them in this capacity. In 1859, on the removal of the seat of Government from Toronto, Mr. Sword gave up business, at this place, and was succeeded by Mr. J. B. Riley. The hotel was carried on under his management up to 1862. In this year Captain Dick, who had built and owned the buildings, took the management into his own hands. The buildings were considerably altered and enlarged, and the whole place was refitted with all the requirements of a modern hotel. It had hitherto been known as Sword's or Riley's hotel, according to the name of its proprietor for the time being. Since 1862, when the management passed into the hands of Captain Dick, it has been known as the Queen's Hotel.

In 1874 the Queen's was sold to Messrs. McGaw and Winnett. It has remained in their hands ever since, although many alterations and improvements, both in the building itself and its equipment have been made.

Thus the structure has been occupied at different times as dwelling houses, a college site, and as a hotel building. No one would think that the present white fronted structure, with its long balconies and verandah, many windows, shaded by noble chestnut trees, and cool lawns, had a record of being sixty years in use. The surroundings have changed even more than the hotel itself. Even in 1856, which is not so very long ago, there were no other buildings, with the exception of this one, on Front street, between Bay and York streets. From the windows of the present Queen's Hotel there was, even up to the fifties, an uninterrupted view of the bay and the Island beyond it. The south side of Front street had not yet been built up, and the present Esplanade, with its network of railway tracks, then had no existence, the nearest approach to it being Tinning's wharf and Hayes brothers ship yard.

CHAPTER LIII.

TWO OLD NEWSPAPERS

Copies of the "York Gazette" in 1811-12
Containing Some Odd News Concerning the Town of York Before the War.

Mr. Joshua Adams, barrister, of Sarnia, has two single copies of "The York Gazette," published in York (Toronto) in 1811-12, and he has kindly loaned them for inspection. "The York Gazette" was originally "The Upper Canada Gazette, or American Oracle," first published at Niagara in 1792. It was subsequently published in York under the name of "The York Gazette."

The files of this paper between 1809-1822 are very incomplete, in fact no perfect file from 1792 exists. Partial sets are in the Parliamentary Library in the Queen's Park, but the best file is in the Public Library at Toronto. The latter, however, is lacking in the numbers indicated.

It is rather peculiar that of all the papers published in the early days of Upper Canada there is no complete file of the official paper of the province. This is accounted for by the fact that the fire which destroyed the Parliamentary Buildings in 1813, and again in 1824, and that at Montreal in 1849, destroyed also the files of this paper. It is understood that no search has been made in England for the "York Gazette," and it is believed that if an examination were made in the Colonial Office complete files of this paper might be found.

The two copies of the York Gazette referred to are of date 13th November, 1811, and 15th January, 1812. This paper was the official paper of Upper Canada, and the first page has at its head the Royal Arms, with the letters G. R. at the right and left hand lower corners of the arms, the title "The York Gazette" being across the page.

The paper is four columns in width, the sheet, exclusive of the margin, being nine and a half inches by fifteen inches. The date line gives the number as "Vol. XXI., Wednesday, November 13, 1811, No. XVIII., 4 Dols. per ann."

The first column contains a proclamation by Isaac Brock, President of Upper Canada, convening Parliament at York, on the 2nd December.

The second article is the proclamation of Isaac Brock on his assumption of the duties of President or Administrator of the Province during the absence of Lieutenant-Governor Francis Gore.

The third article is a proclamation issued by Governor Gore, warning the public against cutting timber on the public lands. This had been done in 1809.

A fourth proclamation concerned the purchase of hemp by the Government and the appointment of commissioners.

A fifth notice, signed by John Beikie, the Sheriff, warned tenants on the Glebe lands to pay up all arrears.

The sixth article is an advertisement by George Crookshank, the Deputy Assessment Commissary-General, asking for tenders for timber for the King's service.

The last notice on the fourth column and on the first page was the following:—

"The Editor regrets to state that his repeated notifications to many of his Printing Office Customers has been so long ineffectual—he therefore again requests that payments may be made without unfeasonable delay.—From disappointments he has reluctantly been obliged to adopt a rule in which he will invariably persist, which is 'that few orders will be hereafter executed unless accompanied with payment.'" York, Aug. 11, 1811."

The second page had its first column devoted to "Hancock's Abstract of the King's Taxes," which duties, it is presumed, prevailed in Upper Canada.

The tax for one horse for either riding or driving was £2 13s. 6d., and for a four-wheeled carriage £11 5s 0d. Then followed the duty on carts and dogs, with the "New Stamp Act" in full.

The second column had despatches from New York, Charleston, Philadelphia and Boston, and one from Halifax announcing the arrival of the Sceptic transport, with officers and part of a company of the Royal Artillery. The despatch contained other shipping news.

The last column had despatches from London, England, dated 20th Sept.

The third page is filled with despatches concerning the war on the Continent. The third page had in its fourth column a small heading: "The York Gazette," with date, followed by an account of the weather, and the last two inches of space on the page are devoted to a notice of the sale of articles at the House of William Erith, Esquire, by "Thos. Mosley, Auctioneer." Mosley's auction room was in the building, still standing, on King street, north side, two doors east of George street.

The fourth page had at the head of the first column a notice from "W. Allan," as agent of the Phoenix Assurance Company. Mr. Allan was the father of Hon. G. W. Allan.

This is followed by an advertisement:

"Found—A few days ago, between the printing office and Miller's Tavern, the two left joints of a German flute, with silver band. The owner may obtain it by applying to the printer hereof."

In the next advertisement it will be seen that "a small Hog" had been doing much damage to gardens in York. The advertisement reads:

"NOTICE—A small Hog, mixed black and white colour, having become a nuisance by rooting and various trespasses on the Garden and other parts of the premises in this town, now occupied by Capt. Chambers of the 41st Regt. His owner is therefore requested to claim him, pay expenses of advertising and remove him from the said premises.

"York, 4th Nov., 1811."

The next advertisement was for the sale of lots in Whitby.

Then there are three notices of sale by the sheriff, John Beikie, one of the lands of John Henry Kahman, at the suit of Samuel Heron. The lots were on Duke street, and the sale was to be at "Roche's Hotel, in the town of York."

Roche's Hotel was near the Market square.

The second notice was for the sale of land in Vaughan, belonging to John H. Hudson, at the suit of William Allen.

The third was for the sale of lands of "Resolved Cleaveland," at the suit of John Macdonell, to be sold "at Stoyles' Hotel, in the town of York."

This hotel was on the north side of King, near Berkeley street.

The next advertisement offers:

"For sale, on the Lowest Terms, Lot No. 9, East side Yonge street; on the Premises there are a Saw Mill and a Grift Mill, both in good order, and a Still-House with two Stills, capable of making eighteen gallons of Whiskey per day. The Mills, with a portion of Land will be sold separate if required or all together. There is a large Improvement on said lot. For particulars enquire of the Subscriber, SAMUEL HERON."

York, 15th July, 1811.

Mr. Heron was town warden of York, and a brother of Andrew Heron, the steamboat owner.

An early schoolhouse was that of Charles McDonnell, on Duke street. The advertisement reads:

"SCHOOL.

"The Subscriber returns his grateful and sincere Thanks to the Public for their countenance and patronage. He has just built a large Room for the comfortable reception of their Children; and hopes through his steady attention to the Moral and Education of the Pupils placed under his care, will still gain their future approbation and encouragement.

"N. B.—Evening School will commence precisely on the first of September.

"Charles McDonnell.
"Duke street. York, Aug. 10, 1811."

The first rector of St. James' Cathedral died in 1811, and Dr. Strachan preached his funeral sermon. It was afterwards printed, for we find it was "For sale at this office (price 1s. Halifax). A Sermon on the Death of the Rev. John Stuart, D.D., Preached at Kingston, 25th August, 1811, by the Rev. John Strachan, D.D."

The second column of the fourth page had a notice of probate of the estate of one Nathaniel Herriman, by Peter Grant, of Kingston.

An advertisement "To Be Let" attracts attention, for it is one issued by a pioneer settler, Mr. Bostick. It reads:

"To Be Let:

"The Subscriber wants to let the House opposite the Printing Office, which he occupied. The rent will be moderate to a careful Tenant and immediate possession given. Apply at the Printing Office or to the Subscriber.

"Ladner Bostick.

"York, 30th Oct., 1811."

The location of the house was on the north side of King, at the north-west corner of Victoria and King.

The next advertisement is the offer of lands for sale, belonging to "John Gray, Esquire, of Lower Canada." These were in Scarborough, Markham, Whitby, and also

"The House and Lot, No. 8, north side of King Street, and Lot, No. 11, north side Hospital Street."

The King street lot would be near the corner of Yonge and King streets, and the Hospital (Richmond) street lot near the corner of Yonge and Richmond streets.

Mr. D. Tiers had a shop in York, and in May, 1812, occupied "the house formerly occupied by Mr. Glen."

Messrs. W. & J. Crooks, of Niagara, in an advertisement informed the public that the firm was going out of business. These gentlemen were ancestors of the late Hon. Adam and R. P. Crooks.

Alex. Wood, a well known merchant, whose place of business was on the north-west corner of King and Frederick streets, offers lands for sale in different parts of the province.

Abel Coona also announces lands for sale in the District of Newcastle.

The printer of the paper also has lands for sale in Pickering.

In the third column of the fourth page we have an announcement by Alexander Legge, merchant. His store was on Palace street, at the north-east corner of Palace (Front) and Princess streets.

He commences his advertisement by stating that:—

"The Subscriber takes the Liberty of informing his Friends and the Public that he has opened a Store in his Houfe on Palace Street, near Miss Ruffel's, where he offers for sale a large supply of the following Articles, viz.,"

He then gives a list of articles, and concludes his advertisement by stating that:—

"He expects by the next vessel from Kingston, a fashionable supply of Woolen and Cotton Goods, they having arrived at Quebec by the last vessels from England—also a further supply of Ironmongery."

Following this advertisement is an offer of "a farm for sale within four miles and a half of this town." The locality is not given, but there is on it a "good mill seat on the lot and several living springs of fine water."

The printer of the paper announces in the same column:

"For sale at the Printing Office a few Copies of the Provincial Statutes, Letters from an American Loyalist; the Inspection or Review (a Military Tract) Common Bonds; Arbitration ditto; Deeds of Conveyance with the Bar of Dower and Judge's Certificate; Memorials for Do., Common Deeds of Conveyance."

The fourth column of the fourth page has first a notice from Elizabeth Henderson, Executrix, and William Allan, Executor, of the estate of Robert Henderson, brewer of York.

Then an advertisement by the Henderson estate offering for rent "for one year" a "house and lot," and "a malt house, Brew House, &c., with all the implements and utensils for carrying on the brewing."

The location of the brewery is not given.

Another advertisement announced the sale of lands and buildings on Yonge street by "Thomas B. Gough."

Mr. Daniel B. Wallis was a leading boot and shoe maker at York in 1811. He states in his advertisement that

"The Subscriber begs leave to inform the Public generally that he has removed to the Houfe which he formerly occupied, where he now carries on the Boot and Shoemaking Buifnefs.

"Those Ladies and Gentlemen who may be pleased to favor him with their cuftom, may depend upon having their work done in the neateft and moft fashionable manner. He is provided with an excellent fupply of Leather.

"Daniel B. Wallis.

"York, April 5, 1811."

The last advertisement in the paper is a notice of the proposed sale of a saw mill on Dundas street by Aaron Stevens.

This concludes the contents of this copy of the York Gazette.

The York Gazette of Wednesday, 15th January, 1812, has a similar heading to that of November, 1811.

The first page contains four royal proclamations—one calling the Legislature at York on 3rd February, 1812; the second concerning the leave of absence of Governor Gore; the third regarding the cutting of timber limits; and the fourth about the sale of hemp. Three other announcements fill this page—one of the sale of a stock of stationery at the printing office; the second the sale of lands on Yonge street within eight miles of York, by Daniel Tiers. This land was at the Humber, and also sundry lands and houses in York.

The second page is devoted to "Latest Intelligence" from the Morning Chronicle, of London, England, dated 16th November, all concerning the war on the continent.

The third page devotes three and a half columns to war news, while the last column contains six announcements.

The first is by W. W. Baldwin, Agent for W. Firth, stating that the "elegant and extensive collection of books" of the late Mr. Firth will be sold by private sale. The advertisement reads:—

"The Subscriber begs leave to inform the Public that attendance will be given every Saturday during the approaching Sefson of the Provincial Legislature, from Eleven O'clock till Three, at the Library of William Firth, Esquire, at the Houfe in which he resided at York, when his Elegant and Extensive Collection of Books will be exposed to sale by private contract on the moft reasonable terms. It is needless to remark that this very extensive Library offers ample gratification to the Historian, the Politician, the Divine, the Poet, the Lawyer, the Merchant and the Novelist; there is also a rich collection of all the moft celebrated Greek and Latin Claffics. It is the intention of the Subscriber to send all the Books remaining unsold in the Spring to Lower Canada.

"W. W. BALDWIN,

"Agent for W. Firth.

"York, 14th Jan., 1812."

"N. B.—Two Elegant Bedsteads with Beds, Mattresses, Boulsters, Hangings, &c., complete, with some other Articles of Household Furniture, and a large double Cariole and Harness, are also for sale at the same place. W. W. B."

Mr. Firth was Attorney-General for Upper Canada.

The second notice reads:

"Wanted Two sober steady young Men, to clear off 20 Acres of New Land; it is light Timbered, for which the Cash will be paid as soon as the work is done. They will be boarded and lodged. Enquire of Doctor Price on Queen Street, near the Friends Meeting House. Any person having lost a two year old Heffer may hear of her by enquiring at the same place.

York, Jan. 15, 1812."

The location of this house is unknown.

The third is the notice to sell "the neat, roomy and well situated House in this town" belonging to "J. Glen-non."

The fourth relates to the sale of land by Col. St. John in Ancaster.

The fifth offers for sale "a handsome serviceable chestnut horse" and a "neat pleasure sleigh and harness."

In the sixth notice

"The Editor begs leave to remind his Country Friends that common Country Produce will be acceptable in payment for Subscriptions to the Gazette."

The fourth page has its first adv. a sale of lots in different parts of Upper Canada by Quetton St. George, and "Two acre lots nearly opposite the Gaol in this town, also a house and lot south side of King st., west of Van-zantes."

The first lots would be on the present north-east corner of King and Toronto streets. The gaol stood at the entrance to the present Leader Lane.

A notice of "Wanted a pair of young oxen" follows, and then a sheriff's sale adv. of the lands of Hill and Lawrence in Whitechurch, to be sold at the house of Thos. Stoyles.

Mr. Andrew O'Keefe was a fashionable clothier, for in his advertisement he "Begs leave to inform the inhabitants of York and its vicinity that he has taken the house, north side of Queen street, lately occupied by Mr. P. Miller as a tavern, where he intends carrying on the tailoring business in all its branches, with neatness and in the most fashionable manner. As his charges will be found moderate, and a strict adherence to punctuality, he hopes the public will favour him with a share of their commands in the above line, which he will make his particular care to merit.

"Ladies' pelisses and habits, and uniforms for the gentlemen of the Army and Navy, made on short notice and in the modern style. York, Dec. 4, 1811."

The second column of the fourth page has a notice of sale or rent of the house of Stephen Jarvis.

This is followed by "Lands for Sale," belonging to "John Gray, Esquire, of Lower Canada," and house and lot No. 3, north side of King street, and Lot No. 11, north side of Hospital street.

Mr. George Crookshank advertises for claims against the estate of the late Hugh McLean, an official of the Executive Council, and Messrs. W. & J. Crooks advertise their Niagara business to be closed, while Alex. Wood of York advertizes a large lot of wild lands.

Mr. Archibald Thomson, of Scarborough, offers five acres and Lot No. 10, east side of 6th con., Markham, and Samuel Heron offers Lot No. 9, east side of Yonge street, with a still "capable of making eighteen gallons of whiskey per day."

The Nathaniel Herriman advertisement of November, 1811, is repeated, as well as that of Thos. B. Gough in the same issue.

The printer, in order to be comfortable in the winter, "Wanted at the printing office 20 cords fire wood." D. Tiers repeats his advertisement of store opening at the house of Mr. Glen. An advertisement offering for sale a "farm 4 miles and a half from this town" is repeated. The printer has still stationery and law blanks for sale. Alex. Legge again tells the public about his stock of goods; Abel Coonatt offers lands, 40 miles from York "to be sold or let"; Aaron Stevens has yet his land in Trafalgar for sale, and the last advertisement in the paper is a notice for "P. Selby, Receiver-General, U. C.," stating that "All persons entitled to receive salaries or other public monies, and who cannot attend personally to discharge their warrants, are in future to furnish their agents with powers of attorney in duplicate before they can receive payment."

CHAPTER LIV.

A YONGE STREET BLOCK.

The Cameron Block on the West Side of Yonge st. North of Queen—Trade as it was on this Part of Yonge Street in the Fifties and in the Nineties.

It is not so many years since the corners of Yonge and Queen streets had but little prominence as a business centre. Indeed up to the middle of the sixties, King street east, from Yonge street to the market, had the call in dry goods, millinery and groceries. To-day all is changed, and the great dry goods stores which attract the multitude, are on Yonge street, and anywhere from the corner of King and Yonge street up to Albert street, there is a continuous moving mass of people, who fill the shops and make use of the sidewalks.

The block referred to in this landmark is the old Cameron block, a large portion of which is now the home of the immense departmental store of the T. Eaton Co'y.

Prior to 1826 the only building of prominence on the west side of Yonge street, north of Queen street to Albert street, was the Sun Tavern (Landmarks, Vol. I., Page 113). It was afterwards called "The Falcon," and subsequently the "Craven Heifer." The last occupant was a Mr. Fulljames. The house was destroyed by fire in 1859, and the ground was vacant for years.

In 1833-34, the north-west corner of Yonge and Queen streets, was No. 57, and the house was "The Sun Tavern." North of the yard of this house was the blacksmith shop (No. 59), of William Campbell, and the shop of John Brice, a butcher. No. 61 was empty, and No. 63 had David Cunningham as blacksmith, and John White, a wood-turner. No. 65 was occupied by James Malone, a carpenter, and Robert Cook, in the same trade. At No. 67 Hugh Morrison had The Golden Bull Tavern, and at No. 69 Mr. George Nichol lived. About the present corner of Albert street, No. 71, Robert Johnstone carried on business as a boot maker, and Mr. John Bugg, a prominent builder. Then came Macaulay Lane, now Albert street.

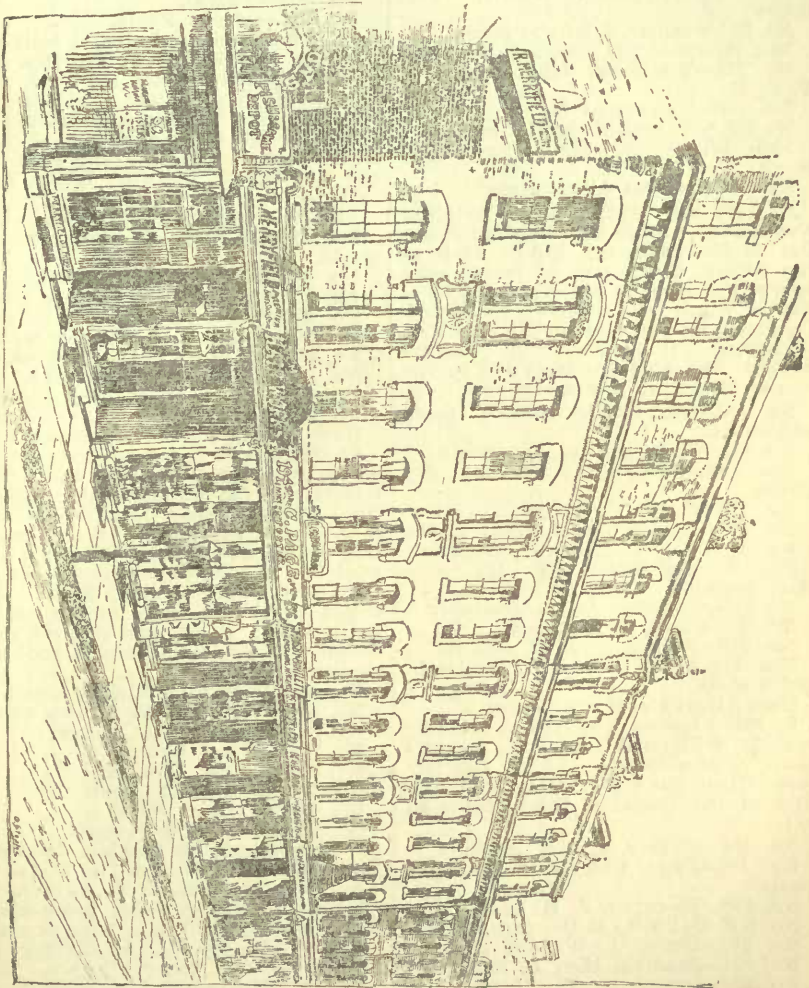

The Provincial Agricultural Association, after the fire in 1859, erected a building for offices, shops and a public hall. The association had its offices upstairs, and Fleming & Co., seedsmen, had the main store on the corner. This shop was afterwards occupied by Mr. P. Jamieson, who continued there until the fire of 1895, and continues in the building now on this corner.

A small two story building to the north of this corner on Yonge street, in the rebellion of 1837. North of this, and part of it was the store of Wm. Harrison, boot and shoe maker. No. 143-5 was the shop of R. Beauchamp, while near the corner of Albert was No. 147, the store of Robert Taylor, was occupied in 1856 by John Renowden, a tailor, and by Wilson & Mishaw, furniture dealers (No. 139), while a large frame building to the north was the Franklin House Hotel. (No. 141), kept by John Montgomery, well-known grocer and confectioner.

THE CAMERON BLOCK, YONGE STREET, 1857.

These houses were all of frame. From No. 139 they were torn down to make way in 1857 for the Cameron block, for the property had passed into the hands of the late Hon. J. H. Cameron.

It was of white brick, with twelve single shops in the block, having a frontage of about 120 feet on Yonge street.

The ground where the Fulljames Hotel stood was vacant in 1861-62, and the other stores were occupied as follows:

No. 196—Merryfield, Robert, boot-maker.

No. 192—Stalker, John, dry goods.

Nos. 194-196—Page, Charles, dry goods.

No. 198—Whiteside, John, porter, G. T. R. R.

No. 200—Unoccupied house.

No. 202—Watson, Richard, tinsmith.

Nos. 204, 206, 208—Three unoccupied houses

Here commences Albert street.

In 1862 the Agricultural building was erected, and in this building Fleming & Co., seedsmen, had a shop at the corner. There was a vacant spot between Fleming's place and Merryfield's, which was occupied by W. E. Chapman, photographic artist, and Mrs. Catharine Humphreys, a washer-woman. The numbers from 190 to the corner of Albert ran as follows:

No. 190—Merryfield, Robert, boots and shoes.

No. 192—Stalker, John, dry goods.

Nos. 192-196—Page, Charles, dry goods.

No. 198—Casci, V., grocer.

No. 200—Lorsch, David, fancy goods.

No. 202—Watson, Richard, tinsmith.

No. 204—Hounsfeld, W. H., hoop skirt maker.

No. 206—Tragaar, James, fruiterer.

No. 208—Clark, R. H., tailor.

No. 210—Williams, H. B., stab'es.

Nos. 212-214—Williams, H. B., black-smith shop.

No. 194—Stalker, J., dry goods.

No. 196—Page, Charles, & Co., dry goods.

No. 198—Thornton, J. B., books.

No. 200—Galloway & Co., fancy goods.

No. 202—Dunn, G. W., dry goods.

No. 204—Reading, Mrs. J., millinery.

No. 206—Dunn, G. W., hoop skirt manufacturer.

No. 208—Gibbs, M., fancy goods.

No. 192—John Stalker.

No. 194-196—Charles Page.

No. 198—James B. Thornton.

No. 200—David Galloway.

No. 202—Mary & Eleanor Reed.

No. 204—Mrs. M. Reading.

No. 206—G. W. Dunn.

No. 208—Vacant.

No. 210—Malcolm Gibbs.

No. 212—Vacant.

No. 214—George Noble.

In 18 8-69 the Agricultural Hall was occupied by Fleming & Co., No. 180, and John Holmes, shoe store, No. 182. The stores immediately north of the now Jamieson building were then being built. No. 188 was occupied by William Bilton and Robert Merryfield was in the first of the Cameron Block. Then came:—

No. 192—Stalker, John, dry goods.

No. 194-196—Page & Pannell, dry goods.

No. 198—Thornton, J. B., works.

No. 200—Robinson, J. D., dry goods.

No. 202—Reed, M. & E., milliners.

No. 204—Reading, John, hoop skirts.

No. 206-0-8—Dunn, G. W., hoop skirts.

No. 210—Gibbs, M., dry goods.

No. 212—Galloway, D., dry goods.

No. 214—Noble, G., & Co., dry goods.

In 1870 the T. Eaton Co. were on the south-west corner of Queen and Yonge streets. On the north side the Agricultural Hall building, Nos. 180-182, was occupied by the Agricultural Association offices and James Fleming & Co., while in a part of the store Mr. J. Holmes had boots and shoes. The stores to the north from the corner until Albert street was reached were occupied by 182, John Holmes, boot and shoe maker.

No. 182—O'Donnell, M., dry goods.

No. 184—Williams, W. M., dry goods.

No. 186—Toronto Tea Company.

No. 188—Bilton, Wm.

AN OLD RECEIPT.

The Upper Canada Gazette or American Oracle was issued originally in 1793 at Niagara by Louis Roy. It was $3 per year. The second volume, in 1794, was issued at West Niagara, or Newark, by G. Tiffany. In 1799 the office was removed to York and the paper was issued by William Waters and T. G. Simons, and in 1801 J. Bennett was the publisher.

The fac-simile is the earliest receipt for an advertising account known in Upper Canada. Mr. Wood was a prominent merchant of York, whose shop stood on the north-west corner of King and Frederick streets. (Landmarks, vol. i., p. 25.)

CHAPTER LV.

CROOKSHANK FARM HOUSE.

History of One of the First Buildings in York and Some of the Changes It has Experienced in Ninety Years.

Bathurst street, with its crowds of people and continual traffic of noisy electric cars, silent, but swift, bicycles, and vehicles of all descriptions, drawn by horses, is one of the last places in the city that would be thought to have at any time been a farm lane. Such, however, is the case. In the very early directories of York it is called Crookshank's lane, and a veritable lane it was—not in the ordinary city acceptation of the term, however. It was a semi-private thoroughfare, connecting the farm of the late Hon. George Crookshank with the city, or rather small town of that period. Its southerly portion received the name of Bathurst street in the twenties, in honour of Earl Bathurst, who was Secretary for the Colonies in the reign of George IV. Even as late as 1860 the upper portion of it was still called Crookshank's lane, however. The Crookshank farm extended from Queen street to the north of the Davenport road, and contained about 200 acres of land. The present Bathurst street ran through the eastern half of it.

Somewhat south of the centre of the farm stood the cottage which forms the subject of this Landmark. It was built in the first decade of the present century, and is one of the few buildings in the city that date from before the war of 1812. It was occupied by Mr. Crookshank before he built the house at the present corner of Front and Windsor streets in 1815. Mr. Crookshank and his family occupied it a second time in 1820, when the house at the north-east corner of Front and Peter streets was being re-built.

The farm house and all the adjoining land remained in the hands of Mr. Crookshank up to 1851, when it and some other acres that surrounded it were sold to Robert A. Goolenough. He held the property for eight years, when it passed into the hands of Captain Strachan. This gentleman was the son of the Honourable and Right Reverend John Strachan, D.D., first Bishop of the See of Toronto. Captain Strachan for years occupied a villa on the north-east corner of York and Front streets, built in 1833 by Mr. J. G. Howard for the use of Thomas Mercer Jones, one of the commissioners of the Canada Company. Captain Strachan bought the whole Crookshank farm, and occupied the farm-house for several years. During his term of ownership the property was greatly altered, being sold in different blocks, and cut up by freshly-planned streets. The house and the three-acre lot on which it stood were sold to Mr. Philip Brown in 1864. Up to that time the building had not undergone any very extensive changes. When Mr. Brown bought it, however, he had it moved about a hundred yards eastward, nearer the former lane, which had some time previous been dignified with the name of Bathurst street. Solidly built as the house was, the moving proved rather destructive to it, and it was found to be in need of extensive repairs and alterations. These were made, with the result that the house was greatly changed. It was made somewhat larger, and it is very doubtful if one of the early residents of York would recognize it to-day as the farmhouse of ninety years ago. The accompanying illustration is from a pen and ink sketch of the homestead by Mr. Stephen Heward, whose mother is a daughter of the late Mr. Crookshank. The sketch shows the house as it was originally. It is still standing, remote from the street and hidden from view by the trees and shrubs and vines that abound in the garden and lawn that surround it. Mr. Brown is the present owner and occupant. The house is known as 396 Bathurst street, and is opposite the house of Sir Casimir Gzowski, which is built on a site that at one time formed a part of the Crookshank farm.

WHEN GEORGE IV WAS KING

A Fac Simile of the Original Proclamation at York (Toronto) by the Government of Upper Canada on the Accession of George the Fourth to the Throne of Great Britain.

The fac-simile reproduction from the original copy of the proclamation by the Government of Upper Canada of the accession of George IV. to the throne of Great Britain gives a public view of a document belonging to a period in Canadian history when newspapers, official records and old documents were scarce. The fire of 1813, which destroyed the Parliament buildings at the east end of Palace, now Front street, wiped out nearly all the newspaper files from 1792-1813. What the fire did not do in 1813 it accomplished effectively in 1824, when the second Parliament House in York, and located on the same spot, was burned, and if anything belonging to official history remained, it was almost obliterated as far as documents are concerned by the destruction of the Parliament buildings by fire in Montreal in 1849.

George IV. was the eldest son of George III. and was born on 12th August, 1762, and ascended the throne on the 29th January, 1820, and died in June, 1830.

The news of the death of George III. must have been some weeks in reaching America, for King George IV. was not proclaimed at York until the 3rd of May, 1820. The Legislature of Upper Canada was in session until 7th March, 1820, and up to that date there is no mention of the death of George III. nor of the accession of George IV. The new Parliament of Upper Canada met on the 31st January, 1821, and in the Speech from the Throne is a reference to the death of the King and the accession of George IV.

The proclamation is signed by the Hon. Samuel Smith, who was administrator of the Government of Upper Canada during the absence of Sir Peregrine Maitland, the Lieutenant-Governor.

The document is countersigned by D. Cameron (Duncan Cameron) the Secretary of the Executive Council.

There is no official record of the reading of this proclamation. There are no Upper Canada newspaper files for 1820, and none of the Lower Canadian papers of that date refer to the proclaiming of the King at York.

George III. had been King of England for more than thirty years when the province of Upper Canada was created, out of what was vaguely called Canada previous to the time named. The country thus designated was that portion now included in the province of Quebec and Ontario, which, by the Act of 1791, became Lower and Upper Canada respectively.

The first public celebration of which there is any record was that by the Legislative Council and Commons House of Assembly at their meetings on the 5th and 6th day of February, 1806, when they passed a loyal congratulatory address to King George III. on the naval victory of Lord Nelson at Trafalgar in the previous October. It may be noted that it took more than three months for the news of Lord Nelson's victory and death to travel from Europe to York, Upper Canada, it not being received in the latter place until February 1st, 1806.

Trafalgar was fought October 21st, 1805.

George IV., died June 26th, 1830, and his next brother, William IV., (the sailor king) reigned in his stead. When the news reached York it was at once publicly announced by the crier, and the then sheriff, W. B. Jarvis, proclaimed William IV. as King.

The Patriot, then published in Kingston by Thomas Dalton, had the following remarks on the occasion:—

"George IV. has closed his illustrious career amidst the regrets of his affectionate subjects." After several paragraphs of regrets for the deceased monarch, the article goes on: "William IV. is now our lawful Sovereign; to him is due our undivided loyalty, which let us manifest by keeping the closest watch upon whoever may be his Secretary of State for the Colonies for the time being."

It does not appear that any public celebration of William IV's coronation took place either in York or in Kingston, and the Montreal papers are silent on the point. The coronation took place June 28, 1831.

All but seven years elapsed, when on June 20th, 1837, William IV., like his predecessor, also died, and his niece, our present Queen, ascended the throne. The intelligence arrived in Toronto—no longer York—on August 2nd, 1837, and was then and there announced, and again did Sheriff W. B. Jarvis read the young Queen's proclamation. This was somewhat of a ceremony, the sheriff accompanied by various officials going in an open conveyance, first to the City Hall, and then to Government House, in front of each place reading the proclamation. Among those with him were the local members of Parliament, the clerk of the Executive Council, Mr. John Beikie, the Mayor of Toronto, Mr. Powell, and others.

The Queen's coronation took place at Westminster Abbey, on June 28th, 1838, amidst great pomp and ceremony, and was not by any means allowed to pass unnoticed in Toronto. Here a grand procession of the firemen of the city under the direction of the then Chief of the Brigade, the late Mr. Thomas Denny Harris, paraded the streets. The order of the procession was as follows: First came the bands of the two militia regiments, the Queen's Rangers and the Queen's Foresters, then the chief officers of the brigade, viz., Thomas D. Harris, chief engineer; Richard Woodsworth, assistant engineer; Robert Beard, David Paterson and Jas. H. Westland, the first two of whom were chiefs of the Hook and Ladder Company and Toronto Fire Engine Company, and the latter was the secretary.

Following the officers was a fireman who carried a mace, gilded from top to bottom and surmounted by a lion. Then came two silk banners with emblematic devices, one having the word "Victoria" in its centre, surrounded by a wreath of the rose, shamrock and thistle, and underneath "British Supremacy." The other banner had a representation of the British-American fire engine on it, and the name of the company underneath the engine. Forty firemen were with the engine, which was gaily decorated. The firemen were arrayed in scarlet jackets and white trousers. These banners were painted by Alexander Hamilton. On the engine was a painting representing the death of Wolfe and the taking of Quebec. Then came two more flags, the work of Hart & March, and the hook and ladder waggon, followed by six axemen and 28 firemen; then was borne the Royal Standard, and the rear was brought up by more firemen. The route of the procession was along Yonge and King streets to the Garrison common, where it dispersed. Royal salutes were fired from the Old Fort, and a public banquet took place in the evening, and fireworks.

In Kingston the day was observed by the ladies of that place presenting the 1st Frontenac Militia Regiment with a stand of colours, the ceremony taking place near Birch House No 3, in front of Colonel Bonnycastle's residence. Mrs. Kirby presented the flags for the ladies' committee, and Lieut.-Col. Markland, commanding the regiment, accepted them and thanked the ladies. A display of fireworks took place at night, and during the day there was a boat race at Barriefield.

In Montreal and Quebec the day was celebrated by military parades, and all through the two provinces the occasion was not allowed to pass by unnoticed. Few of those who were present then are with us now, yet it is not uninteresting once more to recall the events of Auld Lang Syne connected with the Victorian reign

CHAPTER LVII.

AN OLD RESIDENT OF YORK.

An Interesting Story, Covering Ninety Years, by Mrs. Charles Seymour, of Ottawa, who Resided in the Town of York (Toronto) in 1811.

Mrs. Charles Seymour, of Ottawa, is the only person alive who resided in York, now Toronto, in 1811. Mrs. Seymour is the eldest child of the late Dr.

Grant Powell, the third son of the late Chief Justice Powell. Mrs. John Powell, of Toronto, is a younger sister of Mrs. Seymour.

The story told by Mrs. Seymour is an interesting one, and it is wonderful to hear her, sitting in a comfortable armchair in her residence on Vittoria street, Ottawa, recount the events of her lifetime.

Mrs. Seymour was born at Balston Spring, N. Y., in 1806, and was the eldest child of Dr. Grant Powell, the third son of Chief Justice Powell. The Powells are of Welsh extraction.

When Detroit, then the county of Heese, with other British possessions in America, was ceded to the United States authorities in 1784, Chief Justice Powell's father, who at that time resided there, left the country, but his son, Chief Justice Powell, after Peace was proclaimed between the two countries, returned to America, married in Boston Miss Anne Murray, a Norwich lady, who was visiting relatives there, and eventually with her settled in York (Toronto), and, as a U. E. Loyalist, became the possessor of several grants of land in different parts of the province. His son, Dr. Grant Powell, however, remained behind in England, for the purpose of finishing his medical studies, and after obtaining his diploma, also came out to America, but settled in the United States, where he for some years practised his profession at Balston Springs, N. Y. In 1805 he married Miss Eliza Bleeker, eldest daughter of Major John R. Bleeker, of Albany, whose ancestors came to Albany from Amsterdam in Holland in 1610, and bought large tracts of land, which include a portion of the present site of New York.

When their daughter was about three years of age Dr. and Mrs. Powell left Balston Springs for Canada.

Their first resting place was at Montreal, where they remained for about two years, coming to Toronto in 1811 by bateaux, and landing at the King's (now the Queen's) wharf, and then at Allan's wharf, at the foot of Sherbourne (Caroline) street.

In less than a year after their arrival at York war was declared between the two countries, and Mrs. Seymour, although at the time not quite six years of age, has still a distinct remembrance of the taking of York by the American troops. Mrs. Grant Powell, her mother, had issued invitations for a party to be held on the 27th April. Mrs. Seymour says she well remembers the guests were slow in arriving. One or two ladies came, but not a gentleman, and all present were feeling excited and uncomfortable, dreading they knew not what. The suspense was at last ended by the hurried entrance of her father, who informed them that the American fleet had been sighted. He told his wife to take the child and maid servants and go at once to Mrs. McGill's cottage, which stood in the centre of the now Metropolitan church square. This they did without loss of time. Dr. Powell also said that what was most required by the Canadians was food, they not having been prepared for the attack. Consequently, the following morning, Mrs. Seymour says, all the ladies at Mrs. McGill's were hard at work preparing provisions for the troops, some making bread, while she and Bishop Strachan's son, James, were first sent out to pick up chips to keep the fire alight while the provisions were being cooked.

The following morning Miss Powell went with her mother and nurse to their home, which they found a scene of desolation. The supper table, which had given her so much pleasure to admire the night before, had evidently been well appreciated by the invaders. The house had been ransacked by the Americans, who, she presumed, were looking for public papers, mistaking it for that of her grandfather, Chief Justice Powell.

At one of the doors a six-foot American lounged, breaking pieces off a cone of lump sugar. Bessy Walters, the nurse, walked up to the man and snatched it away from him, at the same time berating him for stealing her mistress' property, adding that she wished he would go home and mind his own business. "I guess I wish I could," was the reply. "Where is your home?" asked Mrs. Powell. "Down to Stillwater, New York," was the reply. "I've one of Major Bleecker's farms." An answer which caused some amusement to them both, when Mrs. Powell told him that Major Bleecker was her father.

Mrs. Seymour, when a girl, went to school in York. The school house was on the west side of George street, "a long wooden house" painted blue and kept by a Mrs. Goodman. A Miss Russell taught music, and a Miss Sherman, a teacher, had charge of the house. Mrs. Goodman had a son, a doctor, who lived and practised in St. Catharines.

In 1831 Miss Powell married Mr. Seymour, an officer of the Commissariat Department, and with him left at once for the West Indies, where he was stationed. They arrived at Barbadoes the day after a great hurricane which nearly devastated the island, and she says that the state of chaos and desolation that greeted them was almost beyond description. On Mrs. Seymour's arrival she was taken to the Garrison, and there found several of the officers' wives marvellously arrayed, but Mrs. Smith's costume bore away the palm. She was a pretty, bright-eyed, curly-haired brunette, and her dress consisted of a pair of her husband's trousers, turned well up at the ankle, showing two little feet in slippers and stockings much too large for her; a shell jacket, belonging to one officer, a dressing gown of another and a forage cap, belonging to a third, completed her costume. One unfortunate woman, whose little son was born during the storm, had the baby blown out of the nurse's arms into a prickly hedge, alive, but with a thorn through its cheek. Fifteen years afterwards Mrs. Seymour, who was then a widow, living at Gualph to be near her brother, Judge Powell, noticed in front of her in church a singularly plain lad, with a peculiar scar on his cheek, and on enquiry discovered that that was the identical baby, whose parents had come to reside in Canada.

Shortly before Mrs. Seymour and her husband went to Barbadoes a circumstance occurred in one of the adjoining islands which may be of interest here.

A vessel, more than suspected of being a pirate ship, for which the authorities had been on the look-out for some months, was seized and her captain and crew taken into custody. Circumstantial evidence was strong against the men, but in consequence of there being no ship's papers found nothing could absolutely be proved against them, and they, of course, strongly protested their innocence and complained bitterly of the injustice to which they were subjected. At last it was decided that unless further proof of their guilt could be procured by a certain date they should be set at liberty. But the day prior to the date fixed for their release a shark was caught off Jamaica, in the stomach of which, on it being cut open, was found the missing paper and other evidence of importance. The pirates, knowing there was no further hope for their release, made a full confession of all their misdeeds, and the captain was sentenced to be hanged. The document taken from the shark's stomach has been framed, and now hangs on the walls of the Public Institute in Kingston, Jamaica, where it was seen in 1896 by the writer of this interview. The officer in command at the wretched man's execution, and to whom he had previously surrendered his sword, presented that sword to Mr. Seymour. But the story does not end here. The event above narrated occurred somewhere about 1831. In 1859, years after Mrs. Seymour's return to Canada and subsequent widowhood, her niece, Miss Stuart, married Mr. Wyndham, a Wiltshire gentleman, who had come out to settle in Canada and bought land opposite Belle Ewart, on Lake Simcoe, on which stood a pretty house. As the young people decided to spend the first year of their married life in England, amongst Mr. Wyndham's people, and did not care about leaving their handsome new furniture, etc., entirely to the care of servants, Mrs. Seymour and her daughter, who had been living for some time in Niagara, decided to move up to Lake Simcoe and occupy the Wyndhams' house until their return. One day a farmer called to ask whether they, as the only gentlepeople in the neighbourhood, would have any objection to receive as their guest the Methodist minister, who was to hold mission services in that part of the country. Of course, no objection was made, and they consequently had the pleasure of entertaining a most charming man—a clever gentleman, and possessed of a large fund of anecdote. Amongst other things, he told them the story above related, saying, moreover, that he, at that time a clergyman of the Church of England, had been with the pirate captain, preparing the poor fellow for his death. His astonishment can be imagined when Mrs. Seymour produced the sword and told him how it had come into her possession. This sword, in a dinged and dented steel scabbard, with its blade notched, stained and rusted, was unfortunately lost in 1868, somewhere between Montreal and Ottawa. Mrs. Seymour was at that time living with her son, Grant Seymour, who, as secretary to the Adjutant-General, had been stationed in Montreal. When they removed to Ottawa the sword was lost.

After seven years spent in the West Indies, Mrs. Seymour, whose health had been suffering from the climate, was sent home to Canada.

She arrived in Toronto in 1838, just after the rebellion, and later on her husband, who was obliged to leave the service on account of ill-health, joined her, and ere long they removed to Streetsville, where, in 1843, Mr. Seymour died.

Mrs. Seymour returned to Toronto and resided in the cottage which stood on the north side of Richmond street, midway between Simcoe and York streets. She left Toronto in 1859, and joined her son, Grant, in Quebec, he having given up his law studies for the sake of a position in the civil service, which enabled him to provide a home for his mother and sister, which he did until the date of his death, in September, 1893. Since then Mrs. Seymour and her daughter have lived in Ottawa. Mrs. Seymour will be ninety-one years of age Tuesday, 24th August, 1897.

CHAPTER LVIII

THE MERCHANTS EXCHANGE.

The Building in Which the Corn Exchange and Board of Trade Met for Many Years.

The picture shows what is now the north-west corner of Wellington street and Leader lane. Wellington street was originally Market street. The lane or alley to the east of the Exchange was originally known as Berezy street. The sixth post-office, before its removal to the west side of Toronto street (the Receiver-General's office) stood on this corner. Mr. Berezy was the postmaster. He gave the property that made this lane or alley, and the name should never have been changed.

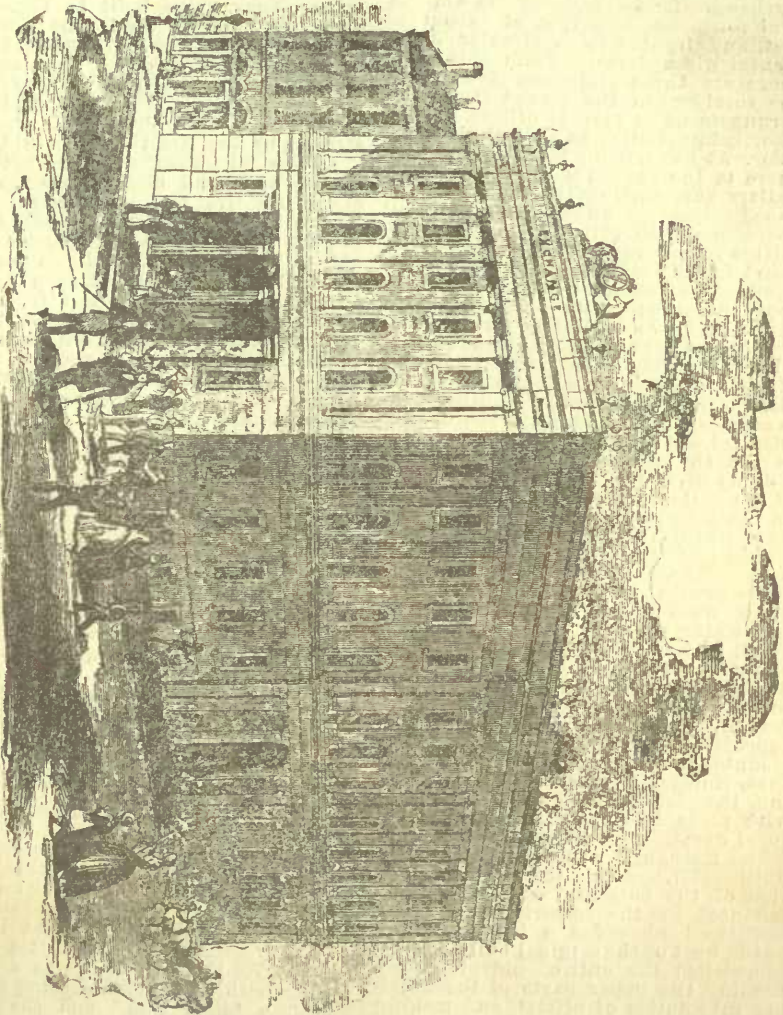

This corner was a busy centre on week days, and on Sunday mornings, when the post-office was opened for an hour or so, it was frequented by all the business men in Toronto. To the east, at the delta of Wellington and Church streets, the stage lines, which ran from Toronto to Kingston, and also to Hamilton, had their starting points.

This building was one of the finest architectural ornaments of the city. The design was by Mr. Joseph Grand, the architect, under whose superintendence it was built. The following architectural description, giving the dimensions of the whole and parts of the building, read in connection with our engraving, will furnish an accurate conception of the structure. The building has two frontages—that on Wellington street of 54 feet, and that on Berezy street of 140 feet—and consists of basement, ground, first and second floors. It is entered from Wellington street by a flight of steps under a receding portico of the Grecian Doric order, leading to a spacious landing, communicating directly on either side with rooms intended for the Montreal

Telegraph Company's offices, being accessible at all hours without entering the main building. In the centre of the landing is the principal entrance, 8 feet wide, leading to a corridor, 130 feet long, 12 feet wide, by 15 feet in spacious apartment of 50 feet long by 20 feet wide, well lighted by seven large windows on Wellington and Berczy streets. At the distance of 70 feet from the main entrance on Wellington street, is an attached portico of two height, communicating on either side with a range of first-class offices. At the distance of 12 feet from the entrance are two grand staircases, one on each side, which lead directly to the upper corridor and reading room — a series—the lower of which is of the Doric order, and the upper of the Ionic. The centre of this portico has a principal entrance, 12 feet wide, into the corridor, and on either side inferior entrances to the basement and refreshment rooms. From this principal entrance there are two flights of steps of 24 feet wide, leading direct to the upper corridor before mentioned, merchants' exchange room, millers' association rooms, brokers' offices, committee room, and eight private offices. The Exchange is 50 feet by 30, of an oval form, by a height of about 40 feet, and lighted by a circular ornamental glass dome. From this floor there are three staircases leading to the corridor on the second floor; the arrangement of private offices on this floor being similar to that of the first floor. At the north end of the corridor there is the entrance to a handsome gallery surrounding the inner wall of the Exchange, and communicating therefrom with private offices, committee rooms, and a suite of rooms set apart for the meetings of the Board of Trade. The basement is approached by four entrances (two on Wellington street and two on Berczy street), and was occupied as a refreshment saloon, with bathrooms, barber's shop, private offices and housekeeper's rooms. Each floor has water closets and other conveniences, and were always thoroughly supplied with water from cisterns holding in the aggregate three thousand gallons of water. The public portions of the building are heated by furnaces; and each corridor has two hydrants and hose, which, in case of fire, can be attached and brought to bear upon any part of the building. Each office has a fire-proof vault; water led on to supply a wash hand basin in each room, and water pipes to carry foul water away; and is also furnished with gas pipes. The building covers an area of nearly 8,000 superficial feet, and are composed of a rusticated basement, 20 feet high, on each side of the portico, supporting the cornice, which is surmounted by Ionic pilasters and entablature, finished on the top by balustrading, the piers at each end ornamented with vases, and the centre with the royal arms.

The Exchange was occupied as such until 1877, when the lower portion of the building was altered and tenanted by the Imperial Bank. In 1896 the bank added a large building to the west of the original building, and remodelled the entire old structure, turning the upper parts of the building into suites of offices, and making it altogether a most modern and at the same time a convenient and comfortable building for tenants.

CHAPTER LIX. THE BLOCK HOUSES.

The Log Fortifications that Served for the Defence of Toronto from 1793 to 1837.

The first fortifications at Toronto, or rather York, were built in 1793-4 by Governor Simcoe, when the Fort at the west end of the city was laid out. Batteries were erected, commanding the entrance to the harbour, and within the fort grounds a block house was erected. This block house was destroyed by the Americans in 1813, but it was re-built about 1815, and between 1820-25 a second block house, to the east of the first one, was erected.

In a plan of York Harbour, made in 1813, and published by Bouchette in 1832 a block house is shown on the east side of the creek, known as the Garrison Creek, which ran from the northern limits of the city down on the east side of the Fort entrance, but there is no evidence of such a block house as late as 1845, and the oldest inhabitant cannot remember it.

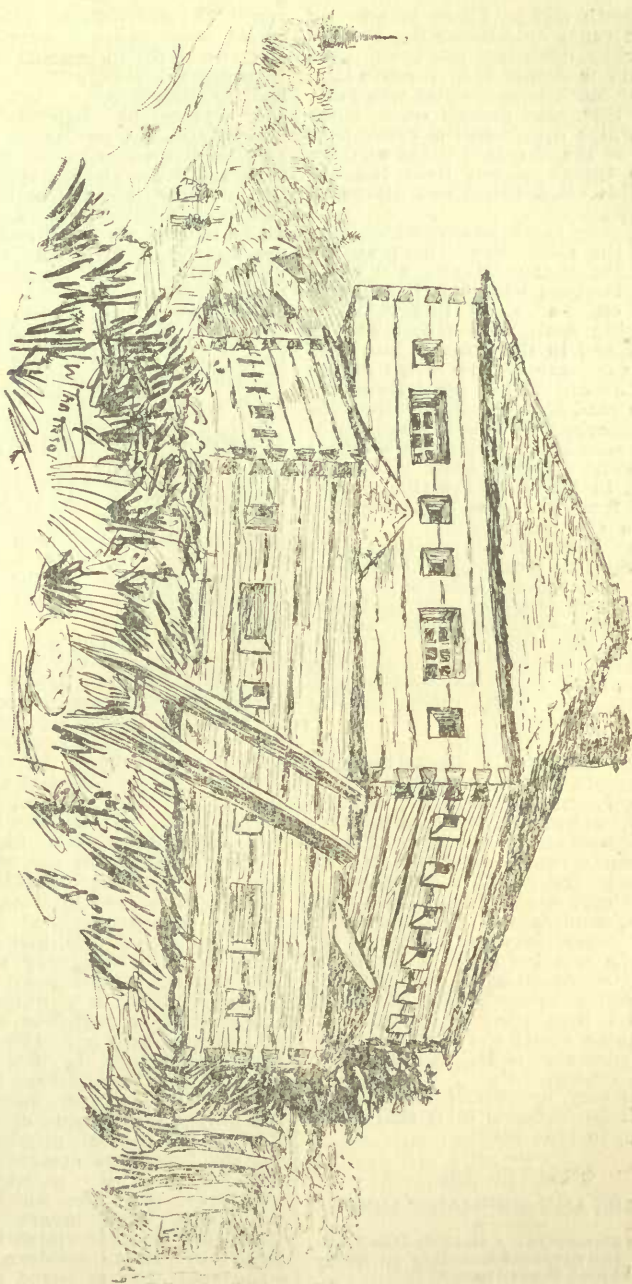

The second block house, built prior to 1800, was at Gibraltar Point, now Hanlan's Point. This block house stood about midway between the man-hole of the water-works at Hanlan's and the cribwork now used by the Ferry Company as a promenade. An original of this is shown in Irving's picture of York, 1818-20, now in possession of Mrs. Stephen Heward.

To the south of Heber's wharf five hundred feet, stood a storehouse, built by Governor Simcoe. Supplies for the block house were kept in this building, which was also used as a barracks for a dozen men.

Of the city block houses the most important was one on the bank of the Don, near the site of the old jail—now the site of the Gas works. This block house was destroyed by the Americans in 1813.

There has been some dispute as to the exact spot on which this block house stood. Some writers claim that it was on the east side of the Don, but the best authorities state that it was on the west side of "The Little Don," for in 1796-1815 the Don was a delta at its mouth, one entrance being known as "The Little Don" and the other as "The Don." The block house stood in the line of Berkeley street, south of Palace (Front) street southwards, at the point where the Little Don entered the Bay. It was designed to protect the road or track leading to the peninsula, where there was a landing place on the south shore. There is now no double entrance or delta at the Don, as the river by dredging has been made to flow in one stream into Toronto Bay.

Another block house, which was built prior to 1800, was located on a steep mound, which overlooked a creek that was part of the Garrison Creek at Gore Vale, on Queen street, near Niagara street. This block house was destroyed before 1820.

The modern block houses which surrounded the city were those at the head of Sherbourne street, a picture of which is given with this Landmark. It stood on the exact line of Bloor street going east, at the east end of this road and in the middle, just over the steep descent to the valley of the Don, to avoid which precipitous descent the road turned aside southwards towards Sherbourne street. Mr. Hirschfelder's house and grounds were immediately south of this block house. It was built in 1837-8, at the time of the rebellion troubles, so as to protect the city from the north.

Another block house stood at the head of Spadina avenue, on the site of the present Broadway Tabernacle, and a third stood on the east side of Yonge street, directly opposite Belmont street, and overlooking the ravine.

All these block houses were built on the same plan and were designed to protect the city in the trying days of 1837-38.

An earth-work stood for years, from 1812-20, at the junction of King and Queen streets, in the delta now occupied by a frame building. Mr. William Hellivell, writing in June, 1896, says: "There was at the junction of King and Queen streets, on the west side of the Don, the remains of an earth-work battery, said to be armed with a twelve-pound cannon during the war of 1812. There was no stockade, but simply the remains of an earth-work. The land surrounding it was bush. I enclose you a rough sketch of the locality as I first knew it in 1821."

This sketch shows the earthwork and bush on each side of it. The gun faced the Don bridge.

This battery was not finally demolished in 1850, remains of it still being visible up to that year.

CHAPTER LX.

PROTESTANT ORPHANS' HOME.

A Lasting Monument to the Swedish Nightingale—The Original Building on Beverley street and What Came of It

The directory for the city of Toronto in 1864 states that Sullivan street commences at Beverley street and runs west to Spadina avenue, and, furthermore, that only the north side had buildings on it, the first being the Protestant Orphans' Home, of which Mrs. Mary Holmes was matron, and west of this the house of Samuel Coyne, at that time head master in Phoebe street Public school. The rest of the land, north and west, was uncleared, or, as the directory puts it, "vacant lots." This was also the condition of the land on the south side of the street.

Such, then, was Sullivan street in 1864. The directory for 1897 shows that here, as everywhere else in Toronto, the march of improvement is manifest. Where once the Orphans' Home stood there is a row of modern dwelling houses. The residence of Mr. Coyne has been supplanted in like manner. The "vacant lots" have vanished. Upon the one situated west of the Orphans' Home, in the sixties, Beverley street Baptist church has been built. The south side of the street has been built up, and the lots on the north side have also been utilized as building sites.

But, "to return to our mutton." The Protestant Orphans' Home was originated in 1851. When Jenny Lind visited Toronto on her musical tour through America she gave a concert in St. Lawrence Hall, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to the founding of some charity commemorative of the event. Mr. J. G. Bowes, then Mayor of the city, having entertained the Swedish nightingale at his own house during her stay in the city, was entrusted with the application of the money. After consultation with some friends, it was resolved to found an Orphans' Home and Female Aid Society. The preliminary steps having been taken, a temporary home was opened in 1852, in a building on Bay street, for the reception of that class of persons for whom the charity had been established. In 1854 a site was presented by Hon. Robert Baldwin and Hon. William Cayley jointly, through the kindly intercession of the late Dr. Rees, a prominent physician, a permanent home was erected on Sullivan street in the year in which the site was presented. The building originally was a large, square, three-storey affair, and was calculated to accommodate about thirty children, with their attendants. It was found necessary to add a two-storey wing on the west side in 1861. Three years later a second wing was added, giving the building the appearance shown in the cut, and affording altogether accommodation for about seventy children. The building was pleasantly situated, and the grounds which contained it were at the time of its erection of ample size for the requirements of the institution.

The last wing was added in consequence of the need there was felt for an infirmary. Early in the year 1864 an epidemic of measles and similar diseases broke out among the inmates, and in one month eighteen children died. This showed the necessity of having an infirmary, so the wing was built.

This gave the institution ample capacity for the care of all the inmates of the place at the time. As years went by, however, the Home's circle of usefulness increased, and soon the management saw that the institution was becoming overcrowded.

Accordingly, in 1882, a new site was selected, and a much larger and more capacious building was erected on the west side of Dovercourt road, south of College street. The original building on Sullivan street was then sold and torn down not long afterwards. It was from the proceeds of the sale of this property, coupled with donations from friends of the society, that the present site was bought and the home built.

The management of the institution is entrusted to a committee of ladies, chosen annually at a meeting of the members of the society. The home was at its commencement supported and conducted by Protestants of various denominations indiscriminately. Contributions came in from men of all opinions. The Freemasons of Toronto in 1855 contributed $80. Many of the Orange Lodges in the province contributed various sums. Rev. John Strachan, Bishop of Toronto, in 1857 contributed $600.

The institution subsequently became decidedly Episcopalian in character, owing in a great measure to the energy of the chaplain. It was determined to have the new home opened by the bishop of the diocese, in order to determine its character; but owing to a communication received from the secretary, a young lady belonging to the Presbyterian denomination, his Lordship refused to comply with the resolution that had been passed, providing that "a school shall always form part of the establishment, and religious instruction of the Church of England shall be included in the daily education of the school."

In consequence of expressions of disapproval of her action, the secretary resigned her office. The Bishop was asked to reconsider his decision, but refused to do so; so that the institution was not opened with any public ceremony. Time, however, has soothed the animosity excited by injured feelings.

The matron of the original building was Mrs. Mary Holmes. In 1865 Mrs. Large succeeded to her position. In 1868 Miss Wheelwright was appointed matron. She occupied the position for twenty-eight years. In 1897 the matron of the home was Miss Deacon. The first directress in 1852 was Mrs. Widder, who held the position for two years. Mrs. John Cawthra was the first directress for 1897.

CHAPTER LXI.

KEARSNEY HOUSE.

The Residence of a Well Known Bank President and Toronto Merchant of the Earlier Time.

The large white brick house on the east side of Yonge street, known as No. 591, was built by the late Mr. William Proudfoot in 1848, and named by him Kearsney House. When built it was entirely in the country and was surrounded by several acres of arable land. The only other brick residence in its immediate vicinity was a small brick cottage, still remaining, on the south-east corner of Yonge and Wellesley streets, occupied in 1850-51 by Mr. Alley. Mr. Michie's house, on the same side of Yonge street as Mr. Proudfoot's, was built about the same time as the latter.

Mr. Proudfoot was a Scotchman by birth, and came to Canada in his youth. For many years he was in business on the south-west corner of King and Frederick streets, at that time an important business centre. He dealt in "wines, groceries and dry goods, wholesale and retail." So ran his advertisement. Up to 1848 he resided at No. 8 Duke street, closely adjacent, to, and almost opposite what was then the Bank of Upper Canada, now La Salle Institute. For many years Mrs. Proudfoot was a director of the Bank of Upper Canada, and for some time its president. Mr. Proudfoot resided in Kearsney House until about 1862, when the residence passed into the possession of Mr. Robert Cassels, who in 1869 disposed of it to its present occupant, Mr. Donald Mackay.

In former years Kearsney House was often the scene of the most hearty hospitality, and for those days, sumptuous entertainments. On one occasion Mr. Proudfoot presided over quite an extensive fancy fair, which was held in the drawing room, a magnificent apartment seventy-five feet in length by twenty-five wide. It was in 1850, not very long after Mr. Proudfoot had gone into possession. During the present occupancy of Mr. Mackay, that gentleman on one occasion entertained the whole of the members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in Canada, a total of rather more than four hundred guests.

This was the first saw mill erected in or near Toronto and was built by Parshall Terry, who had been a lieutenant in Butler's Rangers, and served all through the Revolutionary war. Parshall Terry was one of a very large family of sons and daughters, his father also Parshall Terry, came from the New England State of Connecticut, and settled afterwards in the Wyoming Valley. Parshall Terry, jun., was the only one of his family who did not espouse the cause of the American colonists, he remained steadfast in his allegiance to King George III., and on the disbandment of Butler's Rangers came to Canada, and for some little time resided in Kingston. About 1794 he came “DONDONALD,” (FORMERLY KEARSNEY HOUSE), BUILT IN 1848.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Proudfoot died many years since, and the only survivors of the family now reside in Great Britain, far from the scene of their early years. Kearsney House, when first erected, was the finest residential building in the city, and even now, after fifty years, it still retains its character, as one among the best of our citizen's homes.

CHAPTER LXII. THE DON MILLS.

to York, and about the same time married Rhoda Skinner, the daughter of an Englishman, and had a very large family of sons and daughters. Of the former none subsequently settled in Toronto or York, but his daughters all married Canadians and went with their husbands to various parts of the province. The eldest married Edward William Thomson, of Toronto township, another married George Thomson of Scarborough, another Dr. Lee of London, Ont., a fourth was the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Farquharson, and a fifth that of James Cornell, of Scarborough.

Parshall Terry was drowned in the river Don, just north of the Kingston road bridge, while attempting to ford it on horseback, one night in July, 1808.

After Terry's death the mills were no longer used for the purpose they were built for, and after a little time passed into the hands of the Eastwood, Skinner and Helliwell families. They were then converted into paper mills and were the forerunner of the buildings now standing, not on the actual site of Terry's old mill, but in its immediate vicinity.

Not a vestige remains now of the old building, though the course of what was the mill race is plainly to be traced, as is the spot which formerly was covered by the waters of the mill pond. The named. About 1843 Mr. George Taylor, an Englishman from the neighbourhood of Uttoxeter, Staffordshire, purchased the business, and from that date to the present it has been conducted by his family on a much more extended scale than was ever even thought of probably, by the original proprietors. Mr. Taylor married a Miss Bright, daughter of James Bright, and granddaughter of Lewis Bright who was in bridge seen in the drawing is still extant, though it has been renewed and altered many times.

The Eastwoods and their relatives, the Skinners, the latter of whom were related to Parshall Terry's widow (afterwards Mrs. Cornell, died 1832) commenced the paper making trade early in the twenties, and were fairly successful. William Lyon Mackenzie in his "Sketches of Canada," published in 1832, refers to this industry as being profitably carried on by the people the employ of the first Legislature convened by Governor Simcoe in 1793. Mrs. Taylor died March 27th, 1868, and is interred in the family burying ground in Todmorden. Mr. Taylor died on May 17th, 1894, being in his 82nd year, and was buried in the same place as his wife.

HANLAN'S POINT IN 1867.

CHAPTER LXIII. THIRTY YEARS' CHANGES

At Hanlan's Point—The Old Hanlan Homestead and its Fate—Ned Hanlan's Boat house and Places in the Neighbourhood.

Toronto Island is made up of shifting materials, and the marks of habitation upon it seem to shift quite as much as the very sand of the Island itself. The smaller cut accompanying this landmark gives a good idea of Hanlan's Point thirty years ago, but very few will recognize the locality shown. The long wharf occupied almost the same site as that of the old wharf running out into Blockhouse Bay from the Island electric power house, just north of the Hanlan Ferry Company wharf. Of the long low building at the head of the wharf few traces remain. It was built by Ned Hanlan's father in 1862, and it was here that John Hanlan, the boathouse keeper, and his brother Edward, the famous oarsman, were raised. The "old homestead," as they speak of it, was torn down a dozen years ago; part of it was moved back to the shore of the lagoon, and is now used as a boathouse. Rather amusing is the account of the choosing of this home. Mr. Hanlan, sr., at first lived in a house down near the eastern gap. During a terrific gale this place was washed away by the roaring waters of the lake. As soon as the storm was over the family, nothing daunted, gathered their scattered timbers together, built a raft, on which they placed their property, and drifted up the bay, with a fair east wind. They chanced to ground at the present Hanlan's Point, and here they built their home and left a name.

The wharf shown in the cut was destroyed by the ice, one spring. A huge ice barrier, fifteen feet high at the lowest place, was piled up against it by the wind and waves, and next morning the wharf was gone.

The small building in the centre of the picture was used as a shooting gallery. It also has disappeared. The gabled house adjoining it is still standing, in nearly the same position, though somewhat altered. For a long time it was occupied by Mrs. Durnan, the sister of John Hanlan, sr. It is now used as a restaurant. Near it there used to be a small shed, where boats were kept for hire. It has also been torn down.

The small building in the extreme left of the cut was also used as a boat-house. It was here that Ned Hanlan used to keep his shells, when he was champion oarsman. A separate view of it, with the shells referred to, is shown in the larger picture. The building was torn down some years ago.

The wreckage on the beach, in the left of the smaller picture, formed part of a large scow. It formed the playground of the young Hanlans and their companions.

CHAPTER LXIV. THE DON VALE HOUSE.

An Old Time Hostelry and Resort of the Sporting Fraternity — Its History and Proprietors.

The two cuts given with this article represent an old-time tavern once the frequent resort of the sporting fraternity of the city, and where many contests in the now obsolete sport of cock fighting were not only arranged but brought off in the sheds adjoining the tavern.

The Don Vale House tavern was erected as a dwelling house about sixty years ago, towards the end of the "forties," and was soon after turned into a public house. In 1855 the landlord was David Priestley, and the thoroughfare whereon it stood on the north side being a continuation of Winchester street, was known as Don Road. No other house was very near it, Priestley's next neighbour being a widow named Moore, who resided in a cottage about one hundred yards distant. Mr. Priestley continued to occupy the tavern until 1860, when he was followed by John Hogg, who continued as the proprietor for about five years. After Hogg gave up the tenancy the tavern passed into the possession of George Fox, who in addition to keeping the tavern was also a slater and contractor. In 1870 Mr. Fox gave up the tavern and removed his other business to 68 Queen street east. Then for a considerable time the house remained untenanted, and eventually about 1875 or 1876 was pulled down, and the old place passed away, nothing being left to tell of it, excepting a wooden sign, recording that on that spot, the extreme north-east corner of Winchester street to the south-east of the Neopolis, stood the Don Vale House. This old-time hostelry was one of a class of taverns common enough in the suburbs of the city forty years ago. They were places where men went in the evenings, after their day's work, being just far enough removed from the centre of the city to give their patrons a short walk to reach them, with an all but certainty of congenial company within their walls. Boxing contests were often in order in some of them, in the Don Vale House especially, which was always the resort, more or less, of sporting men. Another of these suburban taverns was the Queen's Head, on Queen street west and Dundas street, fully described in Volume II. of the Landmarks of Toronto. Nothing was ever alleged against either stood on the corners of King and York streets.

The buildings, although in the cottage style, had a severe, if not a business look, for they were buildings of much importance.

One—that on the south-west corner of York and King streets — was the office of the Secretary and Registrar for the Province. The official in charge was the Hon. Duncan Cameron, of Gore them or their proprietors, though possibly some of the scenes enacted within their precincts would now be deemed illegal and unsuited to the times. But the last fifty years have seen many changes, none greater, perhaps, than the conduct of the proprietors and frequenters of taverns, both in town and country.

CHAPTER LXV. TWO QUIANT COTTAGES.

A Couple of Buildings of Importance that Stood Once Upon a Time on Two of the Corners of King and York Streets.

Not many years ago—about forty—there were two pretty cottages, which

Vale, "who resides near Farr's Brewery," on Lot (Queen) street west. The building was of red brick, with a couple of windows on each side of a doorway that was partly hidden by a porch. There was a window on each side, protected by worn shutters, and the building was supposed to be fireproof. This was in 1837, and the directory of that date states that "this office is about to be removed to the office adjoining the Parliament House."

After the removal of the Registrar's office to the Parliament Buildings on Front street, the cottage was occupied by Mr. Jarvis, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and Chief Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Col. Bruce, who was Secretary to Lord Elgin, also had his office in the building in later years. This cottage was torn down about 1845 and a row of buildings, known as "The York Chambers," was erected. These buildings were afterwards the Revere House, now the Kensington Hotel.

The building or cottage on the north-west corner was the College Land Office, the Hon. Lieut.-Col. Joseph Wells being the secretary, and about 1856 became a city police office, and was finally removed to make room for a block of stores, which eventually became an hotel, now known as the Palmer House. Col. Wells occupied this office in 1837.

commanded the British garrison, ordered her destruction, to prevent her capture by the enemy.

Such was the fate of Toronto's first great sailing vessel. The last one was built in 1854. Both before and since that date many schooners were built at this port, some of which are still afloat. They were, as a rule, only intended for lake navigation, and were mostly of comparatively small tonnage. Very few of them were of above three hundred tons register.

CHAPTER LXVI. SHIPS BUILT IN THIS PORT.

An Account of the First Large Ship and Last Sailing Vessel of Great Size Built in Toronto.

Trading vessels have been built at this place ever since it was made a British trading post. It was not until 1812, however, that a ship, in the more restricted sense of the word, was built. The vessels constructed prior to this were all small traders—sloops, cutters or schooners, varying from thirty to fifty feet in length, and never exceeding one hundred tons in burden. The ship mentioned was intended for military purposes. She never reached her element. When the town capitulated to the Americans in the spring of 1813, this vessel was still on the stocks, and General Sheaffe, who 982-9, will be found a fairly complete list of vessels built in York and Toronto.

On Saturday, September 14th, 1799, the U. C. Gazette says: "The Toronto yacht, Capt. Baker, will in the course of a few days be ready to make her first trip. She is one of the handsomest vessels of her size that ever swam upon the Ontario; and if we are permitted to judge from her appearance, and to do her justice, we must say she bids fair to be one of the swiftest sailing vessels. She is admirably calculated for the reception of passengers, and can with propriety boast of the most experienced officers and men. Her master-builder was a Mr. Dennis, an American, on whom she reflects great honour." This was Mr. Joseph Dennis. The vessel was built on the Humber River. The name Dennis is carelessly given in the Gazette as Dennison. The first was therefore the Toronto yacht, 1799; then the Bella Gore, in 1809, followed by the Dove and Reindeer in 1814. The tonnage of these vessels is unknown, but it was not more than 50 tons. The Jane, 1815; John Walker's, 90 tons, 1819; Lady Sarah, 100 tons, 1819; and the Richmond, 100 tons, 1819. In 1824 the Toronto, 200 tons, was built, and in 1828 the Canadian, 70 tons; the George IV., 80 tons, in 1828; and the George Canning, of 80 tons, in 1828. A towboat, called the City of Toronto, 500 tons, was built in 1840, and the Scotland, of 500 tons, in 1847. The Cigar, a ferry boat, was built in 1849, and the Peninsula Packet in 1849. The last two used steam. The Citizen, ferry steamer, was built in Toronto in 1853, and the Victoria in 1853; the City of Toronto (Hayes Bros.) in 1854; the King of Algiers, a towboat, in 1856; the Alliance and Union, two schooners, were built about 1853-5; the Ripple and Princess of Wales were built in 1864; the Garden City in 1892; the Prowett Bey about 1890; the Luella in 1879; the Canadian in 1882; and the Kathleen, Gertrude and Mascotte in 1886; the Mayflower and Primrose in 1890—the last eight were ferry steamers—the W. J. Tyman in 1892; the Ongiara in 1885; the Chippewa in 1896.

In 1854, however, Messrs. Hayes Bros., who had a ship yard on Front street,—then at the water's edge—directly opposite the Queen's Hotel, laid the keel of a vessel of more than usual size, intended for use on salt water. This idea could scarcely be said to be original with them. Two years before a 300-ton vessel called the Cherokee was built at Kingston, and came up to this port and sailed from here for Liverpool. A couple of years later two more vessels were built in Cantlin's yard, Kingston, for Captain Gaskin. They also were intended for salt water. But these vessels could not compare in any particular with the City of Toronto, as Messrs. Hayes Brothers called their ship.

She was of a thousand tons burden, and although of comparatively light draught, her size precluded all possibility of her being employed in the lake trade. The view published with this landmark, shows her just a few minutes before the launch. The "News of the Week" of June 2, 1855, says of the new ship:—

"We publish to-day a view of the launch of the ship City of Toronto from the yard of the builders, Messrs. Hayes Bros. & Co. This vessel being the first ever built in Toronto for ocean navigation, a good deal of interest has been evinced by our citizens generally in her progress from the first. The corporation unanimously passed resolutions, highly complimentary to the enterprise of the Messrs. Hayes, in thus inaugurating a new and very important branch of industry in Toronto, and voted them a complete set of colours for their new ship.

"The keel of the City of Toronto was laid in May, 1854, and she was launched on the 3rd April, 1855, thus occupying twelve months in construction, and she is certainly an admirable specimen of what our good city is capable of producing in marine architecture. She has been built under the superintendence of Mr. A. MacPhie, formerly of Quebec, and under the inspection of Lloyd's surveyor, and the builders expect that she will class A1 for ten years in Lloyd's books, although no colonial built ships have yet been classed for more than eight years. There is no good reason, however, why a vessel built in Upper Canada, if she be constructed of good material and the workmanship be of an equally good character, should not rank as one built on the Thames. A very strong prejudice exists against Canadian timber for shipbuilding purposes in England, much of which arises from the prevalence of dry rot, and we are strongly impressed with the conviction that the tendency to this particular form of disease in Canadian timber arises in a great measure from two causes, which we will mention; the first is that much of the oak and elm timber, which is used in our lower ports, is cut at the wrong season, when the sap is out of the tree; the second and most effectual cause of dry rot is that heretofore the great bulk of Canadian oak, which has reached the shores of Great Britain, either in the log or in the shape of vessels, has been, none less than two years, and most of it for a longer period, exposed to the alternate action of water and air in the process of transport through the western rivers and lakes and in the tide way at Quebec. The consequence is that it becomes thoroughly impregnated with animal-cula, and dry rot inevitably follows.

"To avoid the evils arising from these causes and give Canadian oak a fair trial, the builders of the City of Toronto selected a timber growing in the woods near Newmarket, on the line of the Northern railway, had it cut and hauled to the cars in the winter of 1853, and they feel confident that the greatest advantages will be found from this plan in the strength and durability of the ship. We hope their expectations will be realized, and that the committee of Lloyd's will appreciate the advantages which such a vessel must possess over those built in the usual manner.

"The City of Toronto is constructed entirely of selected upland white oak. She is fastened with Long Island locust trenails and yellow metal bolts from stem to stern. The scantling of her timbers, beams and plank and sizes of bolts and other fastenings are all somewhat fuller than are required by Lloyd's specifications for a ship of her size, her builders being determined to make an exceedingly strong and serviceable vessel. Her dimensions are: Length of deck, 168 feet; length of keel, 156 1-2 feet; depth of hold amid-ship, 18 1-2 feet; height between deck, 6 1-2 feet; breadth of beam for tonnage, 32 1-2 feet.

"She has a spacious poop cabin aft, which will afford good accommodation for passengers, and a roomy topgallant forecabin for the crew. She is fitted with a large patent windlass of great power, and two corpstairs, and is to be a full rigged ship. The cordage was manufactured in Belfast, from the best Russian hemp. The canvas is from the celebrated Gonrock Mills, in Scotland, and is the same as that used in the Royal Navy. The sails were made by Messrs. Robeson & Sons, of this city.

"The ship now lies alongside Tinning's wharf, where she is being fitted for sea, and on the Queen's Birthday formed an object of great attraction to country visitors to the city."

This was the first sea-going vessel built here, and, up to her time, the largest ocean vessel built in Upper Canada. Thousands witnessed the launch, which was not entirely successful, the ways spreading just as the vessel took the water. She was quickly floated off however. After the launch a select party was invited to lunch on board the ship, and the Mayor (Hon. G. W. Allan) presented Mr. Hayes with a set of colours on behalf of the Council, as a public testimony for the firm's enterprise in originating a new branch of industry—ocean ship-building.

The following are extracts from official minutes of the City Council of the Corporation of the City of Toronto, concerning the presentation of colours to the steamer City of Toronto:

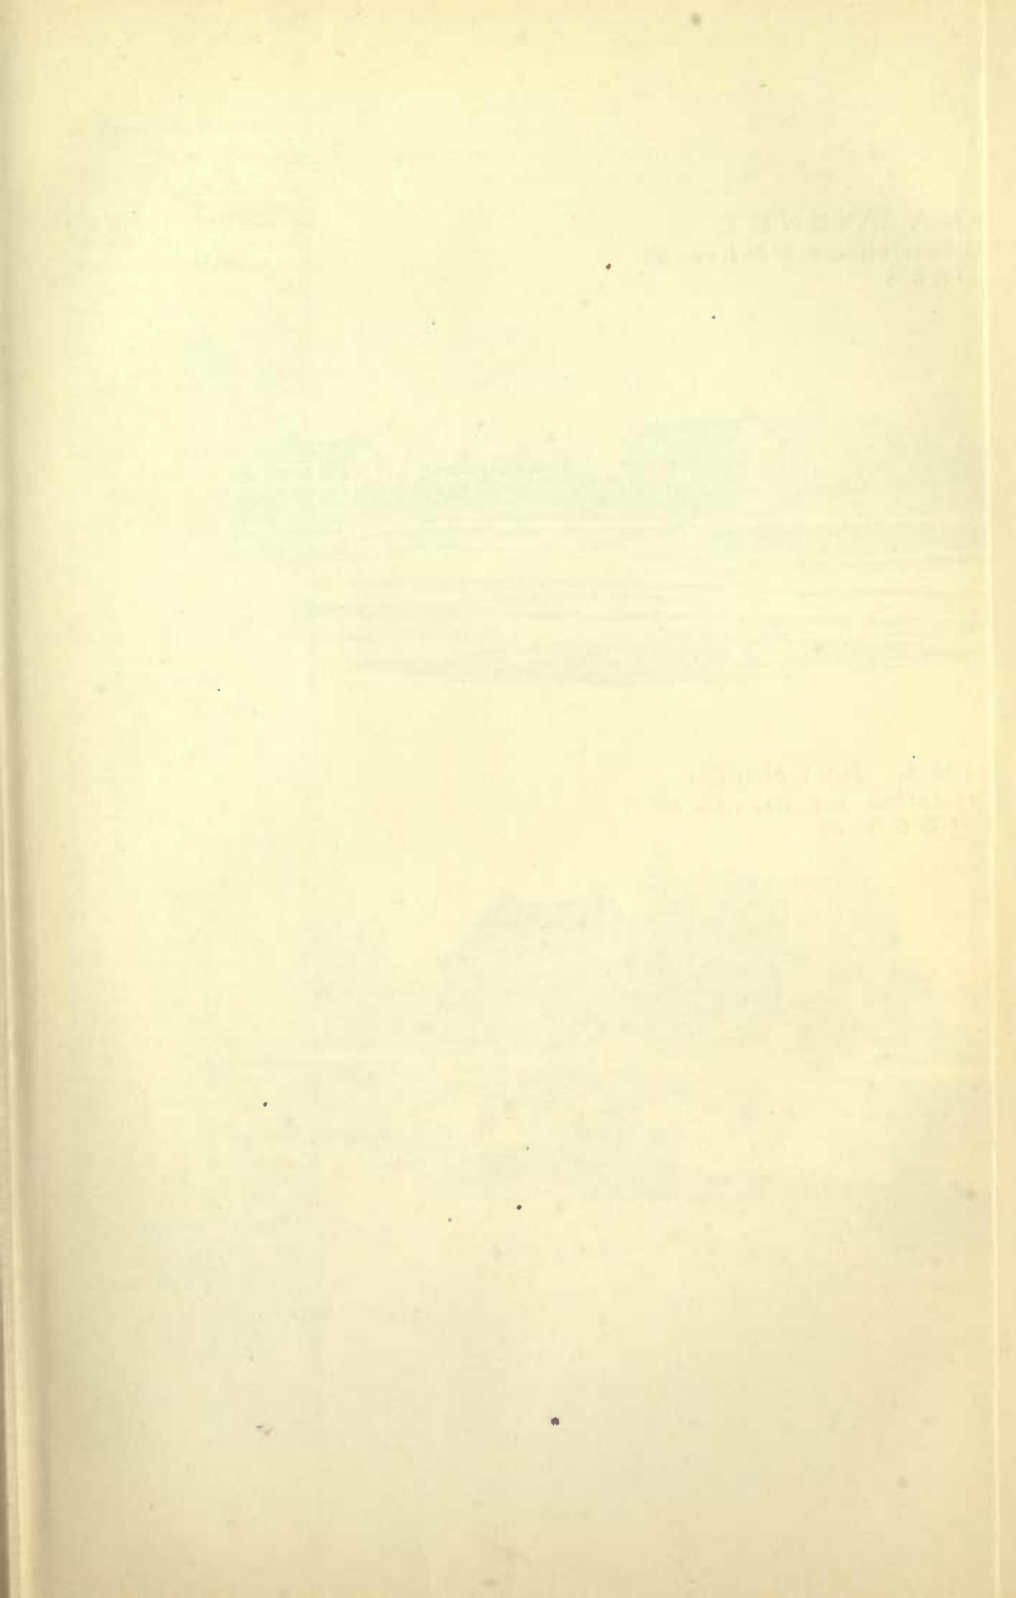

"Monday, April 2nd, 1855.—Ald. Smith, seconded by Councillor McConkey, moves that it be resolved that this Council, highly appreciating the enterprise and public spirit of our respected townsman, M. P. Hayes, Esq., evinced in his construction of the splendid ship now ready to be launched in this harbour, being the first ever built here for ocean navigation, do present him with a complete set of colours for the said ship, and that the 21st rule of this Council and the order of the day be dispensed with so far as relates to this motion, which was ordered.

"Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Good, moves that it be resolved that a select committee be appointed to purchase the colours authorized by the foregoing resolution; that the said committee be requested to use their influence with M. P. Hayes, Esq., to have the ship named 'The City of Toronto,' and that such committee do consist of His Worship the Mayor, Ald. Carr, Romain, Dunn and the mover, which was ordered."

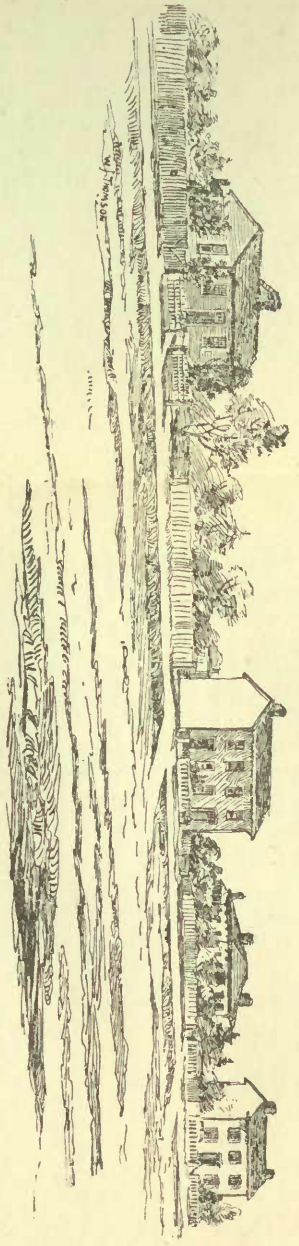

"Monday, May 14th, 1855.—Ald. Carr, seconded by Councillor McConkey, moves that it be resolved that the Chamberlain be authorized to pay the amount of the account of Mr. Robertson for colours furnished for the ship 'City of Toronto,' as per resolution of this Council, which was ordered."

Owing to a difficulty in obtaining part of her equipment, it was not until the beginning of August that the ship left Toronto. Messrs. Hayes Bros. had built another sea-going vessel, the barque Reindeer, at Coldwater. The Reindeer and the City of Toronto were both intended for sale in the British market. They left Toronto in company, with cargoes of walnut. The City of Toronto, the larger vessel, having taken as much cargo aboard as the depth of the St. Lawrence canals would admit, completed loading at Quebec. She was to have been taken out by Captain Kidd, a veteran salt-water captain, but owing to some failure in arrangements, a Captain Clark took command of her. Besides her cargo of walnut, the ship carried several passengers.

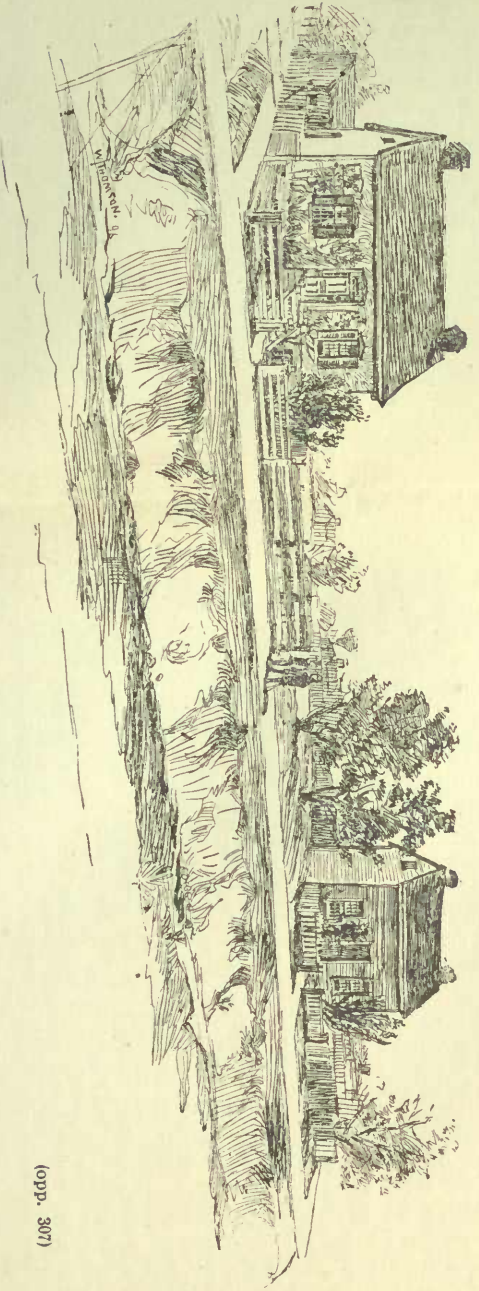

The City of Toronto made a record run from Quebec to Liverpool, covering the distance in a little over two weeks. She then went into the timber trade, for which she was calculated, being fitted with bow and stern ports. On her second voyage, in the fall of 1856, when returning to Quebec for another cargo of timber, she was wrecked on the coast of Nova Scotia, and the greater part of her crew perished.

CHAPTER LXVII.
SPADINA AVENUE.

The Widest Street in Toronto and its Early Residents—A Thoroughfare that is a Busy Centre Traversed by Thousands.

Spadina Avenue was laid out by the late Dr. W. W. Baldwin between 1813-18. The word Spadina is from the Indian, and signifies a sudden rise of land, and on that elevation at the head of the street Dr. Baldwin built about 1820, Spadina House, as the family residence. The original structure was burned down in 1835.

The street is 160 feet wide and it was originally a mile and a quarter long, measuring from the neck or the head of the original street, where now runs Bloor street, ending at south end of Queen street.

At Queen street south to the Bay shore Spadina Avenue is continued as Brock street, also retaining the width of 160 feet.

Queen street at the foot, and to the east of Spadina is ninety feet in width to within a few feet of Beverley street. This increase in the width of Queen street from Spadina east to Beverley, is caused by the fact that it was so laid out by Mr. Peter Russell, who had the park lot known as Petersfield, where the family of the late Mr. Justice McLean reside—in a house originally built by the Receiver-General of Upper Canada, Hon. J. H. Dunn.

The map of York (Toronto) made June 1797, only shows as far west as Peter street, and from Queen to the Bay shore—west of Peter were "ten acres submitted for a college," and about five acres "submitted as burying ground." The college was, however, located one block east between John and Graves (Simcoe) street, and the burying ground was not laid out. The land bounded by John, Peter, King, Hospital (Adelaide) street, was "Russell Square," intended as a recreation ground for the people.

Gotherman's map or plan of December, 1788, gives the plan of Toronto harbour with the proposed town and part of the settlement. This shows (p. 385, Vol. I.) how the intention was to lay out the town west as far as the site of Fort Rouille, north to what is now the Davenport road, and east to the Don.

In 1836-7 the following were residents of Spadina avenue:

Bennett, Adam, joiner.

Baldwin, Hon. Capt. Russell Hill, Spadina, who died aged 90, January 5th, 1866.

Baldwin, Wm. A., Spadina, afterwards of Mashquoteh, who died June 14th 1883.

Baxter, James, father of the late Ald. John Baxter, Spadina avenue.

Beekman, Robert, gentleman, Spadina avenue. Mr. Beekman was at a later date an auctioneer and commission merchant on Yonge street. He afterwards removed to Park lane (University street).

Bunker, Thomas, bricklayer. He afterwards lived on Vanauley street.

Burke, Thomas, bricklayer.

Russell, James, storekeeper.

Clayton, H., labourer.

Galloway, Thomas, labourer.

Harris, —, carpenter.

Leckie, James, clerk Adj.-Gen. office.

Mansfield, Robert, gardener. A daughter-in-law of Robert Mansfield resided on Spadina avenue in 1896.

McBride, Samuel, labourer.

Paddan, James, bricklayer.

Silver, John S.

Simmons, Daniel, bricklayer.

Green, Thomas.

Thoms, William, carpenter.

West, John.

Whitesides, William, teamster.

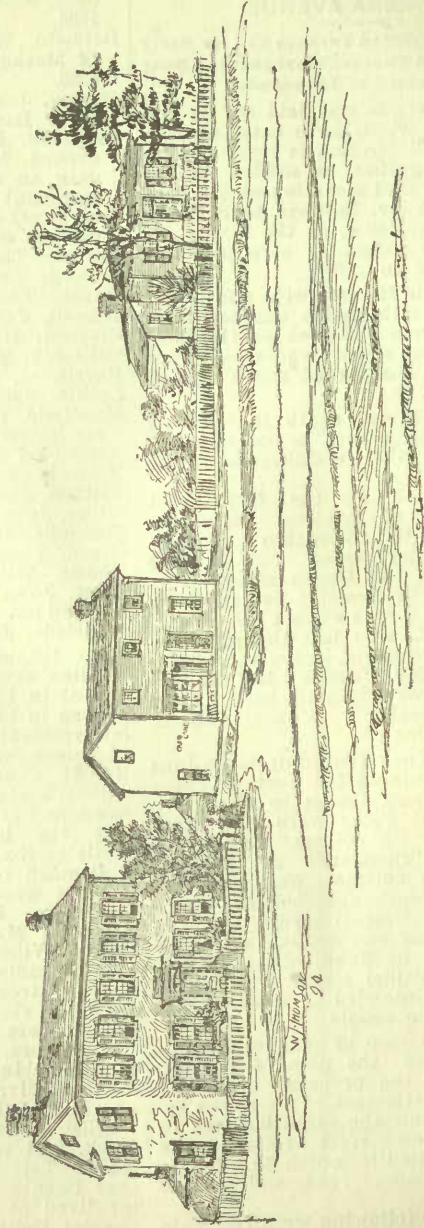

Winslade, John, carpenter.

No. 186, at the south-west corner of Spadina avenue and Oxford street was vacant in 1864, but had been occupied.

Even in 1864 Spadina avenue had but few residents. On the east side, north of Queen, was Maple lane, and then No. 21, a cottage where George Henderson, a clerk in the custom house, resided, and at No. 25, a few doors north, was the house of Mr. John Phipps, while at No. 27 resided Henry Dollyery, a fireman on the Northern Railway.

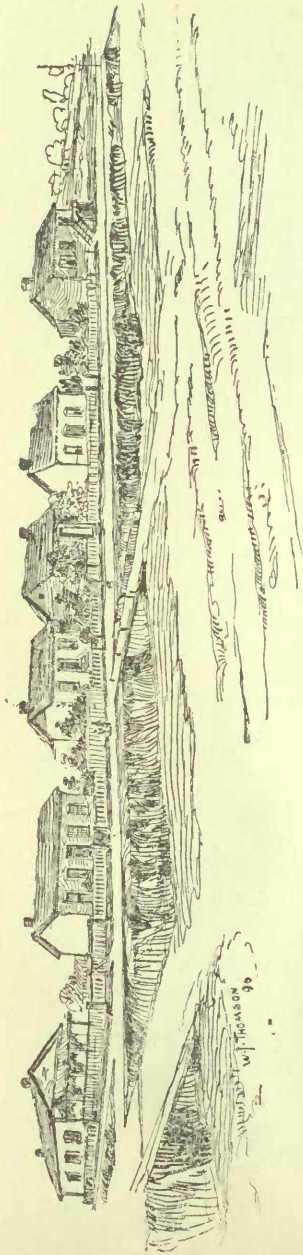

These were the only residents from Queen to Bloor street, except the house of Mr. Justice, afterwards Sir Adam, Wilson, on the north-east corner of Spadina avenue and what is now Russell street. On the west side, commencing at the north-west corner of Queen, were residences No. 2, and furniture store, No. 4, of Hartill & Lockington, cabinet makers. At No. 20 Robert McGillivray, the mail agent, resided. Mr. McGillivray used to take the English mails from Toronto to New York, and return with the British mails. This system was discontinued over twenty years ago. Joseph Blakeley lived at No. 22. At No. 52 Mrs. Charles Holiwell had a ladies' school. Mr. Holiwell was a clerk in the Colonist newspaper office, and afterwards resided at Quebec. At 72 lived Lemuel Hatfield, a commercial traveller, and at No. 76 Alexander Sutherland, a candle maker, resided.

No. 88, the house given in the picture of Spadina avenue, between Grange avenue, formerly High street, and St. Patrick street, is shown on the south-west corner, the house of J. H. Hickman, of the Water-works Department. This house was at one time occupied by the late Sir John Hay, and also by the late Dr. Diamond.

No. 96, on the north-west corner of High street (Grange avenue) was occupied by James Cunningham, and the cottage on the south-west corner of St. Patrick street, No. 98, was that of Joseph T. Rolph, the engraver.

and Spadina avenue, No. 167, was the cottage of H. T. Young, a boat builder. The next house north was No. 180, that of Thomas Rogers, tailor; No. 182, Christopher Drew; No. 184, R. Nash, a railway baggagemaster; and No. 186, the house of John Pike, a plasterer. This brings us to Oxford street.

Between Oxford and College streets in 1864 there was but one house, No. 200, that of Winniett De Grassi, a son of Alfio De Grassi. The land to the south of the house was vacant, and a stretch of green fields occupied all the territory north of College street. The few cottages observable to the north-west, were on the north side of College street, on a line with the present Hope street.

THE RESERVOIR
N.E. COR. ST. PATRICK AND HURON STS.
1864.

On the north-west corner of St. Patrick was No. 108, the residence of the late James Johnston, assistant secretary of the Canadian Institute.

No. 112 was vacant, and at No. 116 Alexander Baird resided. These were the two semi-detached frame houses in the centre of the picture. The next house north was that of Mr. Lawlor, and the corner house that of Mr. Edward Hardman, of the Grand Trunk Railway.

Proceeding north, at the corner of St. Andrew's street, was the residence of George T. Berthon, the artist who painted many of the portraits of the judges in Osgoode Hall.

At the north-west corner of Spadina and Nassau streets was the cottage of John Rolston, builder, while at the corner of Nassau street was the home of John Muldoon.

THE ST. GEORGE RESERVOIR.

An Old Landmark—A Relic of the First Water-Works in Operation in Toronto.

At the north-east corner of St. Patrick and Huron streets, now occupied by Nos. 94 to 96, on the former street stood in 1864 the St. George's reservoir, one of the supply stations of the Furniss Co., that owned the Toronto water works from 1841 to 1851. Then they were sold to a joint stock company, but re-purchased by Mr. Furniss in 1853 and continued until 1858. The supply was for the purpose of serving the western part of the city.

The structure was built in 1843 of red brick surmounted by a metal covered top, ornamented by a diminutive flag staff.

The house to the left was that of John M. Whalen, the keeper. The reservoir was called St. George's from its proximity to St. George's square, now Beverley street.

In the directory of 1864-65 the St. George's reservoir is described as being on the north side of St. Patrick street, west of Beverley street. It was actually on the north-east corner of where now runs Huron and St. Patrick streets. The site is now occupied by private residences. It was one of the supply stations of the Furniss Company, who owned the Toronto water-works from 1841 until 1851, when they were sold to a joint stock company, but re-purchased by Mr. Furniss in 1853, who continued to manage the company from that year until June 10th, 1858, when he disposed of it to the Metropolitan Gas and Water Company. It was supposed to serve the whole of the city, but it was miserably inadequate for the purpose, and authentic statement was made in September, 1858 that "while we," the City of Toronto, "having nearly 100 miles of street opened, there is not now in all more than from 15 to 20 miles of pipe laid, and a great portion of that even is comparatively useless."

The structure was built about 1843 of red brick, surmounted with a flag-staff. A new rising main was constructed in 1853 and a powerful engine added, and further improvements were projected by Mr. Furniss. The reservoir was abandoned about 1855. In 1875 to the front were dwelling houses and shops Nos. 50 to 64 St. Patrick street and the first house on Huron street, No. 64, built on the site, was occupied by James Sheldon, a conductor on the G. T. R.

CHAPTER LXIX.

AN EAST END HOSTELRY.

A Reminder of the Good Old Times—One of the Many Kingston Road Taverns Frequented by the Pioneer Settlers.

There is nothing very remarkable about the two-storey red brick building at 1010 Queen street east, occupied, in this year of grace eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, by John Gibbs, milkman. The only thing unusual in the surroundings of the building is the fact that there is a well of fresh water at the western end of it, so that, if need be, the residents can snap their fingers at the Toronto water-works system. And it is this well that is the sole link between past and present at this particular spot on Queen street east.

Fifty years ago that well and a clumsy, home-made pump, formed part of the equipment of a roadside tavern yard. The tavern itself was a long, low building, always painted a dazzling white, with a cottage roof, and green shutters on its four front windows, which, two on either side, flanked a door, also painted green, in the centre.

A few yards distant from the western end of the tavern was a low red building, used as a driving shed. Between the hotel and shed was the well referred to. At the eastern end of the hotel, and somewhat to the south of it stood two substantial uprights, between which hung a heavy wooden signboard, explaining to the world at large and teamsters in particular, the purposes for which the building was intended. The hostelry stood about fifty feet back from the roadway, then called the Kingston road, and now known as Queen street east. In front of it were three heavy posts, that the aforesaid teamsters might there secure their horses, while they themselves partook of liquid comfort at the bar, which was at the western extremity of the hostelry, in convenient proximity to the pump.

The tavern, and much of the land surrounding it, was owned by a pioneer settler named Charles Watkins, who came out from England early in the thirties. The hotel was built in 1835, or the year previous. Watkins liked farming better than hotel-keeping, and followed the former pursuit, while he rented the tavern. The first landlord was known as Sandy Watson. He kept hotel there for a dozen years, and then James Shaw rented the place. Tavern-keeping in that locality was then in its palmiest days.

There was an almost continuous stream of traffic passing by during the winter, great, comfortable farmers' sleighs bringing in loads of produce to the rising young city; rough, heavy wood sleighs, piled high with sweet-scented pine and rough cordwood; besides vehicles conveying passengers and the mails, for in those days the Kingston road was one of the mail routes. All year round, but particularly during the winter, the many taverns in this locality—Shaw's was the most easterly one at this time—did a roaring trade. Mr. Shaw was very fond of horses, and it was one of the sights of the neighbourhood to see the black hostler, an old escaped slave known as "Doc," trot out Mr. Shaw's team to water every morning.

But in 1856 there came a change. Mr.

J. SHAW'S Hotel near Woodbine, Kingston Road, Toronto, 1849.

Watkins, who had amassed considerable wealth, sold his property and went to England. James Boulton and Thomas Saulters bought the hostelry at a $4,000 figure, paying $1,000 down. James Shaw retired from the business, and the tavern became known as Smith and Cook's. Things did not seem to prosper. The new owners of the property could not pay for it, and it came back on Mr. Watkins' hands. Messrs. Smith and Cook became dissatisfied with the locality, and next year they went into the "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a new hostelry near the present corner of Leslie street and Queen street east. The old tavern passed into the hands of John Jobson, who occupied it for a year or two. It finally became tenanted, and was destroyed by fire in 1861.

The lot, with its blackened ruins, was unoccupied then for three or four years. In 1865 Alderman Russell bought the hotel site and some of the surrounding property for $1,800, and on it he erected the present two-storey brick building.

CHAPTER LXX.

STORY OF THE CAROLINE.

An Account of How the Steamer Caroline Was Sent Over the Falls of Niagara in 1837.

Lieut.-Col. John Mewburn, of London, England, on being interviewed by the London correspondent of The Telegraph, gives an interesting account of his services and experiences in 1837-38, during the rebellion.

Lieut.-Col. John Mewburn, commanding the 6th Lancashire Artillery Volunteers, having completed twenty-five years' service in the volunteer force, is now promoted to the rank of colonel. Col. Mewburn commenced his career in the Cobourg Rifles in 1837, the year of the outbreak of the old Canadian rebellion. In this company, composed of gentlemen of the province, Col. Mewburn assisted in the operations against Navy Island, and was engaged in the cutting out of the piratical steamer Caroline on the Niagara River. In February, 1838, he was gazetted junior ensign in the Queen's Own, one of the regiments raised for active service, which was chiefly officered by retired British officers of the line, who at the time had settled in Canada. Col. Mewburn has testimonial letters from the late Lord Seaton, then Sir John Colborne, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces and Administrator of the Province; Colonel Kingsmill, a Peninsular officer, commanding the Queen's Own; Capt. Purden, also a Peninsular officer, with whom Colonel Mewburn was ensign; and from Sir Allan Macnab, commander on the Niagara frontier. In 1859 Col. Mewburn joined the 5th L. A. V. as a private, when Col. Crosby was ensign. Early in 1860 he assisted in the formation and organization of the 6th (then 15th) L. A. V., and on 1st April the same year was gazetted as lieutenant; 16th June, 1860, captain; 12th November, 1865, major; 24th February, 1875, lieutenant-colonel; and 24th April, 1885, was promoted to the rank of honorary colonel. Col. Mewburn's name stands in the official Army List among the officers of the English army with war services, and with the distinguishing mark of "crossed swords." Col. Mewburn retired April, 1890, with rank and uniform.

On being asked to give a few personal reminiscences of the Canadian rebellion of 1837-8 on the Niagara frontier, chiefly during the operations against Navy Island, Col. Mewburn said:

On my return home to Stamford, near Niagara Falls, where my father, Dr. Mewburn, resided, after an autumn cruise in a large schooner on Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair, I joined a company of militia then passing through our village on its way to join the forces concentrating at Toronto, or to hold Queenston Heights against an attack of the American sympathizers who were mustering in large numbers along the borders of the Niagara river. We were ordered to remain at Queenston, and at once, on arrival after dark, I had my first experience of "Sentry Go" at the foot of Queenston Heights, below the monument of General Brock. News soon reached us of the defeat and depression of the rebels under Mackenzie at Montgomery Hill, a few miles from Toronto. In the course of a day or two the well known rifle company, the Cobourg Rifles, a corps formed almost entirely of young gentlemen of the place from which it took its name, under the command of Captain Warren, a retired line officer, Lieut. Macdonald, formerly of a Highland Regiment, and Ensign Chatterton, a civilian, came up en route to Fort Erie, and this corps, by permission of my captain, I was allowed to join. We marched the same day to Fort Erie, immediately opposite Black Rock, and close to Buffalo, arriving late at night, and being warned that the combined rebel and sympathizer forces would cross the river at this narrow part, remained several hours under arms. The night was so dark that we could see nothing of the gathering on the other side, but distinctly heard the sounds which attend the movements of undisciplined bodies of men. They did not make the attempt to cross, as they were no doubt well informed by their spies of the position being occupied by our company. We were re-inforced in the morning by some companies of militia, and in one of these I recognized my brother Tom, a lad just turned sixteen, standing in the ranks, the commissariat being then not properly organized. I well recollect his look as if he were somewhat suffering from want of a good meal. He served afterwards in a cavalry troop and was noted for pluck and dash. As one of the Collectors of Customs for Ontario Thomas C. Mewburn was afterwards well known for energy and courage. He died in 1892 in his 71st year.

But to return from this digression. Winter had set in early, and snow was already on the ground. We soon ascertained that the enemy had marched down from Buffalo, where they obtained large stores of arms and ammunition, to Port Schlosser, about two and a half miles above the Falls, and had at once proceeded to occupy Navy Island. We were ordered to escort a couple of guns from Fort Erie to Chippewa. A trying march it was, a dark night, and the rain coming down in torrents, so that we struggled through deep melting snow, drenched to the skin, having some little experience of the discomforts of soldiering. Our billet was a roomy Methodist chapel, of which the interior was occupied by moveable seats with backs, so that with judicious arrangement the floor was divided into capital sleeping berths, holding four or five men, and a good supply of straw made us comfortable enough. In the centre was a large stove. The pulpit was utilized for our stores. And as to the table, having some keen whist players amongst us, I leave the use made of it to the imagination of my readers. The rebels lost no time in throwing up works of logs and earth, cutting down small trees and branches, and forming in front of these works a regular cheval de frise, on which field guns stolen from American arsenals were soon mounted. A continued flow of recruits from the rebels' friends set in, chiefly composed of frontier loafers of all kinds and sorts, many of them no doubt ardent enthusiasts in the cause of freedom. On our part we were not idle. Volunteer companies and militia regiments soon reinforced us from all quarters. Early in the autumn all the regular troops had been sent down to Sir John Colborne (Lord Seaton), in the Lower Province, fighting at St. Denis, St. Charles and St. Eustace, to put down the French habitants. A mile or so above Navy Island a flotilla was formed of schooners, scows, boats, etc., brought down from the small harbours on the Canadian side of Lake Erie and the port of Ontario through the Welland canal and down the Chippewa River, which debouches on the Niagara just above the Falls. Guns were soon mounted on the small craft of the flotilla and on the batteries on the river bank facing Navy Island. The enemy obtained a small steamer called the Caroline at Buffalo, and in her conveyed men, guns and stores to Navy Island. Colonel Allan McNab had then assumed command of the forces, and many old line and naval officers had come to the front from their farms and residences scattered through the province. A council of war was held, and Captain (afterwards Admiral) Drew was asked if it were possible to destroy the steamer. An affirmative answer was given. The same night, December 29, 1837, she was cut out from her moorings and sent burning over the falls. As one of the party engaged sixty years ago in this expedition, one probably of very few survivors, it may interest some of my readers if I relate my personal experience in the affair.

That evening, between 9 and 10 o'clock a party of officers came to our quarters at the chapel to ask for volunteers. Being one of the orderlies of the day, I was busy with mess work. The chance of a "cutting out" expedition for a youth anxious to see service was one not to be lost. I volunteered, of course. Cutlasses with becketts were served out to us, and we were marched down to boats lying ready at the bank of the little canal leading to the Niagara River, just above the Rapids. Seven boats, with ten men or a dozen each, formed the party. Captain Drew informed us in a few words of the object of the expedition, strongly enforcing strict silence and obedience. The boats were towed through the canal and then the punters cast off; we began to pull across the swift current of the Niagara between the lower front of Navy Island and the foaming rapids. At one moment the impression prevailed that we were drifting towards the Falls. Captain Drew says in his report that his anxiety for the fate of the expedition was extreme, until he saw that we were holding our own against the stream (running seven or eight knots an hour) and gradually nearing the other side. I was double manning the bow oar, and until we rested under the lee of a spit of land in front of the wharf at which the steamer was moored fore and aft, did not feel at all anxious, as Captain Drew says in his report the roar of the cataract was certainly awful, and during the suspense one felt somewhat "toned down." As we pulled round the point the sentry on the steamer challenged, "Boat, ahoy! Who comes there?" and then bang went his rifle. Two boats stood clear as reserve, two took the starboard quarter gangway, and the boat was in, the starboard bow. Two of our boats I must notice pulled up the river and engaged the attention of the Navy Island upper point batteries. There was what may be called a scrimmage, a few minutes before the surprised defenders were driven on to the wharf, retreating to a warehouse where we understood a large force of recruits for Navy Island, were passing the night. A few of our men were placed on the wharf, while others were engaged in setting the steamer on fire, and cutting her moorings. In the latter duty I was engaged. Her aft moorings were a warp; her bow a chain cable. Capt. Drew makes a singular mistake in saying that the chain cable was made fast to a pillar of the wharf, below the water, which was frozen over, and that in order to get at it, a volunteer, a young Irish gentleman, stood on the ice and broke it with the end of an oar, so as to get at the cable. This little incident is, I don't hesitate to say, purely imagination on the part of the gallant captain's informer. I happened to be one of those who unfastened the chain, which was above the water. The steamer had been moored during the evening, and the frost, though severe, had not time to produce the effect described, but in fact the cable was above, not below the water. I only mention this little circumstance to show how commanders of affairs carried on at night, are dependent upon information of details which have not come under their personal notice. In a very short time all was clear, and we had lowered her into the current, she was enveloped in flames. Singularly enough, instead of at once taking the American channel and going over the American Falls, she stood across the river, until about the centre of the rapids and went over the Canadian or Horse Shoe Falls. No time was lost in re-crossing the river, hugging as close as we dared the lower point of the island, so as to keep a good distance from the dreaded rapids. On landing we received the congratulations of our comrades, and to use a nautical phrase, after "the main brace had been spliced," turned into our straw beds and were given an extra allowance of sleep. The "Cutting out of the Caroline" had a depressing effect on the sympathizers. The Navy Islanders still maintained their position, but did not receive so much support as before from the mainland. In the meantime our little flotilla was rapidly getting organized. A large fore and aft schooner was armed with an 18 pound aft and a small 9 pound midship gun (compared to our present guns, ours of those now far off days were but mere pop-guns), and to this man-of-war schooner the Cobourg Rifles were transferred, to act as gunners, marines and boat's crews. This vessel was commanded by Hon. John Elmslie, and to his "four-oared gig" I, with four others, was appointed. We were engaged carrying despatches to and from headquarters at Chippewa, and, with other boats, in night patrolling the river above the Island, as an attack in force was expected from Buffalo. A day or two after coming on board, the schooner dropped down the river and anchored opposite the upper point log and earthwork battery, and with our 18 pound stern gun plunged shot after shot into it. Their shots ricocheted to the right and left of us, but they never got the range. We were fortunate in having an old "man-of-war's man," who in his early days fought at Copenhagen, as the "layer" of our gun. This was my first service as a marine artillery man. I stood by to man the "bowing tackle." I distinctly remember the excitement; a well directed shot from the battery could have raked us and swept away half the gun detachment, and then no doubt this excitement would have assumed a different aspect. We returned to our anchorage higher up the river, and the following day the Lieut-Governor, Sir Francis Bond Head, came on board. We brought him on shore in the captain's gig; he spoke very cheerily to us, and gave us to understand that the Cobourg Rifles would have the honour of leading the advance in boats in the attack on the Island. The plan was prepared and the boats and scows all told off. The attempt was to be made before daylight next morning, and I can never forget that night of waiting for the signal to look out for the boats coming out to take off the men, many of the thoughtful fellows amongst us fully realizing the difficulties of landing and the certainty of severe loss of life in the event of a stubborn resistance. About midnight the captain received a despatch from Col. McNabb that on the strong recommendation of the Lieutenant-Governor a council of war had just decided to cancel the order for the attack, on account of the great loss of life which it would involve, and that the operations would be confined to a bombardment of the earth works facing the Canadian shore, and cutting off their supplies from the opposite or American shore. Great disappointment was expressed by all our men, including even those who had been anything but sanguine as to the result of the attempt. With one little incident I will take leave of my Navy Island experience. The gig with three officers and the coxswain in the stern sheets was on its way from the schooner to headquarters. We had to run the gauntlet of the batteries facing our store, the distance between the island and the bank being about 500 yards. We expected to pass these batteries with the strong current at a speed which would render it very unlikely they would have a chance of hitting us. It was, however, blowing a stiffish gale against the current, so that we did not start down stream so rapidly as we expected. The enemy opened fire, shot after shot flying over the boat as we passed the line of batteries. I pulled the oar next to the stroke; one shot came between us, close to the peak of my cap—a shade nearer and I should certainly not now be writing these reminiscences. Ensign Chatterton was one of the officers in the boat; if still alive he well remembers the incident, for some five-and-twenty or thirty years afterwards he called on me in Liverpool and spoke about it, as we talked over our early days before Navy Island. We had many stirring events in the stream on board the schooner—the one in which I made my cruise on Lake Erie before joining the Cobourg Rifles—and on shore patrolling or escorting guns and doing work of various descriptions, but must now bring this personal narrative to a close. The island was vacated and on the Cobourgs being disbanded I was gazetted as junior ensign in the Queen's Own Incorporated Militia Regiment, raised in active service and commanded by Col. Kingsmill, formerly 25th Regiment, an old Peninsular officer. Capt. Purdon, who fought at Albuera, in Spain, commanded my company. The rank and file of the regiment were splendid men, chiefly from the Glengarry district. Captain Moody, who was wounded and fell in the ditch at the attack on Bergen of Zoon in 1813, was one of our officers; long ere this he must have joined the great majority. Our field officers and all the captains of companies were men who had seen service either in Europe or in Canada during the war of 1812-13-14. The junior commissions were given to young gentlemen of the province. My old friend Finlaison, who was with me in the Cobourg Rifles and at the cutting out of the Caroline, was also with me in the Queen's Own. He was alive a few years ago, and is, I hope, still in the land of the living.

CHAPTER LXXI.

A VIEW IN THE DAYS OF 1836.

North Side of King St. from the N.E. Corner of Toronto St. to St. James Cathedral.

This landmark is taken about 1836, and represents the north side of King street, from the north-east corner of Yonge and King, to the north-east corner of King and Church streets, where stands St. James' Cathedral. The building to the left of the picture at the corner of Toronto street, is the jail, which stood in off the King street line about sixty feet, but about 40 feet from the street line of Toronto street. The front of this building was exposed for the first time in seventy years—for it was built in 1826—when the Rice, Lewis building, on the corner of Toronto and King streets, was torn down to make way for the red brick structure now on that site. A portion of the front showing the windows of the building, may yet be seen from the rear of Walton's barber shop, a few doors east of the corner. The scaffold upon which the patriots, Lount and Matthews suffered, was erected in the centre of the ground in front of the building. The building in the rear centre, with a cupola, was the firehall on Church street. It stood directly south of old St. Andrew's church. The building to the right, similar in architecture to the jail, was the Court House. There were apparently two entrances to this building, one from Church street, and the other from King street. The picture shows a King street entrance, but the entrance since 1841—60 has been on Church street. The massive building with the short tower was St. James' Cathedral, which was burned in 1839. The original drawing of this picture was made by a Mr. Young, a Toronto architect of considerable repute.

THE OLD FORT, TORONTO, 1850.

This view of the old Fort of Toronto was issued by Hugh Scobie in 1850. It was drawn by J. Passmore, and is taken from Front street, a little west of the corner of Portland street. The Queen's wharf is shown to the left, the west block in the centre, and the large barrack building to the north-west of the parade ground.

CHAPTER LXXII.

PARLIAMENT HOUSES SINCE 1792.

The Meeting Places of the Parliament of Upper Canada at Niagara, 1792-5 — At York, 1796-1813 and 1818-24, 1825-28.

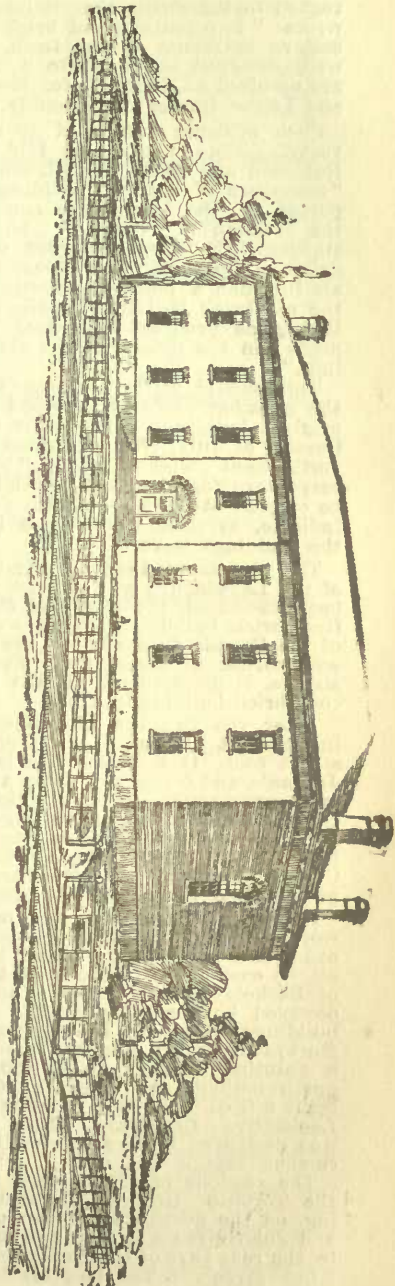

The first Legislature or Parliament of Upper Canada met on the 17th September, 1792, at Niagara. There is no certainty as to the building in which this body of men assembled, but it was probably in Navy Hall, the residence of Governor Simcoe. Some think that it met in the Freemason's Hall, a building at the east end of the town near the river, and this is not improbable. The Freemason's Hall was convenient to Navy Hall, and it contained two rooms of reasonable size for such purposes. The lower room was for public meetings, such as those of the Agricultural Society, and the upper rooms were occupied by the Craft of Masons. This was from 1792-1796.

In June of 1796 the Legislature met in York. The meeting place was in the Parliament Buildings, which stood on the south side of Palace (Front) street, between the street and the bay, and on the site of the old jail, now the Toronto gas works. These buildings were destroyed by fire on the 27th April, 1813.

It is stated in Dr. Scadding's book on "Toronto of Old" that the first Houses of the Legislature were "humble but commodious structures of wood, built before the close of the eighteenth century." In Vol. I., page 352 of "The Landmarks of Toronto" this statement is repeated, and an extract from an old guide book is given, which states that these buildings "were of wood." An examination of documentary evidence, however, proves that the buildings were of brick and not of wood.

We have the exact location of these buildings and a small drawing of the front, looking towards the west, in a picture of the east end of the harbour and town, made in 1803 by an English officer. The buildings were on the site of the present gas works, and the elevation of the buildings as given in modern reproductions is accurate, but the description is inaccurate, in that the buildings were not of wood, but of brick. Heriot, in his "Travels in Canada in 1806," published in 1807, states that he visited "York, or Toronto, the seat of Government in Upper Canada." He then describes Gibraltar Point, now Hanlan's Point, and refers to the Garrison and the house in which the Lieutenant-Governor lived. With regard to the Parliament Buildings he wrote: "Two buildings of brick at the eastern extremity of the town, which were designed as wings to a centre, are occupied as chambers for the Upper and Lower Houses of Assembly."

Such evidence admits of no controversy. Then, as late as 1819, Peter Robinson and Grant Powell, who were "managers of public buildings," reported to the Legislature concerning the erection of two new buildings, stating that "they proceeded without delay to close with the lowest proposals for such a building, together with the old brick buildings repaired," and that some progress had already been made "in the repairs of the old buildings."

This should settle all doubts as to the question of brick or wood in the original buildings. The Upper Canada Gazette of July, 1794, contained an advertisement which read: "Wanted, carpenters for the public buildings to be erected at York," but this does not indicate, as some would have it, that the buildings were of wood.

The statement that the first home of the Legislature was of brick having been sustained, the assertion that the first brick building in York was that of the Canada Company, on the north-east corner of King and Frederick streets, is disposed of. It was the second brick building in York.

After the fire the Legislature met in 1814, at Jordan's Hotel on King street east. One session was held in Jordan's, and for several years a rough-cast, commodious cottage building on the north-east corner of Wellington and York streets, served as a legislative home. It was the residence of the Hon. George Markland, and afterwards that of the late Chief Justice Draper.

In 1818, new buildings, also of brick, were erected, immediately adjoining the exact site of those destroyed in 1813, at the east end of the city at the foot of Berkeley street. The site is now occupied by the Gas works. These buildings were two in number, two storeys in height, and are showing in a painting of York, in 1819-20. The north building was used for Government offices, the south building as the Legislative Chambers. This latter was destroyed by fire on the 20th December, 1824.

The sessions of 1825-8 were held in the Toronto General Hospital building, on the north-west corner of King and John streets, a site now occupied by the rear part of the Arlington hotel, King street. The hospital building was required for its original purpose in 1823, and the Court-house on Church street, near the north-west corner of King and Church streets, was occupied in 1829-32.

In 1832-41 the buildings on Front street, between John and Peter streets, were occupied by the Legislature. From 1841 to 1849 the buildings were utilized for university purposes; in 1848-9 as an asylum for the insane, and in 1849-51 the House was again re-opened for the sessions of Parliament for the united provinces. From 1856-59 the sessions of the United Parliament were held in the building, and in 1861-66 it was used as a military barracks, and from 1867-92 by the Legislature of Ontario, when removal was made to the buildings in the Queen's Park.

34a in the letter press shows the window that was said to have been entered about 1858, when the agency was burglarized.

The engraving given represents the Hospital buildings, in which the sessions of the Legislature from 1825-28 were held. The Legislature met in the north-east corner of the ground floor (marked No. 10 in the plan), with No. 9 as an ante-room.

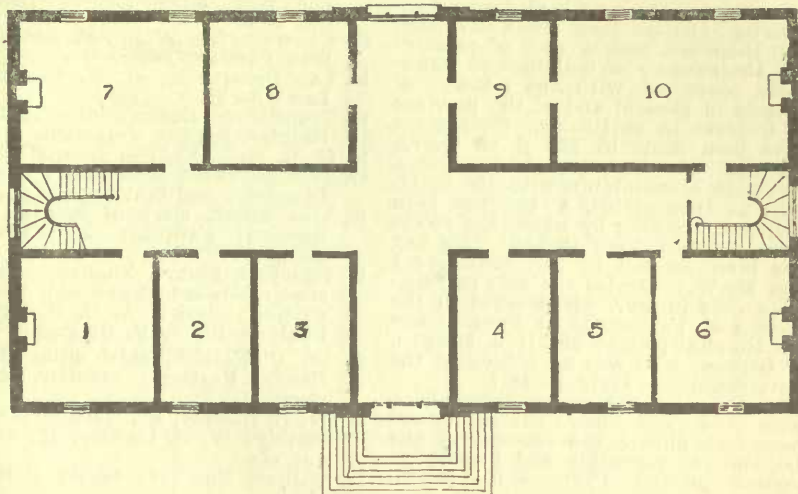

In 1856-59 the Hospital building was occupied by Government departments, and the floor plans given show the occupants of the various rooms during the time of the Macdonald-Cartier regime.

The following is the key to the ground floor plan:—

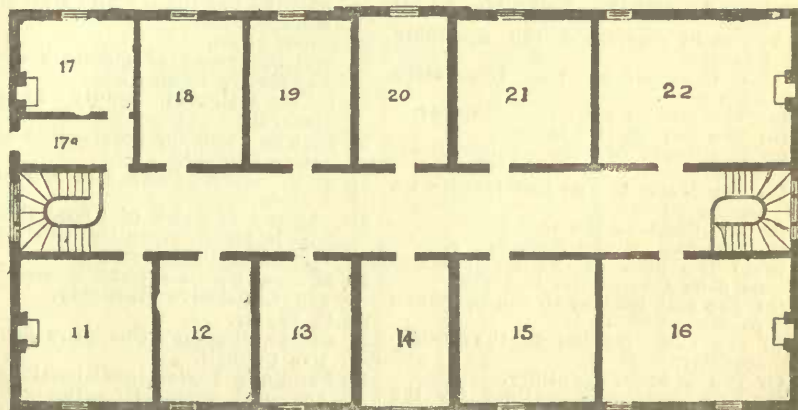

- 1—Lunch room for the Privy Council.
- 2—A. R. Roche, Provincial Secretary's office.
- 3—Morrell Higgins, Clerk Ex. Council; Henry Alexander.
- 4—Solicitor-General East; Dunbar Ross; Sir John Rose.

The old houses on Front street have often been reproduced in all forms of engraving, but the floor plans have not, and therefore, with a view of preserving the memory of buildings so intimately connected with the history of Canada in general and of the province of Ontario in particular, floor plans have been made by Mr. S. G. Curry, architect, of Toronto, and, having a thorough acquaintance with the buildings at that period, a key has been prepared, showing by whom the rooms were occupied from 1856-59. This key has been verified by Mr. McGillivray and Mr. W. C. Bowles, the only two officials alive in 1897, who worked in the Houses of Parliament at Toronto and the Hospital plan by Mr. H. J. Morgan, of Ottawa, who was an officer of the Government as early as 1857.

The ground and upper floor plans, with the key shows the rooms and occupants during the sessions of the Legislative Assembly and Legislative Council of the Province of Canada, 1856-59.

The following is the key to the ground floor plan of the Parliament Buildings:—

CHAPTER LXXIII.

THE ST. LAWRENCE HALL.

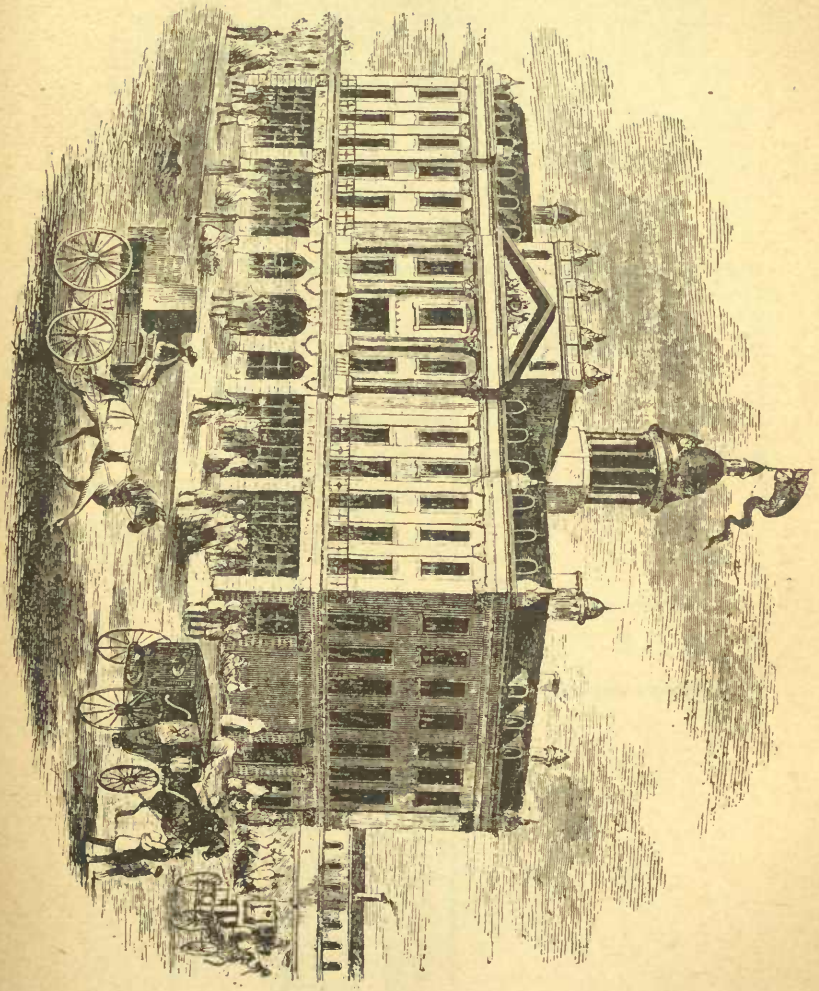

A City Building that has been the Scene of Notable Events—Something of Those who have sung and Spoken in the Old Hall.

The St. Lawrence Hall was built in 1850 and 1851, after the great fire of April 7th, 1849, which had destroyed the north side of King street, from the Cathedral of St. James east to Nelson (Jarvis) street. The old Town Hall, or Market House, which was built of red brick, and which stood on this site, fronting the Market, was also partially destroyed by fire in 1849.

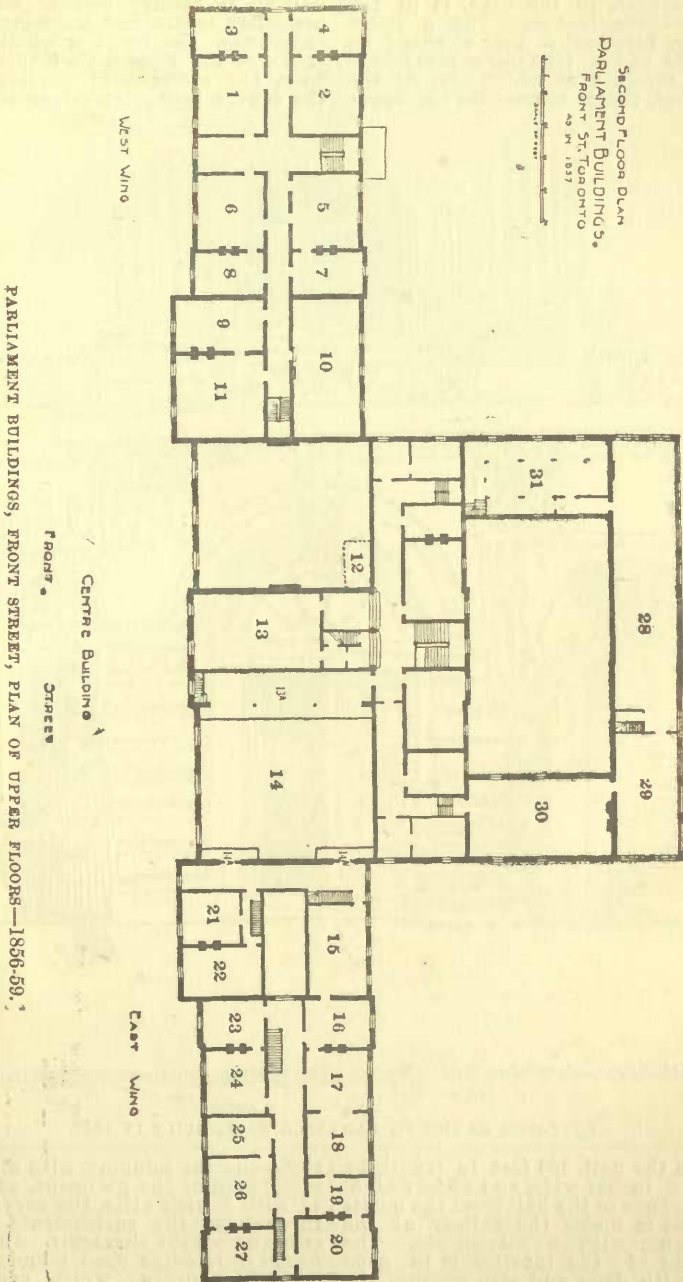

The new buildings were erected by the corporation and by private individuals. The centre building is the property of the corporation, while the two wings to the east and west of the Arcade and hall entrance are private property.

A description of this building, published in 1851, says:

"This magnificent building was erected in 1850 to meet the pressing exigencies of the citizens. The hall is appropriated for meetings and public exhibitions, and is capable of accommodating a thousand persons. The principal object of the talented designer of this edifice, W. Thomas, Esq., was to ensure its complete usefulness as well as ornamentality, for, while the hall is used for public purposes, in its rear runs the St. Lawrence Market, a range of arcade 200 feet in length by 39 feet in breadth, with neat stores on each side, at the end of which is an other frontage, south, consisting of general stores. The King street frontage of the St. Lawrence Hall is 140 feet in extent. The entrance to St. Lawrence Market, in the rear, is in the centre of the frontage, by a noble archway, forming a line of shops on each side and a transverse piazza 100 feet in depth, over which are, on the first floor, public rooms. On the upper ceiling is boldly covered with rich pannelled centre and emblematical enrichments. The front is wholly of cut stone, of the Roman Corinthian order, from the example of Jupiter Stator; the centre being tetrastyle portico of story is the hall, 100 feet in length by 38 feet 6 inches wide, and 34 feet high; the entrance to the hall from the public staircase is under the gallery at the north end, with a saloon, etc. The finishing of the interior is in good style, with dado and rich cornice; the three-quarter columns, with sculptured tympanum of the pediment, surmounted with a rich attic; the carved work throughout the enrichments is of a rich and varied character. The cupola forms a circular open temple of the Corinthian order, which contains a fine-toned large alarm bell, weighing 2,130 pounds. The aggregate cost of these buildings was a trifling sum above £7,000."

No public ceremony took place when the St. Lawrence Hall was completed and ready for use. The first time it was occupied was when George Thompson, M.P., of England, lectured therein on April 1st, 1851, taking as his subject "Slavery;" the Rev. Dr. Willis presided. He lectured again in the same place on April 4th and 5th, on India.

Frederick Douglas, the noted coloured abolitionist, lectured on the same subject, referring more particularly to American slavery, on the evenings of April 2nd and 3rd, to moderately sized audiences. Mr. Thompson delivered the final lecture on the subject on April 9th.

The Mechanics' Institute held its annual soiree at the hall on Friday, April 18th. Professor Croft presided over a large gathering.

On April 23rd the St. George's Society's ball took place and proved most successful, both as a social event and in a pecuniary point of view.

Queen's birthday of 1851 was celebrated by a concert given by Mr. Principal Barron and some of the pupils from Upper Canada College, on the evening of May 23rd, in St. Lawrence Hall. A dance followed the concert, and as the clock struck twelve and May 24th broke, a curtain at the north end of the hall was drawn on one side displaying a transparency of "God Save the Queen," over it an illuminated crown and the letter V. R. At the same moment Mr. Barron led off with the first words of the national anthem, which was heartily joined in by the whole of the company.

Under the patronage of the Ladies' Anti-Slavery Society a concert took place in the hall on June 6th, in aid of the destitute fugitives from slavery who had taken refuge in this country.

The Anti-Clergy Reserve Association called a public meeting for July 8th, at which the Hon. Adam Ferguson presided. The object of the gathering was to denounce the Reserves and to demand their unconditional withdrawal. When the meeting was called to order by the chairman it was found that the people were by no means unanimous and that there were quite as many supporters of the Reserves present as there were opponents. The result was that an amendment to the first resolution, which called for the abolition of the Reserves, was carried, and the meeting broke up in great confusion.

On July 15th and 16th the hall was engaged by the Rev. Morris J. Raphael, to deliver therein two lectures on the "Poetry of the Old Testament." These lectures only attracted very moderate audiences.

Mademoiselle Teresa Parodi, assisted by Mademoiselle Amalia Patti, gave a concert in the hall on July 17th, of the merits of which the papers of the period spoke favourably.

The Anti-Clergy Reserve Association held another meeting on July 23rd, which caused even greater tumult than the first. No one was allowed to speak at this meeting excepting in favour of the object for which it had been called, consequently, inside the hall it was orderly enough. Outside, though, the case was different. There the opponents gathered in force, held a counter demonstration, and eventually became involved in a quarrel and blows with those who were leaving the hall. The Riot Act was read and the troops sent for, but by the time they arrived all was quiet. No one was seriously injured and the whole affair was soon forgotten.

The Aztec Lilliputians, Maxima and Bartola were on exhibition at the hall from August 4th to 9th, and were visited by large numbers of people.

A celebrated ball was held on the night of Wednesday, October 15th, 1851, in honour of the cutting by her Excellency the Countess of Elgin, wife of the Governor-General, of the first sod on the Northern Railway, when guests to the number of about four hundred were present, including the Governor-General, Honorables F. Hincks and J. Ross.

Just a week later, on Tuesday, October 21st, Jenny Lind, "the Swedish nightingale," gave the first of her two concerts in Toronto to a crowded assemblage, "numbering," to quote a Toronto paper of the time, "perhaps about a thousand." If there were so many present it is rather difficult to see where they were accommodated, even with the additional room afforded by the gallery. This, though, is certain, that every possible inch of space was made available, and that scores of people were disappointed in obtaining tickets, none of which were disposed of for less than three dollars each. The concert was repeated on October 22nd.

Tuesday, December 27th, 1851, also saw a large gathering in the hall, about three hundred in all, when a service of plate was presented to Mr. Alderman R. Beard by the corporation and fire companies of the city, in token of their appreciation of his long, arduous and gratuitous services as chief engineer of the fire department.

A promenade concert took place on Thursday, January 8th, 1852, which at the time caused very considerable comment, on account of its object, which was the aid of coloured fugitives from slavery in the United States. The president of the gathering was Mrs. Arnold, and the secretaries Mrs. Henning and the well-known Miss Macaulay. "Coffee and other refreshments were served from 7 to 8 o'clock in the supper room, and during this time the splendid band of the 71st Regiment played in the hall." So related one of the Toronto papers, adding that "the Rev. S. R. Ward (coloured) delivered during the evening an address suitable to the occasion."

The festival of the Toronto and St. Lawrence Division Sons of Temperance was held on January 29th, 1852, when great numbers of people interested in teetotalism were there.

On Monday, February 23rd, 1852, a public dinner was given in the St. Lawrence Hall by the Reformers of the city of Toronto, in honour of Hon. Malcolm Cameron. Dr. Workman (he died as recently as 1895) occupied the chair, and among those present were James Leslie, of the Examiner newspaper; Captain Hon. Aemilus Irving, Ezekiel F. Whitmore, Thomas G. Ridout, J. P. De La Haye, Charles Lindsey and about 150 others. This gathering was one of very great importance, or at least, it was so considered at the time. Its proceedings occupy no less than eight columns of newspaper space.

Rev. Dr. Willis presided over the annual meeting of the Anti-Slavery Society, held in the hall on the afternoon of March 24th, 1852.

On March 25th a public meeting, at which the Mayor presided, was held, to protest against the English fiscal policy of Free Trade. Among the speakers were Honorable William Cayley, Messrs. George Percival Ridout, M.P. P., Ogle R. Gowan, and William Henry Boulton, of the Grange. It was not a unanimous gathering by any means, and there were some warm verbal combats between the opposing parties.

The Mechanics' Institute held its annual soiree in the hall on April 12th. The band of the 71st Regiment was present, and there was an excellent gathering.

The St. George's Society held a ball in the hall on April 23rd, 1852, which was very largely attended.

The celebrated cantatrice Catherine Hayes gave two most successful concerts in the hall on May 24th and 26th. She was assisted by the noted violinist, Herr Griebel; by Menzies, the well known baritone; by Kyle, the flautist, and Lavenu on the piano.

The Germania Musical Society, assisted by Alfred Jaell, the pianist, gave a concert on June 25th, which, despite the hot weather then prevailing, had many attendants.

An excellent panoramic display, that of P. T. Barnum's "Crystal Palace illustrated," occupied the hall from August 10th to 28th, 1852. Large crowds of persons attended every day, and these were composed quite as much from country residents as from Toronto people.

September 17th was the date when the hall was well filled, under the presidency of Hon. J. H. Price, to demand that a more stringent Sabbath observance statute should be passed.

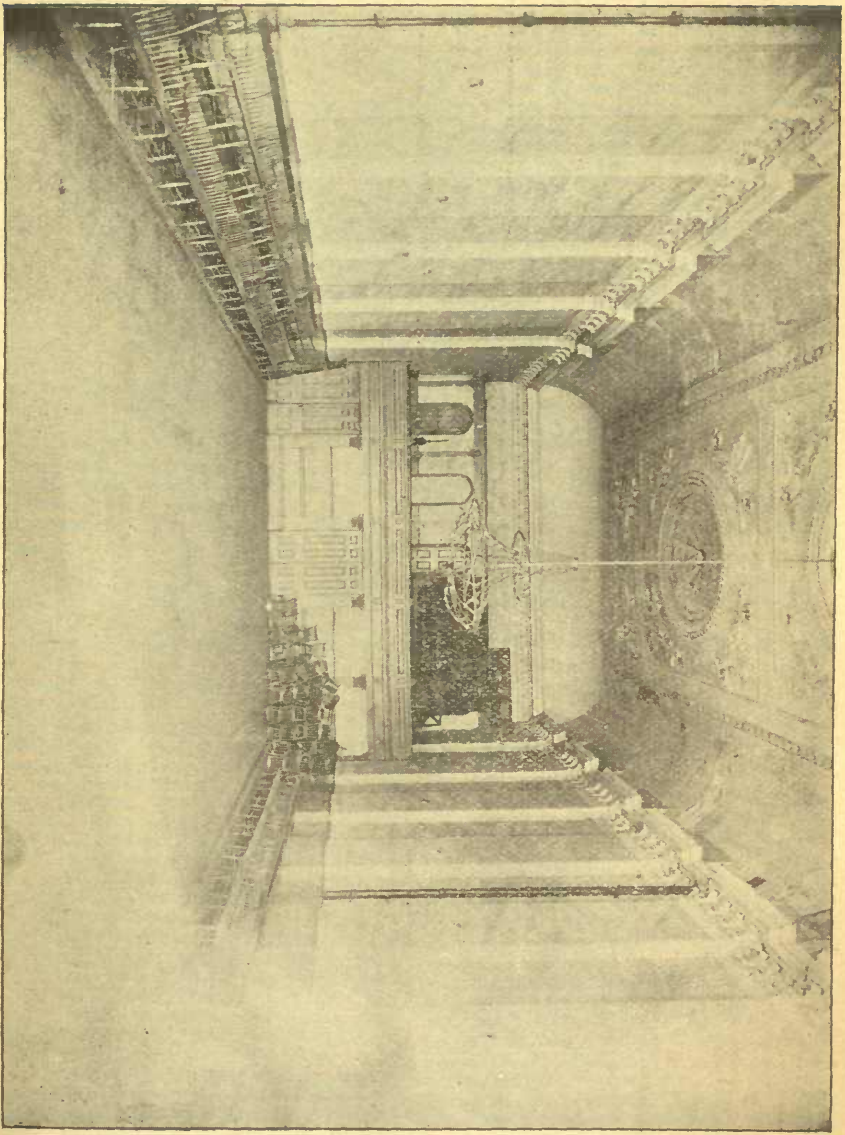

What was described as a "Scottish Musical Entertainment," under the direction of Mr. Clirehugh, was held in the hall on the evening of October 18th. It proved a decided success. Two days later, on October 20th, a Masonic ball, under the patronage of the various city lodges, was also held in the same place, and was very largely attended.

A noteworthy meeting was also held in one of the rooms adjoining the hall on October 20th. It had been intended to hold it in the hall, but owing to the fact of the ball it was held in an adjoining apartment. This meeting, presided over by the Mayor, was for the purpose of raising funds for a memorial in Toronto to the memory of the Duke of Wellington then recently deceased. A resolution of condolence with her Majesty in the nation's loss was passed, and it was decided to do—something. Nothing was ever done.

Another anti-slavery meeting took place in the hall on December 16th, Dr. Willis again presiding.

The pupils of Upper Canada College, under the direction of the late Mr. F. W. Barron, M.A., the then principal, gave a most successful concert on the evening of December 22nd, 1852.

The first entertainment of the season in 1853 was a concert given by the Toronto Vocal Music Society, on January 10th, followed on January 26th by a soiree in aid of the funds of the Sunday schools in connection with the Rev. Robert Irvine's congregation. This body of Presbyterians met on George street, in a building bought from the Unitarians. They afterwards removed to their present site, corner Queen and Mutual streets.

A public festival in connection with the Early Closing Association, under the patronage of the merchants of Toronto, was held in the hall on Tuesday evening, January 11th, 1853, the Mayor in the chair, which was addressed by Messrs. T. J. Robertson, of the Normal School; Geo. Brown, M.P.P.; Thomas Clarkson, George Percival Ridout, M.P.P., and F. W. Cumberland. After the speechmaking was over, the proceedings concluded with supper and a dance, both of which appear to have been very greatly appreciated.

A subscription concert, organized by Mr. R. G. Paige, which proved a very great success, was held in the hall on January 27th.

A series of lectures by Dr. Hy. Goadby on "Insects, Their Structure and Functions," were commenced in the St. Lawrence Hall on February 10th and continued on each Tuesday and Thursday evening succeeding that date for two weeks following. There was an additional lecture also given on Wednesday, March 16th.

A second subscription concert, also got up by Mr. R. G. Paige, was held upon March 10th, and, like the one on January 27th, was very successful.

The Toronto Anti-Slavery Society held an enthusiastic meeting in the hall on Wednesday, March 23, 1853, the Rev. Dr. Willis being in the chair. "The capacious room was filled to overflowing, and the deepest interest appeared to be felt in the important cause for which the society was established." Such was the report which appeared in the daily papers of the time.

A ball took place in the hall on April 8th. It was organized by Mr. Macindoe Robertson, in connection with a series of small dances held in private houses.

On April 23rd the St. George's Society's ball took place as usual, and was also, as usual, very well attended.

Mr. Paige's third subscription concert was held upon April 21st, and a promenade concert in aid of the coloured refugees from slavery who had taken refuge in this province, followed it, on April 29th.

A very successful concert, known as "The Scottish Concert," took place on May 17th, and was very largely attended. Mr. and Miss Fraser were the principal executants, and the papers of the time speak very highly of the manner in which the programme was executed.

The celebration of her Majesty's birthday took place on May 24th, by a festival ball given under the patronage of the national societies, namely, those of St. George, St. Patrick and St. Andrew. It proved most successful, and daylight was streaming in at the windows before the last of the company departed.

Alfred Jaell gave two concerts in the hall on July 5th and 7th, and, despite the season and the many other attractions, there were fairly good audiences.

Madame / Bishop gave a concert, followed by a costume ball, on August 31st. The entertainment was exceptionally popular—so much so that it was repeated on October 11th.

The British and Foreign Bible Society held its jubilee meeting, preceded by a public breakfast, on October 12th. Among those present were the Rev. H. J. Grasett, Dr. Barclay, the Rev. Alex. Sanson, Dr. Willis, Dr. Jennings, E. W. Thomson, and many others.

A panorama of Uncle Tom's Cabin was exhibited in the hall on October 12th, 13th and 14th, Mr. Malone Raymond being the lecturer.

Another panorama, called "An Hour in Ireland and Other Lands," was exhibited on October 25th and November 3rd; while a third, of "The Upper Mississippi River," was opened on October 31st, and, with the exception of November 3rd, continued on exhibition until November 20th.

Madame Julien and Prof. J. K. Goodall gave two most successful concerts on November 21st and 22nd.

Ole Bull, assisted by Madame Adelina Patti and Maurice Strakosch, gave his farewell concert in Toronto on November 23rd, when one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the hall were present.

St. Andrew's Society celebrated St. Andrew's day by giving a ball in the hall on November 30th. There was a large company, who thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The annual ball of No. 5 Company, Toronto Fire Brigade, "Deluge," took place on December 20th, and proved a most enjoyable affair.

A series of three lectures by Mr. A. O'Leary took place on December 21st, 24th and 29th. They were on the "Education of Children, Both Physically and Mentally."

A bazaar and soiree for the purpose of raising funds to erect a church at the corner of Mutual and Queen streets, under the care of the Rev. Robert Irvine, was held on December 27th and 28th. It was fairly successful.

Madame Sontag gave a most successful concert on January 2nd, 1854, which was followed on January 6th by another concert, organized by Mr. Geo. F. Hayter, of Toronto, assisted by local amateurs and professionals.

A panorama of Uncle Tom's Cabin was exhibited in the hall and drew large audiences from January 18th until the 22nd.

On January 20th a promenade concert in aid of the destitute coloured fugitives from slavery took place in the hall, and a fair sum was raised in aid of the work.

The A. F. & A. M. of Toronto gave a ball in the hall on February 2nd, which was very largely attended, not only by members of the craft and ladies accompanying them, but by great numbers of others.

Mr. Robertson's second assembly took place on February 10th. It was altogether a private affair.

A series of subscription concerts was inaugurated on February 15th and continued, the second on February 27th, the third on March 21st. They were under the management of Mr. J. D. Humphries, Herr Griebel and G. F. Hayter. The vocalists were Miss Paige, Mr. R. G. Paige, Mr. Jules Hecht and Mr. J. D. Atkins. They proved a great success to all concerned from first to last.

A complimentary breakfast to the Rev. Mr. Duff, a well-known missionary, was held on April 12th, Mr. John Arnold in the chair.

An exhibition of Ceramic Art took place in the hall on April 18th, 19th and 20th.

G. W. Stone gave a course of lectures on "Electro-Biology" from May 15th to the 20th. These lectures took place in the afternoon.

Herr Griebel, assisted by the Philharmonic Society, gave a violin recital on May 18th, which attracted a very large audience.

Brewer's grand mirror panorama was exhibited in the hall on May 25th, 26th and 27th, and the papers of the time say that it was fairly well attended.

Davidson's panorama of the St. Lawrence and the Lakes was on exhibition from June 3rd until the 20th, and during the whole time there was a constant succession of visitors. Mr. Davidson afterwards removed to Hamilton.

Another anti-slavery bazaar, in aid of Frederick Douglass' paper, the Abolitionist, was held on June 22nd.

The Peake family, vocalists and bell-ringers, gave a very pleasing exhibition of their skill on July 10th, 11th and 12th.

Bisley's views of the River Thames occupied the hall from August 14th until September 1st, without intermission.

Madame Rosa Devries, assisted by Martin Lazare, gave her farewell concert on October 5th.

The Oddfellows' soiree was held on October 11th. There was a very large company.

The Madden family brass band, composed entirely of females, gave a musical entertainment on October 16th and 17th, which was fairly well attended.

A meeting of great interest to the citizens took place on Monday, November 13th, 1854, the Mayor, Mr. G. W. Allan, being in the chair, the object being "to adopt means to set a limit to our enormous taxation, and especially in view of the Esplanade expenditure."

Mr. Donovan lectured on Phrenology on November 1st, and he was followed by the celebrated traveller and poet Bayard Taylor, on November 16th, 17th and 18th, on Japan and the Japanese, the Arabs and India.

Madame Frances Maria gave a concert, which was very largely attended, on November 27th and 28th. She was assisted by her father and Professor Hickok.

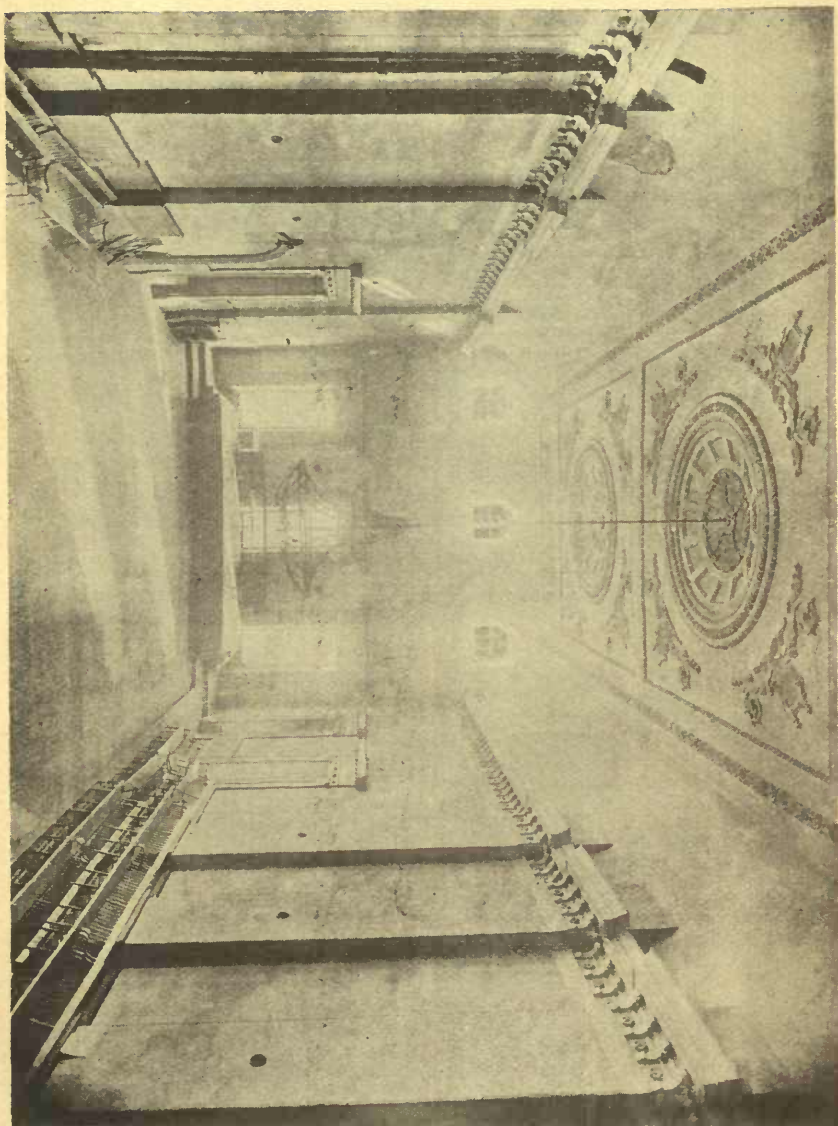

The first anniversary soiree of the Young Men's Christian Association took place in the hall on December 12th.

A lecture on "The Phrenology of Noted Criminals," by Mr. Donovan, was given on December 12th, followed by a series of lectures on "Science and Art," by Prof. Owen, on December 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st and 23rd, and one on "Popular Delusions," by Dr. Hy. Goadby, on December 27th.

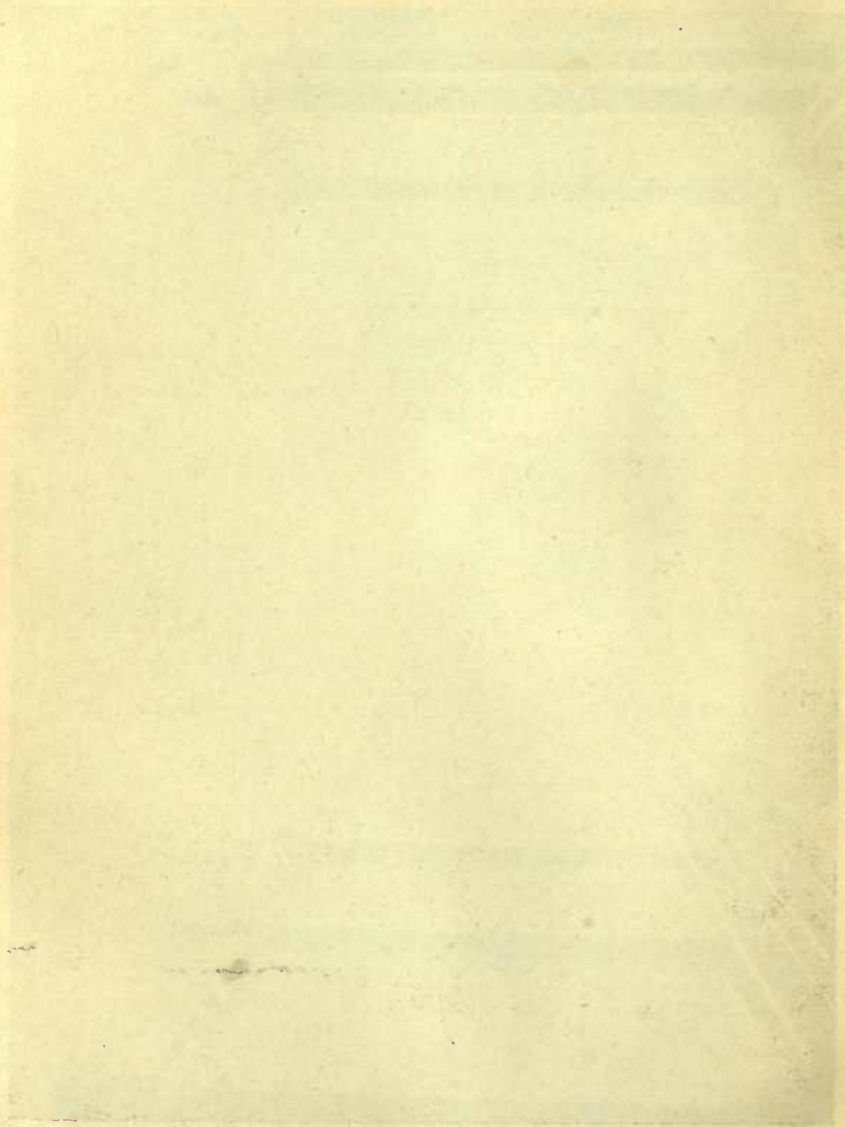

Macallister, the great magician, gave an entertainment of conjuring and sleight of hand on the evenings of December 26th, 29th and 30th. It being the holiday season, there were large audiences, principally of young people.

The Toronto Philharmonic Society gave a most successful concert on the evening of December 28th, which drew together an exceedingly good audience.

A panorama of the Crimean war was on exhibition in the hall from January 1st to 6th, 1855, which, as was to be expected, drew very large audiences The excitement regarding the eastern campaign was then at its height, and everything connected with the war created interest.

On January 8th, 1855, St. Lawrence Hall was crowded to the utmost of its capacity, the occasion being a meeting for the purpose of raising funds in aid of the widows and orphans of those killed during the Eastern war, and assisting those who had been wounded and disabled. The chairman was the Honourable John Hillyard Cameron. He was supported by the following well known public men: The Bishop of Toronto, Revs. Dr. Willis, Burns and Lillie, Rev. J. Jennings, Prof. Wilson, Hon. H. J. Boulton and J. Gordon, Judges McLean and Draper, James Shaw, John McMurrich, G. W. Allan, Alex. Macdonald, John Watson, A. H. Armour, J. Arnold, Walter Macfarlane, Samuel Spreull, James Leask, Wm. McFie, Hugh Miller, John Shaw, John Laidlaw, G. A. Pyper, Alex. Macpherson, John Ewart, Wm. M. Gorrie, John Bell, Oliver Mowat and Dr. Telfer. The speakers were: The Bishop of Toronto, John Shaw, Dr. Burns, Alex. Macdonald, Dr. Willis, Prof. Wilson, Judge Draper, Judge McLean, Dr. Lillie and G. W. Allan. It is nearly forty-three years now (1897) since this meeting took place, and of all those whose names are given only Mr. G. W. Allan, Hugh Miller, John Laidlaw and Sir Oliver Mowat now survive.

Herr Griebel, the famous violinist, gave a subscription concert on January 9th.

On the 10th of January the Philharmonic Society held a meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration a proposal made to give a concert for the benefit of the patriotic fund.

Burton's panorama of the Eastern war, which had already been exhibited on the 1st and 6th of the month, was again on exhibition from the 12th to the 16th.

Herr Griebel's second concert took place on January 25th, and it was followed on January 30th by a soiree of the Orange societies, the proceeds of which went to the widows and orphans of deceased Orangemen.

On January 31st, a concert given by the Stanley minstrels proved a great success. Probably this was owing to the fact that the proceeds were devoted to the Patriotic fund.

Herr Griebel gave his third concert on February 8th, and, like the two preceding ones, it was very successful.

On February 14th the Masonic ball, the proceeds of which went to the Toronto charities, took place in St. Lawrence Hall. It was most successful in every point, and was very largely attended.

The Stanley minstrels gave a concert for the charitable institutions of the city on February 22nd.

The Toronto Philharmonic Society's concert, the proceeds of which were devoted to the Patriotic fund, was held on February 27th. The Rev. John McCaul, LL.D., presided; Mr. J. P. Clarke was conductor, and Herr Griebel was leader of the band. Among others taking part were Mrs. John Beverley Robinson, Mr. Principal Barron, Mr. H. J. Haycraft, Mr. Hecht, Mr. G. F. Hayter, Mr. J. D. Humphries and others. The result of this concert was that a very large sum was contributed to the fund.

The Stanley minstrels gave another entertainment, consisting of a concert and masquerade ball, on the evening of March 12th.

Mrs. Lucy Stone lectured on "Women's Rights," on the evening of March 14th and 15th.

Dr. Lewis, on behalf of the Canadian Prohibitory Liquor Law League, lectured on "The Maine Liquor Law," in the hall, on April 3rd, 7th and 10th. Miss Emily Clarke, of New York, under the auspices of the same society, also lectured on the same subject.

On April 12th Henry J. Haycraft gave a concert, which was very well attended, and on April 15th Dr. Lewis lectured upon "Homeopathy."

The fourth anniversary meeting of the Anti-Slavery Society of Canada was held on May 3rd. As usual, it was very well attended.

The Toronto Philharmonic Society, on May 11th, gave a concert in aid of the funds of the society, at which the principal performers were Mrs. John Beverley Robinson and Mr. Haycraft.

Bisley's panorama of the River Thames was exhibited on the evenings of May 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, and on June 5th.

Under the auspices of the Toronto Protestant Alliance, Rev. A. H. Marling lectured in the hall on May 23rd, taking as his subject "The Church of Rome, Fallible or Infallible." The Rev. J. Borland, a Presbyterian clergyman of the city, occupied the chair.

On May 24th, her Majesty's birthday, a meeting of St. George's Society was held in the hall at noon, for the purpose of voting a congratulatory and loyal address to her Majesty on the occasion of her 36th birthday. It is almost needless to record that it was carried unanimously and with loud cheers.

The Toronto Horticultural Society held its first exhibition for 1855 on May 31st.

Professor S. B. Britton, editor of the Spiritual Telegraph and champion of spiritualism, of New York, lectured on "Spiritualism" in the hall on the evenings of June 13th, 14th and 15th. The proceeds from these lectures went to the Patriotic fund.

On July 11th, the Toronto Horticultural Society held its second exhibition of the season.

Mademoiselle Theresa Parodi gave two operatic concerts on the evenings of July 14th and 16th, Herr Strakosch acting as conductor. Among other artists were Madame Amalia Patti and Signor Giovanni Leo Lardi.

Thomas D'Arcy McGee lectured on July 20th and 23rd, respectively, on "Ireland as I Found It in 1855," and "Emigration as a Source of National Wealth."

Burton's panorama of the Eastern war was exhibited in the hall from July 30th until August 6th, attracting a "large and delighted audience."

Paul Julian, assisted by August Gockel, pianists, gave two concerts on August 9th and 14th.

From August 22nd until September 1st another panorama of events in the Russian war was on exhibition in the hall.

Mr. A. O'Leary delivered a course of lectures on "Phrenology," on September 3rd, 5th, 6th, 7th and 10th.

Pearce's Ethiopian opera troupe gave two entertainments, on September 11th and 12th, respectively.

On September 13th, the Toronto Horticultural Society held its third exhibition for the season.

James Nichol lectured on "Slavery as it Exists in the United States of America," to a large audience, on the evening of September 14th.

On October 5th, Mr. Haycraft gave a concert, the proceeds of which were devoted to the "widows and orphans of the heroes of Sebastopol," at which Mrs. John Beverley Robinson, Messrs. Haycraft, Griebel and Martin Lazare assisted.

On October 16th and 17th a bazaar on behalf of the First Congregational church took place in the hall. On the evening of the 17th it was brought to a close by a very enjoyable soiree.

On November 2nd, 1855, Sir E. W. Head, the newly appointed Governor-

General, made his first visit to Toronto, and was presented with an address by the Mayor and corporation at St. Lawrence Hall. A platform was erected at the southern end of the room, and from there the corporation's address was read to his Excellency, who made a suitable reply.

A complimentary concert to Mr. Griebel, the eminent violinist, was given in the hall on November 7th, 1855, by a number of Toronto's professional singers and musicians, among them being Messrs. J. D. Humphreys, H. J. Haycraft, G. F. Hayter, Jules Hecht and M. Lazare. The song "What Will They Say in England?" a pathetic effusion, rendered by Jules Hecht, caused tumultuous applause, as also did Mr. Humphreys' song, the "Queen's Letter. (This last began,

"There came a tale to England,

'Twas of a battle won,

And nobly had her warriors

'That day their duty done."

The words proceed for one or two more verses, until this verse comes:

"Then wrote the Queen of England,

And God's blessing on her pen."

As Mr. Humphreys sang the second line the audience rose, and cheers, again and again renewed, were given for her Majesty and the allied armies in the Crimea.

Sir Edmund Head held his first levee after coming to Toronto as Governor-General, at the hall on Monday, November 19th, 1855, when about 400 gentlemen paid their respects to his Excellency. A full list of their names is given in the papers of the time; now, forty-two years later, scarcely a dozen survive.

Curran's Ethiopian opera troupe gave two concerts, at which large audiences gathered, on November 19th and 20th.

The St. Andrew's Society ball took place on November 30th, 1855, proving an immense success, followed by the Toronto Hose Company's dance on December 14th.

Mr. Haycraft gave a concert in the hall on Tuesday, December 18, 1855, which was attended by Lady Head and a "very large and fashionable audience." The executants were Herr Griebel, violinist; Mrs. Hayter, Mr. J. D. Humphreys and Mr. Harkness, of the Royal Canadian Rifles' band.

The officers and members of No. 2 Rescue Fire Engine Company held their annual ball in St. Lawrence Hall on January 11th, 1856, and on the 22nd of the following month the Loyal Orangemen of the district of Toronto gave a grand soiree, the proceeds of which were applied in aid of the erection of an Orange Hall, with a library and reading rooms attached, for the use of the Orangemen of Toronto.

The Germania Musical Society gave two vocal and instrumental concerts in the hall on the evenings of January 18th and 19th, 1856. They were popular gatherings, at a low rate of admission, and some of those who gave their services were amateurs. The band was a professional one, though, and the general results proved most satisfactory, so satisfactory, in fact, that a third concert was given on the evening of January 23rd, with the additional attraction of Herr Griebel, as violinist, which was equally a success with those which had preceded it.

Madame Rose Devries gave two concerts in the same building on February 1st and 5th, both under the patronage of her Excellency Lady Head. Madame Devries was assisted by M. Lazare, Herr Griebel and a small chorus.

Colonel E. G. O'Brien presided over a public meeting in the hall on Friday evening, February 8th, 1856, of "Irishmen disapproving of the immigration of Roman Catholic Irishmen from the United States to Canada." The cause of the protest was the fact that a convention had been held in the city of Buffalo, composed of delegates from the several cities of Canada, with the view of facilitating the wholesale transmission into the province of the Roman Catholic population claiming Irish birth, then resident in and citizens of the United States.

Among the speakers were Mr. J. S. Hogan, Rev. R. Johnstone, Rev. Stephen Lett, L.L.D., and Dr. O'Meara. One report of the proceedings says that "there could have been no fewer than two or three thousand persons present." Comment on such an estimate is needless, when it is well known that such a number could not by any possible chance have obtained even standing room.

On Friday, February 22, 1856, a "Grand Orange Soiree" was given in the St. Lawrence Hall, the object being the erection of a new Orange Hall, with a library and other appurtenances, in the city of Toronto. The G. M., Ogle R. Gowan, presided, and among those present were: Rev. Stephen Lett, Alderman Dempsey, John Holland, Rev. Gilbert Armstrong, Rev. Nassau Gowan, Colonel E. G. O'Brien, John Sheridan Hogan, John Hillyard Cameron, P. M. Vankoughnet, D. B. Read, Q.C., and many others. The Toronto Leader, speaking of this meeting, says: "Taking all things into consideration, the meeting was the best of the kind ever held in the St. Lawrence Hall."

A public dinner, in honour of Sir William E. Logan, took place in the hall on Saturday evening, April 12, 1856, the Mayor, Mr. John Beverley Robinson, being in the chair. Among those present were: His Excellency the Governor-General, Sir E. W. Head; Hon. G. E. Cartier, Hon. R. Spence, Hon. J. Hamilton, Charles Lindsey, Colonel De Rottenburg, C. S. Gzowski, D. L. Macpherson, Rev. John McCaul, O. Mowat, John Laidlaw, Christopher Robinson, etc. The stewards were John Hillyard Cameron, George Brown, G. W. Allan, Professor Wilson, Professor Chapman, A. H. Armour, G. Parkins, F. H. Heward, R. P. Crooks, T. D. Harris, D. McDonald, T. J. Kerby, W. A. Campbell and Mr., now Sir Sandford Fleming.

A complimentary concert to Mrs. Hayter, a well-known music teacher, was given to that lady prior to her departure from the city, on April 18th.

Victoria L. O. L., 588, gave a soiree in the hall on Friday, April 25th, for the benefit of the widow and orphans of Robert Corigan, of St. Sylvestre, who had been a prominent member of the order.

A public meeting, in accordance with a requisition presented to the Mayor, was held on Thursday, July 17th, to protest against the dismissal from the Education Department of a man named William Howe, of 140 L. O. L., for joining in the Orangemen's procession on July 12th, 1856. The result of the meeting was that Howe was restored to his position. Among the speakers at this meeting were Ogle R. Gowan, D. B. Read and George Burton Holland. It must have been a very gross case of injustice which induced this last named gentleman to take part in a controversial public meeting, as he was essentially one "who lived peaceably with all men."

A public meeting of the citizens of Toronto was held in St. Lawrence Hall, on Thursday, July 24th, presided over by the Mayor, to discuss the propriety of petitioning his Excellency the Governor-General to dissolve the Parliament of the Province then existing, so that an appeal might be made to the country. The principal speakers were John McMurrich, John Holland, John Wilson, Ogle R. Gowan, George Brown and John George Bowes. The meeting passed all but unanimously a resolution condemning the conduct of the Conservative Government and asking for a dissolution of Parliament. The advice of the meeting was not taken by "the powers that be" at this particular moment, nor for some little time afterwards.

Mrs. John Beverley Robinson gave a "soiree musicale" in St. Lawrence Hall, on the evening of Monday, May 5th, 1856, in aid of "The City Industrial Farm," which, it is pleasant to note, turned out very successfully.

Two grand vocal and instrumental concerts were given in the hall on Tuesday and Thursday, 2nd and 4th September, by "the celebrated French Mountaineer Singers, who have performed before all the sovereigns of Europe for the past 22 years." So ran the advertisement. The prices of admission were only 25 and 50 cents.

Mlle. Parodi gave a concert in the hall on Monday, November 3rd, 1856, assisted by Signors Tiberni and Morini, and the celebrated violinist Paul Julien. Herr Strakosch was the conductor.

On Thursday, November 12th, and for four days after, the hall was the scene of "Dr. Barclay's photographic view of Jerusalem and the Holy Land." It was simply a panorama.

The corporation of the city on October 31st assembled at St. Lawrence Hall for the purpose of presenting a sword of honour and complimentary address to Captain and Brevet-Major Frederick Wells, 1st Royal Regiment of Foot, on his return from the Crimea, where he had greatly distinguished himself. On November 25th, a ball in joint honour of Major Wells and Mr. Alexander Roberts Dunn, V.C., late of the 11th Hussars, who had also displayed conspicuous gallantry in the same campaign, took place. It was an immense success.

A very large audience gathered in the hall on Friday, December 5th, 1856, to hear Professor Wilson deliver his lecture on "The Primitive Sources of Historical Truth." The lecture was under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute.

Mrs. A. McEwen, of Hamilton, gave an entertainment under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society in the hall on Wednesday evening, December 10th, 1856, entitled "Twa Hours in the Land of Cakes." It did not prove a very great success.

Professor Wilson, who was unable to conclude his lecture on the 5th inst., finished his subject on the 15th.

"For two nights only, an agreeable entertainment by Native Indians," Mr. Ma-zaw-ke-yaw-se-gay and Mr. and Mrs. Mah-koonce, took place on Thursday and Saturday, December 18th and 20th. The lady named here was a "granddaughter of the famous brave and warlike, yet generous and hospitable, Captain Brant." Thus was she described on the programme.

On January 5th, 1857, the Honourable John H. Cameron presided over a meeting called for the purpose of raising funds to assist in erecting a monument in Scotland to the Scottish hero Wallace. It was a successful meeting, as its result was a subscription list of more than $1,200.

Miss Julia Hill's vocal and instrumental concert took place on January 7th, and appears to have been fairly successful.

No. 5 Company, "Deluge," of Toronto firemen, held their ball in the hall on January 13th, and on the 14th an entertainment by Mr. A. McKeown, described as "Twa Hours in the Land o' Cakes," also took place. Both of these gatherings were a success, in point of numbers at any rate.

A course of lectures under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute was held in the hall on the following dates: January 16th and 23rd, by Professor J. Y. Hind, on the subject of "Manufacturing and Various Gases Used"; January 30th and February 6th, by Professor Croft, on "Electricity and Galvanism"; February 13th and 20th, Professor Hind lectured again on the "Mineral Wealth of Canada," and on February 27th and March 6th Professor Ormiston lectured on "Natural Philosophy."

On January 28th, G. F. Graham gave a concert in the hall. He had for his assistants Mr. Maule, Mr. Noverre and others.

Following the last named, on the next day, January 29th, was the Germania Society concert and ball. It was well attended and a very successful social gathering.

Another panorama, which also drew a large number of visitors, was exhibited from February 9th until 16th. It was entitled "Scenes in the Baltic," and was also related to the Russian war.

A Mr. Oscanyon—the name is peculiar—lectured in the hall on February 28th, but in the advertisement announcing the event no mention whatever is made of the subject, and no report of the lecturer's remarks subsequently appear in any of the papers.

Mr. Maitland's "Scottish Entertainment" was held in the hall on March 1st, and on the 3rd and 4th of the same month Messrs. Kergan & Stewart's panorama of the City of London was exhibited to admiring audiences.

Miss Greenfield, under the "nom de theatre" of the "Black Swan," assisted by Mr. G. F. H. Lawrence, gave an admirable concert on March 11th, which was greatly appreciated by all those who heard it.

Eliha Burritt, "the learned blacksmith," of whom it was remarked "that he could be silent in nineteen different languages," lectured in St. Lawrence Hall on March 9th, on "A Plan of Brotherly Co-partnership of the North and South for the Peaceful Extinction of Slavery." A newspaper report of the lecture records: "The hall was filled to overflowing and the lecturer was greeted with warm applause all through his remarks."

The Mayor, Mr. John Hutchison, presided at an Orange demonstration and soiree held in the hall on March 10th.

The Mayor's ball, of which the lady patronesses were Mesdames J. B. Robinson, Crooks and Philpotts, came off with the utmost eclat in the hall on April 24th. This social event was an immense success and elicited the following flattering comment from the press: "We speak but the universal opinion when we say that the Mayor's ball was the most successful ever given in Toronto." Mr. Hutchison, it may here be remarked, was a bachelor, hence the appearance of the ladies named as patronesses.

The Georgian Bay canal was discussed at a public meeting presided over by the Mayor, on May 4th, the object of the requisitionists to his Worship being, so they stated, "to devise ways, means and plans to complete the survey of the Toronto and Georgian Bay canal."

The Toronto Fire Brigade mustered in the hall on Monday, May 25th, preparatory to their demonstration and procession throughout the city in honour of the Queen's birthday, which that year fell on Sunday.

Thalberg, the world-famed pianist, gave his second concert in Toronto on June 17th. Like his first concert, which had been held in the City Hall, the event was most successful, audience and entertainer being alike satisfied with each other.

Howarth's varieties occupied the hall from June 22nd to 27th. They were followed by Brewer's panorama on June 29th, 30th and July 1st.

Emma Stanley, "vocalist and imitator," in her "Seven Ages of Woman and Polymelos," was the occupant of the room on July 6th, 7th, 10th, 11th, 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th. This entertainment drew crowded houses from first to last.

The Toronto Horticultural Society's exhibition took place on July 9th, and Mr. Crawford, Scottish vocalist, with profit to himself and great enjoyment to his hearers, had possession of the hall from July 24th to 27th inclusive.

The Mayor presided over a most enthusiastic gathering on August 25th, thus described in the circular by which it was called:

"Public Meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration the present aspect of affairs relative to the continuance of the "Hudson's Bay Co. Monopoly" and also to petition Her Majesty that she will be pleased to withhold her consent to any renewal of the license of the exclusive trade to said company in any part of British Dominions."

The European and Anacreontic Society gave three excellent concerts, all of which were very well attended, on September 15th, 17th and 18th. Mrs. Macready, the dramatic reader, followed on September 22nd, 23rd and 24th, and Mr. George Henry Russell gave a concert on September 29th. None of these affairs appear to have evoked any special enthusiasm from those who were present at them.

From October 15th until November 4th the Bunyan tableaux, representing scenes from the "Pilgrim's Progress," were exhibited with great success to excellent audiences. This was one of, if not the longest times the hall was ever occupied continuously by the same entertainment.

The Mechanics' Institute lectures began for the season of 1857-58 on November 26th, with a lecture by Professor Daniel Wilson, LL.D., on "The Infancy of Anglo-Saxondom and the Origin of the Language." He continued his subject on December 4th, and was followed by Professor H. H. Croft on the 11th and 18th, on "Heat and Light" and the "Chemistry of Iron and Copper."

L. O. L. Temperance Lodge held a soiree and concert in the St. Lawrence Hall on February 22nd. Mr. Ogle R. Gowan delivered an address.

After this date the holding of meetings and entertainments became less and less frequent in this building, very few being held therein. Other halls had been erected, and as the city was spreading northwards and westward, caterers for public amusement preferred to follow their patrons. Year by year meetings in the hall of any description became more and more rare, until they all but ceased. It is now several years since any meeting of any kind took place in the old historic room, but from its erection until 1870, an account of the public entertainments which took place in St. Lawrence Hall reflects very fairly the amusements and public life of the city of Toronto.

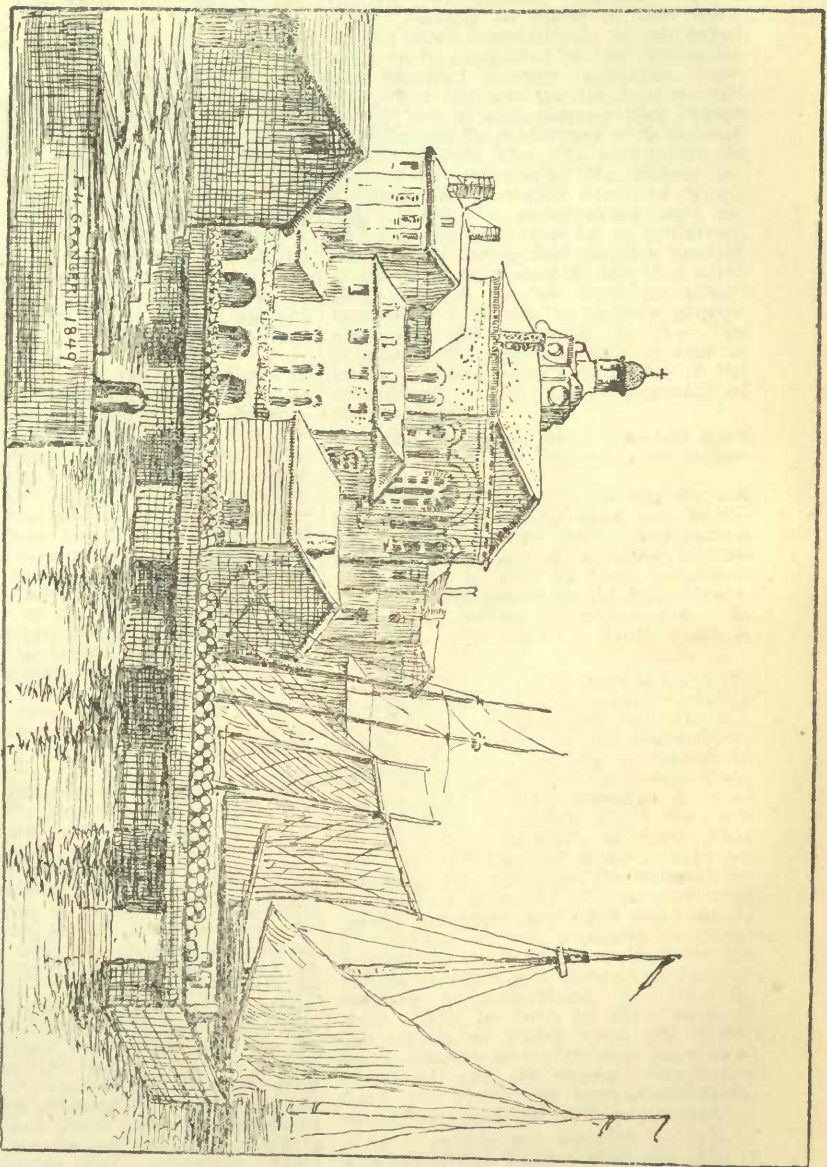

CHAPTER LXXIV.

ST. JAMES' CATHEDRAL.

The History of the Church Since its Inception in 1803 Until 1898 with the Parochial Records.

The history of the Cathedral Church of St. James commences with the year 1803, for then the movement originated to erect a church for the Episcopalians resident in the little town of York. The first regular religious services, of which there are any records, were held in the Parliament Buildings at the foot of Berkeley street, south of Palace (Front) street, when the Rev. Dr. Addison, of Niagara, frequently preached. Prior to the appointment of the Rev. George O'Kill Stuart, or in his absence, a layman, Mr. William Cooper, a wharfinger, used to read the service.

An early notice of religious services is in the Upper Canada Gazette and Oracle of 9th March, 1799. A day of general thanksgiving had been ordered, and the newspaper notice reads: "Notice is hereby given that prayers will be read in the North Government Building in this Town, on Tuesday, the 12th instant, being the day appointed for a General Thanksgiving throughout the Province to Almighty God for the late important victories over the enemies of Great Britain, service to begin half after eleven o'clock." The north Government building was one of the two brick buildings at the foot of Berkeley street, used by the Legislature and officers of the Government.

REAR VIEW OF THE CITY HALL, 1849.

This view shows a rear view of the City Hall, Toronto, 1849. The main building shown is the City Hall, the arched windows being those at the south end of the Council Chamber. The building to the left is the west wing of the hall, in the upper portion of which were civic offices and in the lower were the offices and stores. The wharf shown is Helliswell's, with the storehouse and barrels, and the vessels are those lying west of the Fish Market, which was done away with about 1867. The drawing was made by Mr. Grainger, the scenic artist of the Royal Lyceum Theatre, King street in 1849.

In the year 1797, President Peter Russell granted a lot of six acres bounded by New, now Jarvis, King, Church and Adelaide streets, was set apart as a church plot. In the map, the south-east corner of this was marked for the "parson." This land was then covered with a dense forest of pine trees. On the 8th of January, 1803, a meeting of the male attendants at the Anglican services was held for the purpose of raising funds to erect a church. The proceedings at this meeting are thus given in the Upper Canada Gazette of January 22:

"At a meeting of the subscribers to a fund for erecting a church in the town of York, holden at the Government Buildings on Saturday, the 8th day of January, instant, the Hon. Chief Justice Elmsley in the chair, resolved unanimously: That each subscriber shall pay the amount of his subscription by three instalments, the first being one moiety in one month from this day; the second being a moiety of the residue in two months, and the remainder in three months; that Mr. William Allan and Mr. Duncan Cameron shall be treasurers, and shall receive the amount of the said subscriptions, and that they be jointly and severally answerable for all moneys paid into their hands upon the receipt of either of them; that his Honour the Chief Justice, the Honourable P. Russell, the Honourable Captain McGill, the Rev. Mr. Stuart, Dr. Macaulay, Mr. Chewett and the two treasurers, be a committee of the subscribers, with full power and authority to apply the moneys arising from subscriptions to the purpose contemplated; provided, nevertheless, that if any material difference of opinion should arise among them, resort shall be had to a meeting of the subscribers to decide; that the church be built of stone, brick or framed timber, as the committee may judge most expedient, due regard being had to the superior advantages of a stone or brick building, if not counterbalanced by the additional expense; that eight hundred pounds of lawful money be the extent upon which the committee shall calculate their plan, but in the first instance they shall not expend beyond the sum of six hundred pounds, if the amount of the sums subscribed and paid into the hands of the treasurers, together with the moneys which may be allowed by the British Government amount to so much, leaving so much of the work as can most conveniently be dispensed with, to be completed by the remaining two hundred pounds; provided, however, that the said six hundred pounds be laid out in such manner that Divine worship can be performed with decency in the church; that the committee do request the opinion of Mr. Berczy respecting the probable expenses which will attend the undertaking, and respecting the materials to be preferred, due regard being had to the amount of the fund as aforesaid, and that after obtaining his opinion they do advertise their readiness to receive proposals conformable thereto. N. B.—The propriety of receiving contributions in labour or materials is suggested to the committee. A. Macdonell, secretary of the meeting."

In the Gazette of June 4, of the same year, appears the following advertisement:—

"Wanted, a quantity of boards and scantling, stones and lime, for building a church in this town. Any person inclined to furnish any of these articles will please to give in their proposals at the lowest prices to the subscribers, to be laid before the committee. D. Cameron, W. Allan. York, June 1, 1803."

It was at first determined to build the church of stone, and the Gazette of July 9, says: "On Wednesday last, the 6th instant, a meeting of the subscribers to the fund for erecting a church in this town was held at the Government Buildings, on which occasion it was unanimously resolved; That the said church should be built of stone; that one hundred tons of stone should accordingly be contracted for without delay; that a quantity of two inch pine plank, not exceeding 6000 feet, should also be laid in, and a reasonable quantity of oak studs and oak plank for the window frames and sashes. A further meeting, we understand," adds the Gazette, "will be held in the course of the season, at which when the different estimates and proposals have been examined, and the extent which the fund will reach has been ascertained, something decisive will be settled."

At a subsequent meeting to this it was definitely decided that the church should be of wood. The pine trees at the south-west corner of the plot were cut down, and here the primitive church of York arose, the soldiers of the garrison, by order of Col. Sheaffe, the commandant, raising the frame. The church, as first erected, was a plain structure of wood, placed some yards back from the road. Its gables faced east and west, its solitary door was at its western end, and approached from Church street. Its dimensions were fifty by forty feet. The sides of the building were pierced by two rows of ordinary windows, four above and four below. Altogether it was in its outward appearance as a contemporary American "Geographical View of the Province of Upper Canada" describes it, simply "a meeting house for Episcopalians." In the accompanying illustration, from a sketch taken early in the present century, the building is represented as being in the midst of a great grove, and stumps of various sizes are visible in the foreground.

The pew holders in St. James' from 1803 were as follows:—President Peter Russell, Judges Cochrane and Boulton, Solicitor-General Gray, Receiver-General Prideaux Selby, Christopher Robinson, George Crookshank, William Chewett, J. B. Robinson, Alexander Wood, William Willcocks, John Beikie, Alexander Macdonell, Chief Justice Elmsley, Chief Justice Osgoode, Chief Justice Scott, Chief Justice Powell, Attorney-General Firth, William Jarvis, Aeneas Shaw, Colonel Smith, D'Arcy Boulton, William Allan, Duncan Cameron, John Small, Thomas Ridout, William Stanton, Stephen Heward, Donald McLean, Stephen Jarvis, Captain McGill, Colonel James Givins, Dr. J. B. Macaulay, Dr. Gamble, Dr. W. W. Baldwin, Dr. Lee, Q. St. George, John Denison, S. Playter, D. Brooke, Jos. Cawthra, Mr. John Scadding, Jesse Ketchum, Wm. Cooper, J. Ross, John Jordan, J. Kendrick, Joseph Hunt, John Higgins, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Murchison, Mr. Bright, Mr. O'Keefe and Caleb Humphrey. The churchwardens for 1807-8 were D'Arcy Boulton and William Allan. The first incumbent of the church was the Rev. George O'Kill Stuart, subsequently of St. George's, Kingston. Occasionally was to be heard Charles James, the second Bishop of Quebec, long a missionary in the eastern townships of Lower Canada before his appointment to the Episcopate.

Other very early pew holders were Donald McLean, William Hamilton, Allan McNabb, Joshua Leach, T. Bingle, John Beikie, George Duggan, Alexander Legge and John Scarlett.

Though the church originated in 1803, it does not appear to have been opened for divine service until early in 1807.

On February 28th, 1807, appears an advertisement in the Gazette notifying that the pews would be offered for sale by public auction on March 4th following, and that when sold they would be subject to a ground rent of two dollars per annum for a single pew and four for a double one. The first accounts show that from March 4th, 1807, until March 4th, 1808, the sum received for rents was "£36 4s. 6d, Halifax currency," about $145.

In 1810 a portion of the church plot was enclosed at an expense of £1 5s. for rails, of which five hundred were required for the purpose. At the same time the ground in front of the west end entrance was cleared of stumps at an expense of £3 15s. In the same year the cost for heating the building and the charges connected with the Holy Communion amounted to £1 7s. 6d., Halifax currency. In 1811 Dr. Strachan succeeded Dr. Stuart as incumbent of the church, and in 1818 he induced the congregation to effect some alterations and additions in the structure.

Dr. Scadding, in his "Toronto of Old," thus describes the first Episcopal clergyman of York:

"Dr. O'Kill Stuart, formerly rector of this church, i.e., York, but subsequently of Kingston, used occasionally when visiting York to officiate—a very tall, benevolent and fine-featured ecclesiastic, with a curious delivery, characterized by unexpected elevations and depressions of the voice, irrespective of the matter, accompanied by long closings of the eyes, and then a sudden re-opening of the same. Whenever this preacher ascended the pulpit, one member of the congregation, Mr. George Duggan, who had had, it was understood, some trivial disagreement with the doctor during his incumbency in former years, was always expected by onlookers to rise and walk out, and this he accordingly always did. The movement seemed a regular part of the programme of the day, and never occasioned any sensation."

Another curiosity among the old records is the entry of the payment of £3 7s. 9d., Halifax currency, on April 4th, 1809, to Joshua Leach as part payment for the erection of the pulpit. What the total cost was is not given.

John Hayes was appointed sexton of the church at a yearly salary of £10, or $40, on January 20th, 1813, and among his duties was "digging the graves, attending upon the door of the church at all times during divine service and to keep out dogs." A memo.

is inserted that he might charge $2 for digging a grave.

Another item in the early accounts is the receipt of £24 as pew rent for the two pews set apart for the use of the House of Assembly. It is dated 1811.

On March 18th, 1813, it was resolved at a meeting of the congregation that "the burial ground should be fenced when the wardens have the money."

The first record relating to the musical portion of the church services is dated Easter Monday, 1819, when it was resolved to pay Mr. Hetherington the sum of £20 annually for singing. From subsequent entries it would seem that this gentleman was the choir master.

To return to the proposed alterations in the church. The first proposal was to extend the building eastward, not southward; to have the belfry placed at the west end, not at the south; then the pulpit was to have been placed on the north side of the church and a south porch erected. An advertisement in the Gazette, of the early part of 1818, reads: "Plans and estimates for enlarging and repairing the church will be received by the subscribers before the 20th of March, on which day a decision will be made, and the contractor, whose proposals shall be approved of, must commence the work as the season will permit. The intention is, first, to lengthen the church forty feet toward the east with a circular end, thirty of which to form part of the body of the church, and the remaining ten an altar with a small vestry room on the one side, and a Government pew on the other; second, to remove the pulpit to the north side, and to erect two galleries, one opposite to it and another on the west end; third, to alter the pews to suit the situation of the pulpit, and to paint and number the same throughout the church; fourth, to raise a belfry on the west end, and make a handsome entrance on the south side of the church, and to paint the whole building on the outside. Thomas Ridout, J. B. Robinson, churchwardens; William Allan. Feb. 18, 1818."

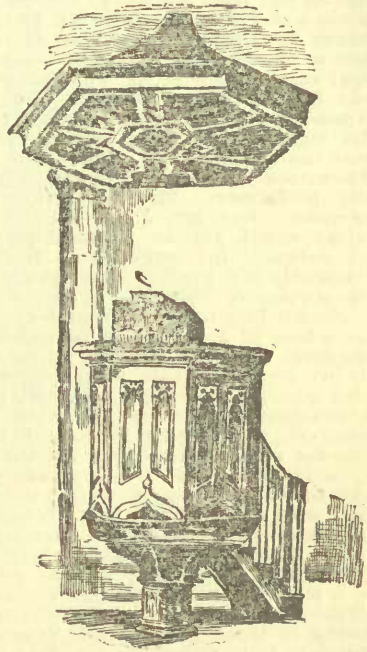

The intentions here detailed were not carried into effect. On the north and south sides of the old building additional space was enclosed, which brought the axis of the church and its roof into a north and south direction. An entrance was opened at the southern end, toward King street, and over the gable in this direction was built a square tower, bearing a circular bell turret, surmounted by a small tin-covered spire. The whole edifice, as thus enlarged and improved, was painted of a light blue colour, with the exception of the frames around the windows and doors and the casings at the angles, imitating blocks of stone alternately long and short, which were painted white. The original western door was not closed up. It was used almost exclusively on Sundays and other occasions when Divine worship was performed, to admit the troops, whose benches extended along by the wall on that side the whole length of the church. The upper windows on all the four sides were now made circular headed. On the east side there was a difference. The altar window of the original building remained, only transformed into a kind of triplet, the central compartment rising above the other two and made circular-headed. On the north and south side of this east window were two tiers of lights, as on the western side. In the bell turret was a bell of sufficient weight to jar sensibly the whole building at every one of its semi-revolutions. In the interior a central aisle or open passage led from the door to the southern end of the church, while on the floor was situated a pew of state for the Lieutenant-Governor, with small, square pillars at its four corners, sustaining a flat canopy over it. Immediately under the ceiling of the gallery, and below the distinctive covering just mentioned, suspended against the wall, were the Royal Arms emblazoned on a black tablet. Half way up the central aisle, on the right side, was an open space, in which were placed the pulpit, reading desk and clerk's pew, in the old orthodox fashion, rising by gradations one above the other, the whole overshadowed by a rather handsome sounding board, sustained partially by a rod from the roof. Behind this mountainous structure was the altar lighted copiously by the original east window. Two narrow side-aisles running parallel with the central one gave access to corresponding rows of pews, each having a numeral painted on its door. Two passages for the same purpose ran westward from the space in front of the pulpit. To the right and left of the Lieutenant-Governor's seat, and filling up—with the exception of two square-corner pews—the rest of the northern end of the church were two oblong pews; the one on the west appropriated to the officers of the garrison, the other on the east to the members of the Legislature. Round the north, west and south sides of the interior ran a gallery divided like the area below into pews. This structure was sustained by a row of pillars of turned wood, and from it to the roof above rose another row of similar supports. The ceiling over the parts exterior to the gallery was divided into four shallow semi-circular vaults, which met at a central point. The pews everywhere were painted of a buff or yellowish hue, with the exception of the rims at the top, which were black. The pulpit and its appurtenances were white. The rims or cornices on the pews just referred to, throughout the whole church, exhibited at regular intervals small gimlet holes; in these were inserted annually at Christmas-tide small sprigs of hemlock spruce. The interior, when thus dressed, wore a cheerful, refreshing look in keeping with the festival commemorated.

How the money was obtained for the enlargement of the church is told by the Christian Recorder for 1819. It says that "a very respectable church was built at York, in the Home District, many years ago, which at that time accommodated the inhabitants, but for some years past it had been found too small, and several attempts were made to enlarge and repair it. At length in April, 1818, in a meeting of the whole congregation, it was resolved to enlarge the church, and a committee was appointed to suggest the most expeditious and economical method of doing it. The committee reported that a subscription in the way of loan, to be repaid when the seats were sold, was the most promising method—no subscription to be taken under twenty-five pounds, payable in four instalments. Two gentlemen were selected to carry the subscription paper round, and in three hours from twelve to thirteen hundred dollars were subscribed. Almost all the respectable gentlemen gave in loan fifty pounds, and the Hon. Justice Boulton and George Crookshank, Esq., contributed one hundred pounds each to accomplish so good an object. The church was enlarged, a steeple erected, and the whole building, with its galleries, handsomely finished. In January last when everything was completed, the pews were sold at a year's credit, and brought more money than the repairs and enlargement cost. Therefore the inhabitants of York erect a very handsome church, at a very little expense to themselves, for every one may have his subscription money returned, or it may go towards payment of a pew, and, what is more, the persons who subscribed for the first church, count the amount of their subscription as part of the price of their new pews. This fair arrangement has been eminently successful and gave great satisfaction.

George Crookshank, Esq., notwithstanding the greatness of his subscription and the pains which he took in getting the church well finished, has presented the clergyman with cushions for the pulpit and reading desk covered with the richest and finest damask, and likewise cloth for the communion table. This pious liberality cannot be too much commended; it tells us that the benevolent zeal of ancient times is not entirely done away. The congregation were so much pleased that a vote of thanks was unanimously offered to Mr. Crookshank for his munificent present."

PULPIT, SOUNDING BOARD AND DESK, NOW IN ST. MARGARET'S, SCARBORO', ONT.

The pulpit, sounding board and desk had been a gift of Governor Gore to the original church, and had cost the sum of one hundred dollars. The Hon. John Henry Dunn provided the Communion plate, and in the Loyalist of March 1, 1828, is found the following acknowledgment: "The undersigned acknowledges the receipt of £112 18s 5d from the Hon. Henry Dunn, being the price of a superb set of communion plate presented by him to St. James' church at this place. J. B. Macaulay, churchwarden. York, 23rd February, 1828."

A history of St. James' would be incomplete without further mention of the clerks and the music. The first clerk was Mr. Hetherington. His habit was after giving out a psalm to play the air on a bassoon and then to accompany with fantasias on the same instrument such vocalists as felt inclined to take part in the singing. A choir from time to time had been formed. Once two rival choirs were heard on trial in the church, one of them strong in instrumental resources having the aid of a bass viol, clarinet, and bassoon, the other more dependent on its vocal excellences. The instrumental choir triumphantly prevailed, and as has been stated, in 1819 an allowance of £20 was made to Mr. Hetherington for singing and giving instruction in church music. One of the principal encouragers of the vocalist party was Dr. Alexander Burnside. But all expedients for doing what was in reality the work of the congregation itself were unreliable, and the clerk or choir-master often found himself a solitary performer. Mr. Hetherington's successor was Mr. John Fenton, a rather small, shrewd featured person, not deficient in self-esteem. Not infrequently Mr. Fenton, after giving out the portion of Tate and Brady, which it pleased him to select, would execute the whole of it as a solo to some accustomed air, with graceful variations of his own. All this would be done with great coolness and apparent self-satisfaction. While the discourse was going on in the pulpit above him it was his way often to lean himself resignedly back in a corner of his pew and throw a white cambric handkerchief over his head and face. Mr. Fenton's employment as official mouthpiece of the English church did not stand in the way of his making himself useful as a class leader among the Wesleyan Methodists. Mr. Fenton afterwards removed to the United States, where he obtained Holy Orders in the Episcopal church.

Within this first church of St. James used to assemble representatives of every class in York. In the Governor's pew, at the south end of the church, was to be seen during his stay here Sir Peregrine Maitland, ever an object of curiosity from the romance connected with his marriage. Sir Peregrine and Lady Sarah Lennox were both at that famous ball given at Brussels by the Duchess of Richmond, on the night before the battle of Waterloo. Lady Sarah was the daughter of the Duke of Richmond, who opposed her marriage to Sir Peregrine. Soon after the Waterloo campaign, all the parties being at Paris, the lady ran away from her father's home and fled to the lodgings of her lover. The upshot of the whole affair was a marriage and a reconciliation. The Duke of Richmond came to Canada as Governor-General, and Sir Peregrine as Lieutenant-Governor. On the staff of the latter was his son, Peregrine, by a former marriage. The Duke of Richmond met a horrible death. At Sorel, while on a tour of inspection, he was bitten by a pet fox, and at a place subsequently called Richmond, near Ottawa, hydrophobia set in with fatal results. Here, too, was to be seen Sir John Colborne—his right shoulder shattered by a cannon ball at Ciudad Rodrigo. In the gallery, at the southern end of the church, also, was the long, narrow, enclosed pew, with its high screen at the back, occupied by Chief Justice Powell. To his place, in the body of the church, was regularly assisted the white-haired, venerable Chief Justice Scott. The long pew, on the west side of the Governor's seat, was allotted to the military, and here were to be seen, from time to time, the officers more or less noted, who made York their temporary abiding place. The compartment, on the east side of the Governor's pew, was set apart for the members of the Legislature when in session. Here, in winter, were to be observed all the political notabilities of the day, for Non-conformists as well as Conformists attended worship at St. James'. Here sat Colonel Nichol, afterwards killed by driving over a precipice at Queenston; Mr. Horner, Dr. Lefferty, Hamnet Pinhey, Mahlon Burwell, Absalom Shade, Speaker Sherwood and William Lyon Mackenzie. Mr. Chisholm, of Oakville, used facetiously to object to the clause in the Litany where "heresy and schism" are deprecated, it so happening that the last word was usually by a Scottishism pronounced Chisholm. Here and there was one who had been "out" for satisfaction. In the eastern portion of the north gallery sat the young ladies of the school of Misses Purcell and Rose, objects of admiration to the youths of the congregation. Throughout the church were to be observed the forms of the founders of York in their (to us) quaint dress—partially cut-away black coats and upright collars, small clothes and buckled shoes, frilled shirt bosoms and white cravats, with powdered hair and smoothly shaven faces. Such was the picture which was presented at St. James' every Sunday.

Besides the appointed clergyman there were to be heard in the pulpit and reading desk, from time to time, the Rev. Joseph Hudson, the military chaplain at this post; Mr. Addison, of St. Mark's Church, Niagara, chaplain of the first Provincial Parliament, who used to walk to and from church in his canonicals, in the old-fashioned way, recalling the period when the clergy wore the cassock and gown in the streets. Mr. Addison presented his library to the rectory at Niagara, ways endeavoured to conform to the old English custom of turning to the east, but to do this in the desk of the old church was difficult.

As will be gathered from this history, the first Anglican church of 1803-1807 was little more than a "meeting house," constructed of wood, standing nearly on the same site as the present St. James' Cathedral does, but, unlike that edifice, which runs north and south, it faced east and west, which, according to the ideas obtaining among where it still remains, of interest chiefly as showing the line of reading of a theologian of the last century. The chaplain to the Legislative Assembly, the Rev. William Macaulay, was a preacher always listened to with attention. Another divine was Dr. Thomas Phillips, a well-read cleric, in personal appearance very clerical, in the old-fashioned sense. He was one of the last wearers of hair powder in this vicinity. In reading the creed he al-

Anglicans, Roman Catholics and followers of the Greek church, is the only way in which a church should be built. A cut of the first building is given, as is also one of what the building was like after its enlargement in 1818-19 under the direction of the Rev. John Strachan, the then rector of York, he having succeeded Archdeacon G. O'K. Stuart in 1811.

A reproduction of the interior of the building is also given. The large pew at the southern end, which is surmounted by the royal arms, was that of the Lieutenant-Governor, while the first of the three large square pews, just underneath the pulpit, was that set apart for members of the Legislature. When the alterations were finally completed, the outer windows had circular heads given to them, and galleries, which do not appear to ever have been used much, were also added.

The benches at the back of the pews were then used by such of the soldiers of the garrison as attended the services of the Anglican church.

This edifice remained in use until 1830, when it was replaced by a stone building. The pulpit was removed to St. Margaret's Anglican church in Scarborough, where it is still to be seen.

if they demanded the same, be credited one-third of the price of the pews that they purchased in the new church, not exceeding in number those which they possessed in the old church; that no person be entitled to the privilege granted by the last resolution who shall not have paid up the whole purchase money of his pew in the old church; that the present church remain as it is till the new one is finished; that after the new church is completed the materials of the present one be sold to the highest bidder, and the proceeds of the same be applied to the liquidation of any debt that may be contracted in erecting the new church or furnishing the same, and that the upset price of pews in the new church be twenty-five pounds currency."

Tenders were invited for the build-

INTERIOR VIEW OF FIRST ANGLICAN CHURCH AFTER RECONSTRUCTION IN 1818.

There are not many of those who worshipped in the building from 1818 to 1830 remaining, though Dr. Scadding, Hon. G. W. Allan, Mr. Clarke Gamble, Colonel D'Arcy Boulton, of Cobourg, Lieut.-Col. R. B. Denison, and possibly one or two more are still living in 1897.

On April 20th., 1829, at a meeting of St. James' congregation it was resolved, with only "one dissentient voice," that it was necessary to build a new church. In fact the growth of the town and congregation necessitated the erection of a more commodious church edifice. As a part of the scheme for raising funds for the new building, it was decided by the congregation: "That the pew-holders of the present church, ing of the new church, and on October 22, 1831, the following contract was entered into reading:—

"An agreement made and entered into the twenty-second day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

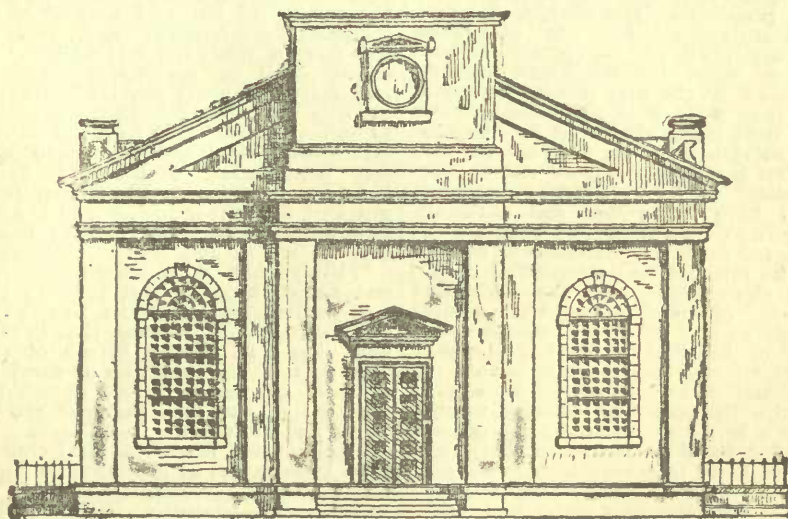

"Between D'Arcy Boulton, junior, of the town of York, in the Home District, Esquire; Robert Stanton, of the same place, Esquire; William Henry Draper, of the same place, Esquire; James Grant Chewett, of the same place, Esquire; and George Duggan, of the same place, merchant, of the first part; John Ritchey, of the same place, carpenter and builder of the second part; Jesse Ketchum, of York aforesaid, Esquire, and Thomas Silverthorn, of the township,

Toronto, in the District aforesaid, yeoman, of the third part: Whereas at a public meeting of the parishioners of the parish of St. James, in the town of York aforesaid, it was determined on rebuilding the Church of St. James in the said parish; and whereas at the said meeting the above-named D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan, were by the said parishioners appointed a committee for superintending the building of the said church, and were authorized to advertise for and enter into a contract, or contracts for rebuilding the said church;

"And, whereas, at a meeting of the said committee, a proposal or tender of the work to be performed by the said John Ritchey in re-building the said church; now these presents witness, that for carrying the said agreement into execution the said D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan, in behalf of themselves and of the parishioners, on the one part, and the said John Ritchey, on the other part, do hereby mutually contract, declare and agree as follows:

"First—The said John Ritchey doth covenant and agree with the said D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan, and the survivors and survivor of them and the

from the said John Ritchey was received for the erecting and building the said church; and of the whole of the said work to be done thereto, according to the drawings, plans and specifications made out and now in the possession of the said committee, for the sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds currency; and such proposal and tender were agreed to by the said committee upon the terms and conditions hereinafter mentioned;

"And whereas the said Jesse Ketchum and Thomas Silverthorn have consented and agreed to become bound as sureties for the due fulfilment of the contract hereinafter mentioned and executors and the administrators of such survivor, that he, the said John Ritchey, in consideration of the sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds, hereinafter agreed to be paid to him, shall and will, at the town of York aforesaid, on such spot as shall be pointed out to him by the said D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan, at his own expense in every respect, erect and build, cover-in and glaze, paint, plaster, stucco and completely finish with all necessary stone-work, brick-work, carpentry, joinery, iron-work, plastering, stucco, and in every respect make fit for the use of the said congregation, agreeable to the specifications hereto annexed, all and singular the said church or building mentioned or specified in the plan hereunto annexed; the whole to be completed on or before the first day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three.

"Secondly—That, in consideration of the said sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds to be paid to the said John Ritchey, as hereinafter mentioned, he, the said John Ritchey doth hereby agree with the said parties of the first part, that he will fund and provide every material of every nature and description of the very best kind to be used in and about the erection of the said church at his own proper cost and charge.

"Thirdly—That he, the said John Ritchey, shall and will erect the said church under the immediate superintendence of the said parties hereto of the first part; or of such architect for the time being appointed by them or the survivor of them; and that the said parties hereto of the first part or such architect to be by them appointed shall have full power and authority to give directions for and regulate the bringing in proper materials to be used in the erection and completing of the said church; and also the mode and manner of performing the several works in and about the same, and if they or he shall think fit full power to reject any improper materials as aforesaid of every description, and to require the said John Ritchey to substitute better materials in lieu of such as they should think improper; and generally to take care that every part of the work in the erecting the said church be done in a good and workmanlike manner.

"Fourthly—And the said D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and Geo. Duggan, do hereby agree to and with the said John Ritchey, his executors, administrators and assigns in manner following; that is to say, that they, the said D'Arcy Boulton, Robert Stanton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan, as such committee for the building of the said church as aforesaid, shall and will pay unto the said John Ritchey the said sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds in manner following; that is to say, the sum of one thousand pounds immediately on the signature of these presents; and when the sum of one thousand pounds has been expended in work and materials for the said church, and delivered on the ground whereon the same is to be built, to be ascertained either by the parties of the first part, or certificate of an architect to be by them appointed as aforesaid, the residue of the said sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds, in manner following; that is to say, the sum of eighty pounds per centum upon the value of so much of the said church as shall at the end of every month from and after the expenditure of the said one thousand pounds be completed in a workmanlike manner; and on the value of such materials as shall then be provided and delivered over and above the value of the said one thousand pounds, or of the last monthly valuation, and the residue of the said sum of seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five pounds, when the said building or church shall be completely finished and delivered over; provided, always, nevertheless, that no such payment as last aforesaid shall be made to the said John Ritchey without the consent and approbation of the said Jesse Ketchum and Thomas Silverthorn, first provided in writing to the said D'Arcy Boulton, William Henry Draper, James Grant Chewett and George Duggan.

"Fifthly—And it is hereby declared and agreed upon by and between the said parties hereto of the first part, and the said John Ritchey, that in case they, the said parties hereto of the first part, or the survivors or survivor of them or the executors or administrators of the said survivor should direct any more work to be performed or done in and about the said church than is contained in the schedule hereunder written or annexed, then in such case the parties of the first part or the survivors or survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of the survivor shall or will pay, or cause to be paid, to the said John Ritchey, his executors, administrators or assigns, so much money as the said extra work and the materials used therein shall reasonably be worth, cost or amount to; anything before contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; subject nevertheless, to this proviso, that such direction and payment for any such extra work shall not be in any manner construed into a waiving or breaking of these articles of agreement in any manner whatsoever.

"Sixthly—And it is hereby covenanted and agreed by and between the said parties of the first part, and the said John Ritchey, that if any dispute or difference should happen to arise between them touching the said church hereby agreed to be erected and built as aforesaid, or touching or concerning other matter or thing whatsoever relating to the work hereby contracted to be done, or such additional or extra work, if any, or touching, or concerning the construction or meaning of these presents; then such dispute or difference shall be left to the determination and award of three indifferent persons, one to be named by the parties hereto of the first part, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of such survivor; another by the said John Ritchey, his executors, administrators or assigns, and the third by the persons so first chosen, immediately or within ten days after notice of such dispute or difference; and if either of the said parties of the first and second parts shall by any writing under their or his hand or hands request the other party to refer any such dispute to arbitration, and to nominate any fit person or persons to be arbitrator or arbitrators on their or his part and behalf, and the party to whom such request shall be made shall for the space of ten days after such request shall be made refuse or neglect so to do, or refuse or neglect to execute a paper as arbitration bond, then, and, in either such case, it shall and may be lawful to and for the person or persons chosen as arbitrator or arbitrators by the party making such request as aforesaid by any writing under his or their hand or hands to choose some person to act as arbitrator for the party so neglecting or refusing; and the persons so chosen arbitrators as hereinbefore is mentioned thereupon, and within three days afterwards proceed to choose an umpire; and the major part of such arbitrators or umpire shall within one week from the time of such reference make an award in the matters to be referred to them, with power, nevertheless, for the said major part of the said arbitrators and umpire from time to time to enlarge the time for making their said award; so as the said enlarged time shall not exceed one calendar month from the time of such arbitration first commencing; and the said award shall be final and conclusive on all parties thereto, and in particular if either of the said parties shall have refused, declined or neglected to become a party, to such reference after such nature as aforesaid, the parties so refusing or neglecting shall be bound and concluded by all the proceedings therein, and by the award to be made therein in the same manner to all intents and purposes as if the said party had been actually a party to the said reference and joined therein; and for the further and better enforcing the performance and observance of every or any award so made as aforesaid the reference or submission for, or in respect of the same, shall from time to time be made a rule of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench for Upper Canada, according to the statute in such case made and provided.

"Seventhly—And it is hereby further agreed by and between the said parties of the first and second part, that the act or determination of the majority of the persons herein-before named of the first part shall be considered and taken as the act of the whole of the said parties of the first part.

"Eighthly—And it is hereby further covenanted and agreed by and between the parties of the first and second part hereto that in building the said church the said party of the second part shall be at liberty to make use of all such ground as shall be open and not in use for graves, but that in no respect shall he allow any materials or other things to be placed in or upon any graves or tombs within the church-yard.

"And the said Jesse Ketchum and Thomas Silverthorn do hereby for themselves, and for, in and on behalf of their executors and administrators, covenant, grant and agree to and with the said parties of the first part, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor in manner following; that is to say, that the said John Ritchey shall and will well and truly expend in work and materials for the said church the said sum of one thousand pounds, so to be advanced as aforesaid; and further, that he shall and will within the said time above limited for so doing, well, truly and faithfully build and in all things complete the said church according to this agreement hereinbefore contained, and according to the plans and specifications hereto annexed.

"In witness whereof the parties of these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written, and in the second year of his Majesty's reign.

"Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of

"John Strachan, S. Washburn, George Duggan, John Ritchey, D. Boulton, Jr., Robt. Stanton, Wm. H. Draper, J. C. Chewett, Jesse Ketchum, Thomas Silverthorn."

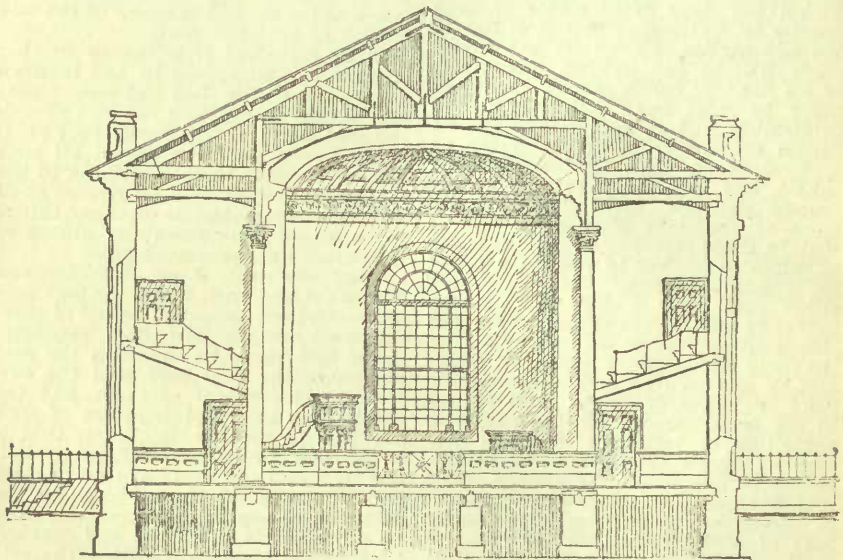

(The name of Mr. Chewett having been throughout interlined.)

"Dimensions.—The size of the said church to be (exclusive of the projection of the plinth) one hundred and forty feet long the body of the church by eighty feet wide. The tower is to project, (beyond the one hundred and forty feet), nine feet six inches by twenty feet six inches square.

"Excavations.—The foundations for all the exterior walls to be excavated four feet deep below the ground line and of sufficient width for building the walls. Interior foundations to be excavated three feet below the ground line and of sufficient width for building the walls.

inches thick at the footing, and from footing to ground line three feet two inches thick; from ground line to ground floor line two feet eleven inches thick. Partly formed choir walls to be three feet below the ground line, and from ground line to ground floor line, four feet high and two feet thick. Ten piers for columns to be built three feet square from foundation to floor line, and ten piers to be built for the sleeper beams two feet square from foundation to floor line; all these foundation walls are to be built of good rubble work of lake stone to be laid on their natural beds and well bedded and bonded in good strong mortar.

"Walls.—The tower walls to be four "Masonry.—Foundations of exterior walls to be four feet below the ground line. The footings to the foundation of the tower to be four feet ten inches thick, and about ten inches high, from said footing to ground line four feet, six inches thick, and from ground line to ground floor line four feet three inches thick.

"Side walls to have a footing three feet ten inches thick, and about ten inches high from said footing to ground line, three feet six inches thick—from ground line to ground floor line, three feet four inches thick.

"The end walls to be three feet six feet thick, from the ground floor line to the top of the entablature—then two sets off to be made at the top of the base of pedestal of six inches each; each leaving the thickness of the walls of the pedestal three feet thick. The tower to rise one foot above the ridge of the roof and the stone cornice, and bricking course above that, making the whole height of the tower sixty-two feet, six inches from the floor line.

"Side walls to be thirty-six feet high from floor line to the eaves, to be three thick opposite the piers, and two feet six inches between the piers.

"End walls to be two feet eight inches thick opposite the piers, and two feet two inches thick between the piers.

"Gable walls to be one foot six inches thick. The whole of the above walls above the ground-line are to be built on the outside with regular courses Kingston-hammered stone, and the inside with lake stone, all well bedded and bonded, and kept straight and plumb.

"The inside partition walls to be built of brick, eighteen inches thick the first storey and fourteen inches thick on the second storey.

"Water table—A cut stone water table to be put all around the building sixteen inches thick, well weathered down from the face of wall, well tooled, jointed and set.

"Windows, etc.—The jambs, heads and sills of all the windows to be cut stone.

"The base moulding and cornice of the pedestal of the tower, the recess for the clock, the door sills and chimneys above the roof all to be of cut stone, well dressed, cut fair and square, well set and bedded and bonded into the walls in a proper manner. All this cut stone to be Burlington stone.

"Wing walls and larding—Excavate for the wing walls, for steps and landing, four feet deep, the whole of the side of the wing walls to be built in the same manner as the walls of the buildings, four feet below the ground line, built up with stone rubble work to receive the steps and landings. The whole of these steps and landings to the five entrances to be of Kingston cut stone, well worked, the landings to be laid in regular courses, well bedded and jointed.

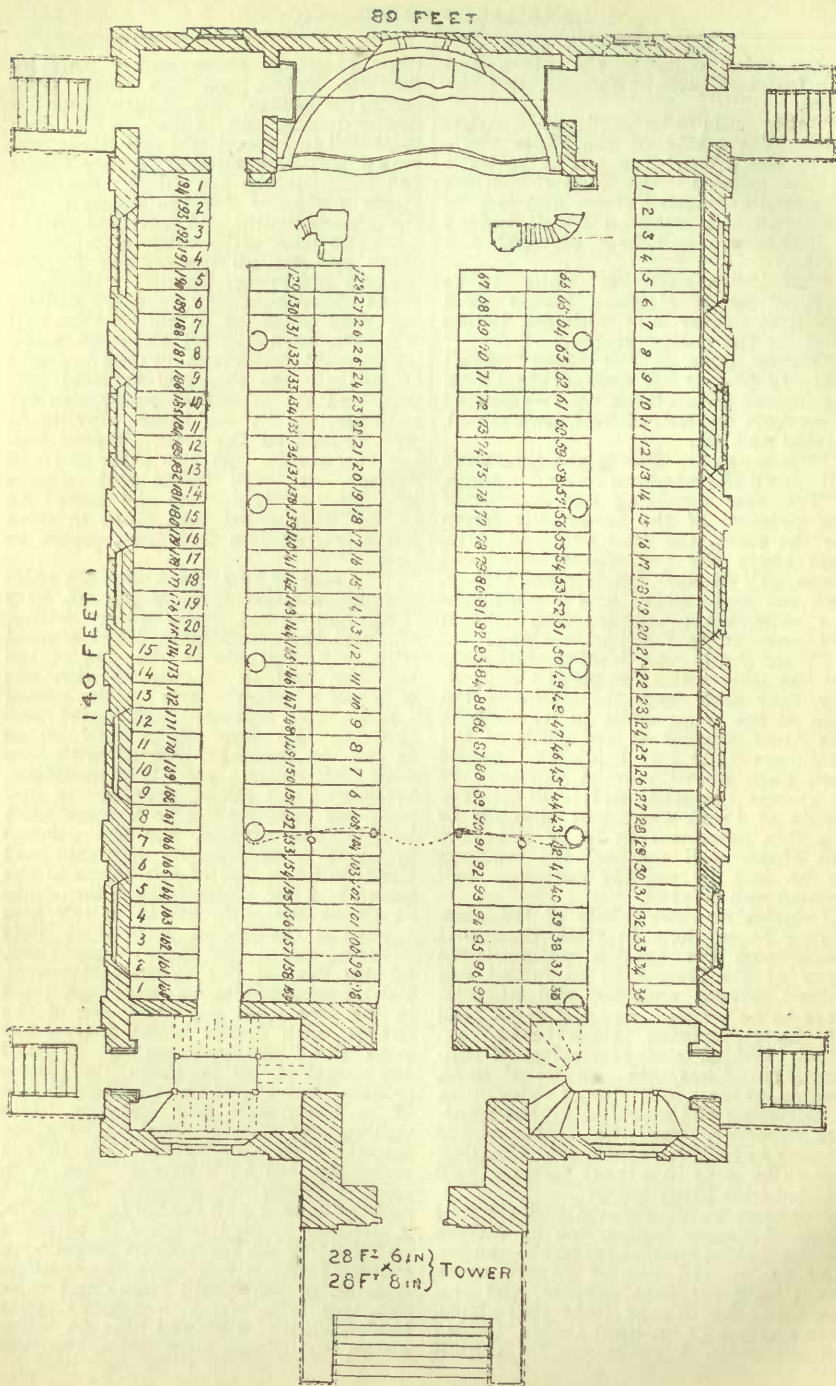

"Plastering—The whole of the plastering to be done in good, three-coat work, and the outside walls of the body of the church to be furred and lathed, proper cornices; and entablature to be worked, and the niche head of the communion recess to be panelled; lathing and plastering of ceilings, partitions, etc., to be of good, double, narrow-split pine or cedar laths.

"Painting and glazing—All the painting necessary for the inside of the church to be three-coat work; the glazing to be done in a neat manner, well bedded with black putty.

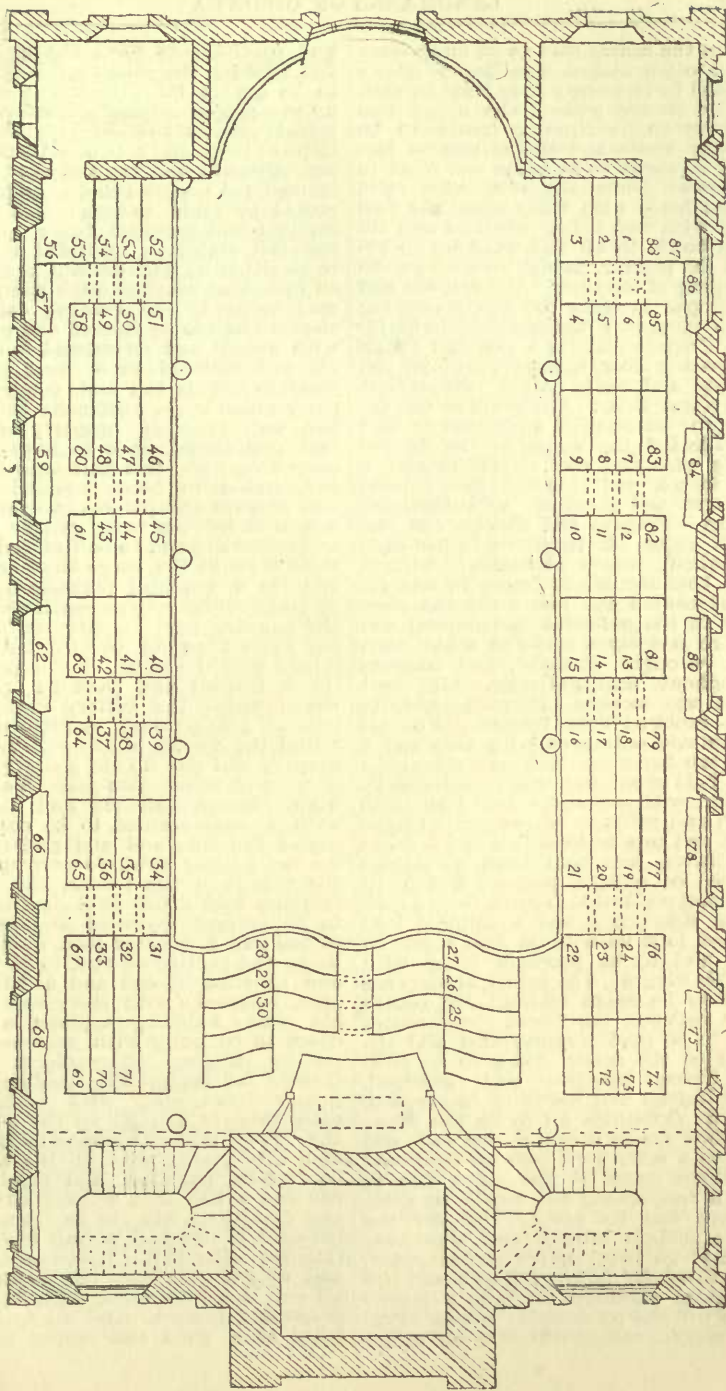

"Carpentry—To prepare and fix four tiers of sleeper beams, ten by sixteen inches, to run lengthwise of the church, and to be well bedded on the stone piers built for that purpose, and prepare and fix ground floor wall-plates, two and a half by eight inches, bedded on the walls. Prepare and fix a good floor of joists, three and a half by fourteen inches, and two feet from centre to centre, and gained down to sleeper-beams, and bedded on the wall plate—all to be well laid and level; prepare a sufficient number of wood blocks and bond-timbers for all the openings, where necessary for the fixing of all the joiners' work, and delivered to the mason in time to be built in the walls. Make and fix all the centres for the masons, and proper lintels for the apertures where necessary; prepare and fix ten pine posts to be set on the oak templets, well bedded on stone piers, which said posts are to run up and frame into the principal rafters; prepare and fix a tier of wall-plates for galleries, six by ten inches, and to be well bedded on the wall. Prepare proper timbers for the two sides and end gallery, and well frame said timbers into the principal posts and cocked on to the wall-plates, and filled in with joists framed two feet from centre to centre.

"The roof to be framed with six pairs of principals and properly trussed, with King and Queen posts, collar beams, etc., and to be well framed and secured with iron, suitable to the size of the building, and to be covered with one inch and a quarter inch boards, square jointed, and eighteen inch good pine shingles, laid four and a half inches to the weather and painted with two coat dark colour; good bold moulding, horizontal and raking cornices; to prepare and properly fix to timbers built in for that purpose, and the parapet to be of wood properly prepared and fixed; put two tier of oak beams in the tower, and two beams in each tier, cocked on to the wall, plates of oak also framed at the angles. A floor of joists with one and a half inches rough floor, laid on the top tier of the said beams. Twelve windows to be made and fixed in the two sides and west end of the church, with proper boxed frames and sunk sills; two inch sashes, franked and donelled, to be made in three heights; and the top and bottom sashes to be hung with iron weights, brass pulleys, and patent lines; to be eight squares wide and twelve high to the springing, ten by fourteen glass, with circular heads—all properly wrought and the frames well bedded in the walls. A circular headed window to be made and fixed in the communion recess with mullion transom rail, sunk and moulded plaster, proper boxed frame and sunk sill, two inch sashes properly made twelve squares high and nine do. wide, eleven by fifteen inch glass, the top sash in the centre part to be hung same as the other sashes. The four windows east end to be twenty-four heights, each ten by twelve glass; the upper two windows to be circular heads, to be properly made and single hung—two small windows to be made and fixed in the tower above the roof with solid frames hung with butthings and fastened with two bolts. Prepare and fix angle beads to all the windows to receive the plaster, jambs, as high as the springing of the arch. And prepare and fix proper grounds for the plastering where necessary throughout the building. Prepare and lay a one and a half inch batten floor, wrought, grooved and tongued and well nailed throughout the ground floor. And prepare and fix two good substantial staircases to lead to galleries; the steps to be twelve inches wide and rise about six and a half inches, well blocked and framed carriages and done in a substantial manner. Prepare and fix one, one and a half inches skirting, ten inches deep throughout where necessary, with a good, bold moulding; frame in and fix proper beures and risors for the step-pings in the galleries throughout; and prepare and lay a one and a half inch floor, wrought, grooved, and tongued throughout said galleries, all well nailed and secured. Prepare and fix stout rabbited door frames. Do all the outside entrances with two and a half inch doors, moulded both sides with good bold moulding and raised panels, finished with one and a half inch jamb lining and soffit to correspond with the doors and proportionable doubled faced architraves, and bold band mouldings finished on plinths; prepare and fix a good proportionable frontispiece to each of the side doors, and a suitable iron rimmed lock with brass knots put on each, and to be properly hung with suitable hinges. The principal entrance doors to be made folding; the centre doors between the tower and centre aisle to be made folding also, and the whole of the inside doors to be two-inch framed panelled and moulded, jamb linings and soffit to correspond, and the finishings all to be the same. The four inside doors at the east end to have a seven inch lock on each, and the three doors at the other end to have a door-spring and handle on each. Prepare and fix proper ribs for the centre ecliptic ceiling, and also over the said gallery, twelve inches apart, to receive the fathing; frame and fix a studded partition to form a proper curve for the communion recess. Prepare and fix proper ribs from top of the said partition to form the niche-head and ribs for the panelling of the same to be got to it. True curve and put up in a proper manner a platform to be raised in the said recess, with two mould steps in front and a floor laid throughout. Prepare and fix a pulpit, neatly framed and panelled and moulded, supported by Ionic columns with carved capitals and moulded bases, and geometrical staircase, moulded handrail, to be fitted up with walnut and finished in a neat, workmanlike manner and well secured. The reading desk and clerk's ditto to be framed and panelled with walnut and correspond to the pulpit and finished in a neat manner. Prepare and fix ten Ionic columns properly glued up, of sufficient thickness, and well blacked, properly wrought and diminished, each to have proper carved capitals; two half ones sides of communion to have moulded bases; and prepare and put up two small columns under the end gallery to be wrought solid and to be finished in the same style as the large ones. Prepare and fix a moulded plancier over top of large columns to be continued round the building; and prepare and fix proper bracketing for the plaster entablature over the same, and prepare and fix a framed and panelled plancier round under the gallery beams; and put a proportional entablature all round the bottom of the gallery front; prepare and put up the gallery fronts of walnut, about two feet nine inches high, framed, panelled and moulded, with a neat cornice to be continued round the side and end galleries; fit up the gallery pews to correspond to the height of the fronts; the outside framing and doors next to the aisles to be framed, panelled and moulded of one and a quarter inch walnut; the backs and partitions, etc., to be framed and panelled of one and a half inch pine, finished with seat, book-board, etc., and walnut cappings, and the doors to be hung with japanned, projecting hinges. A platform to be framed for organ-loft, enclosed with proper doors, etc., with a lock on each; prepare and fit up the whole of the lower pews, the outside framing and doors, etc., next to the aisle to be framed, panelled and moulded of one and a half inch walnut, the backs and partitions, etc., to be framed and panelled of one and a half inch pine, finished with seat, book-boards, etc., and walnut cappings; the doors to be all well fitted and hung with japanned, projecting hinges. And all to be finished in a good and proper manner, and according to the true spirit and meaning of the aforesaid agreement, plans and specifications, whether anything shall have been omitted, either in the said agreement or specifications or plans."

The names of the various parties to the contract are all "as familiar as household words" to old Torontonians. D'Arcy Boulton was son of Judge Boulton, and resided at the Grange. His widow afterwards gave the land upon which the Anglican church of St. George was built, and of which church his grandson, the Rev. J. D'Arcy Cayley, is now the rector, while his great grandson, the Rev. Professor Cayley, is one of the "Dons" at Trinity University.

Robert Stanton was the Queen's printer, a man whose character was of the highest. William Henry Draper was the Chief Justice. His bust in marble now adorns the interior of the building which has succeeded the one he assisted to build. James Grant Chewart was a prominent Government official in the Surveyor-General's department, a son of Lieutenant-Colonel Chewart, of the 3rd York Militia. His name, with that of his father, was appended to the address of welcome presented to Lieut.-Governor Gore when he re-assumed the reins of power in Upper Canada after the war of 1812. It is not necessary to say who George Duggan was, he and his doings are so well known to every one. Many even of those of the younger generation can remember him. If he was somewhat eccentric, he was exceedingly kind-hearted, and has left many pleasant memories.

The next three names; those of John Ritchey, Jesse Ketchum and Thomas Silverthorn, are all well known. The first named erected many of the earlier buildings in Toronto, and his name is commemorated by Ritchey's Terrace on Adelaide street. Jesse Ketchum was Jesse Ketchum, a man "sui generis, to slightly alter the words of the poet,

"Each morning saw some task begun,
Each evening saw it done."

Thomas Silverthorn was a prominent agriculturist, many of whose descendants are still in the neighbourhood of Toronto. He was an out, and out Tory, and a most uncompromising churchman.

There is little more to add to the foregoing reminiscences; it is not a history of the congregation that assembled in St. James', and their doings that is being written, but of the building itself, and of those concerned in erecting it. For rather more than eight years this, the second St. James', was in use when the end came.

About 8.30 on January 5th, 1839, a dense volume of smoke was seen issuing from one of the chimneys of the church. Shortly after the flames burst through the roof and quickly spread their devastating ravages throughout the sacred pile. The rest of the story will be best told in the following extract from a private letter written at the time and published in the Palladium, describing the occurrence:

"The appearance was both awful and sublime as the flames caught the pillars and the galleries. There were but few things saved from the devouring element, which continued its devastating course until it left the bare walls a sad and frightful spectacle of this grievous calamity.

"All classes of the people vied with each other to assist in saving the edifice from destruction, but their labours were unavailing. The number of spectators was immense. The militia maintained excellent order by their admirable management in keeping the roads open for the supply of water. The loss of the organ was deeply and bitterly deplored. The building was insured for $30,000."

On this occasion it is said Dr. Strachan was seen standing by watching the destruction of his beloved temple, and whistling the while as a means of relieving his sorrow. Another loss, not mentioned by the Palladium, was the destruction of a very large triplet window of stained glass over the altar of the church, containing three life-size figures by Mr. Craig, a local, historical and ornamental painter, not well skilled in the ecclesiastical style. As home productions these objects were tenderly eyed, but Anna Jameson, accustomed to the cathedrals of Europe, in her work on Canada, denounced them as being "in a vile, tawdry taste."

Dr. Strachan and the people of the congregation, put their shoulders to the wheel, and at once began the construction of a new church, the body of which was of stone, though the spire was of wood. This was opened for divine service in 1839, and continued in use until its destruction by fire on April 7th, 1849. Chief Justice William H. Draper was the chairman of the Building Committee, the builder being J. Worthington. A sad accident occurred on October 31st, 1839, during the rebuilding William Butcher, one of the workmen, fell from the steeple to the roof of the building, he being killed instantly. In its interior arrangements the church was much the same as its predecessor. It is greatly to be regretted that many of the records of St. James' church from 1834 or thereabouts, up to 1842, were, with other papers of value, destroyed in the fires of 1839 and 1849, rendering it impossible to give many details respecting the third parish church of St. James, and the first cathedral of the diocese of Toronto.

In the chancel, which was square, not semi-circular, were three windows with circular heads. The centre one of these contained coloured glass representing Christ bearing a lamb, emblematic of the parable of the Good Shepherd. The western one was filled by a representation of Moses standing before the Burning Bush, the great Israelite being attired in a robe of vivid blue, and he was gazing intently on the sight before him. Galleries ran round the western, eastern and southern sides and end, in the latter being placed the organ, around which the choir sat. A rail and curtain hid the vocalists from the view of the congregation during the reading of the psalms, lessons, and during prayer time. This latter was drawn aside when the preacher ascended the pulpit, and remained so during the sermon. The pulpit was a huge "three decker," while immediately beneath it, on the western side of the aisle, was the pew of the Governor-General, and in the eastern row of seats was the pew reserved for the officers of the garrison.

For many years previous to 1845 a row of Lombardy poplars stood along King street, in front of the church edifice. Mr. George Duggan was the donor and planter of these, and as they flourished with a good, sturdy growth, he took great interest in them. In 1845 it was decided by the vestry that the poplars must go. The question aroused a heated discussion, which was carried on verbally and through the columns of the press. Mr. Duggan warmly represented the removal of the trees, and it was at the risk of grievous bodily harm that the churchwarden of the day, Mr. T. D. Harris, carried into effect the resolution of the vestry. We subjoin a letter published in the Patriot after the decision to remove the trees was arrived at:—

To the Editor of the Patriot:

Dear Sir,—Your paper (along with others) has been very severe in its animadversions against the parties who were instrumental in having the poplar trees in front of the cathedral cut down. My object in troubling you is to show that the churchwardens, to whom the crime is generally attributed, are not to blame in the transaction, and also that the act itself was necessary and justifiable.

In the first place the cutting down was not merely a suggestion of the cathedral officials. It was proposed at a meeting of the vestry on Easter Monday, and carried without opposition; it is therefore unfair that the onus of the transactions of a body should rest on individuals, whose office it is merely to act according to the vote of that body. In the next place the poplar is a species of tree, or rather overgrown weed, very dangerous in the vicinity of any thoroughfare, from its unsoundness; and branches from the trees in question were frequently falling to the great risk of passers-by. Many will recollect the narrow escape the family of a lady on Wellington street had last winter from one of those trees, which, though healthy in appearance, broke near the root, and fell, striking off the eave-trough in its progress. Most providentially it did not fall directly on the house, or there would have been woeful cause to regret the planting of so frail an ornament.

In conclusion, the poplar trees in question, exclusive of their vermin-harbouring propensities, and blighting injury done to the rising generation of better shrubs, which they overshadowed, were not at all in keeping with the sacred edifice they stood before. The Catholic faith should have everything in connection with it seemly and in order. Our pious forefathers knew this, and therefore, planted their churchyards with yews and oaks, emblematic, as far as trees could go, of that holy religion which the Almighty will be with until the end of time. Now the poplar has associations of a far different nature. It was the French tree of liberty, and a more appropriate symbol of a democracy could not be found. Oh! rapid growth and as rapid decay, externally flourishing but rotten at heart. Truly the sans culottes evinced as much discrimination in the selection of emblems as our neighbours across the lake did in choosing their eagle as a crest, a bird noted for its rapacity and plundering instinct. Finally, in the hope that the other papers which have criticized "the barbarous conduct of the wardens," may take the trouble of inserting these few remarks, and likewise change their censures into praise,

I remain, dear sir,
Truly yours,
A SPECTATOR.

Toronto, May 1, 1845.

On the morning of April 7th, 1849, the building just referred to was destroyed by fire. The Globe of that date thus tells the story:

"About half-past one this morning a fire was discovered in some outhouses in the rear of Graham's tavern, King street, and Post's tavern, Nelson street. The fire speedily extended to the main part of Nelson street on the east, consuming Post's tavern, the Patriot office, and turning into King street, to the east, where it burnt all to Mr. Sproule's building, where it stopped. The fire extended to the all the back buildings and the office of the Savings Bank. It then crossed to the west side of Nelson street, to Rolf's tavern, destroying the whole south of Duke street, consuming nearly block, including the Mirror office, to Mr. Nasmith's bakery. Proceeding from Rolf's tavern, the flames laid hold of the corner building, occupied by Mr. O'Donohue, which was speedily consumed, and then they ran along the whole block to Mr. O'Neill's, consuming the valuable stores of Messrs. Hayes, Harris, Cheney, O'Neill and others. About three o'clock the spire of St. James' Cathedral took fire, and the building was entirely destroyed. About the same time the flames broke out in the old City Hall, consuming the greater part of the front buildings, including Mr. McFarlane's small store. The fire extended from the cathedral across to the south side of King street, where a fire lately occurred. The shops of Mr. Rogers and others were with difficulty saved. All that block, extending to Mr. Walter McFarlane's store, was in great danger; some of them had most of their goods removed, and great injury to property was sustained. About five o'clock the flames were in a great measure subdued. The exertions of the firemen were for a long time, as usual, retarded by the want of water. The soldiers of the Rifle Brigade from the garrison were extremely active, and deserve the highest gratitude of the citizens. The loss is estimated at £100,000, but this must be within the mark. The insurance offices are heavy sufferers."

The next week's paper gave the losses and insurance as follows: Church of England Cathedral insured for £8,000, cost of building from £11,000 to £13,000; O'Neil Brothers, building insured for £1,500, stock £4,900; Campbell & Hunter, saddlers, goods removed, no insurance; T. D. Harris, hardware, total loss, the building believed to have been fire-proof, insurance on building £1,500, ditto on stock £7,000; Cheney & Co., hardware, insurance £2,150, stock and valuable furniture entirely destroyed; Thomas Hayes, hardware, stock mostly destroyed, insurance £800; M. P. Hayes, groceries, goods mostly destroyed, insurance £1,800; Thomas Thompson, Mammoth House, large stock of dry goods destroyed, insurance on building £1,000, on stock £1,000, heavy loss; Walker & Hutchinson, goods saved; T. Glasco, insured £450; loss covered; Sabine and Higgins, insured £450, will cover loss; M. O'Donohue, insured £1,700; Patriot office, Messrs. Rowsell and Thompson, insured £1,100; William Hall, dry goods, burnt out a few months ago, insured £750; stock partly saved; Foy & Austin, insured on stock £1,500; Cary & Brown, insured £550; will cover loss; Mead & Co., insured £900; R. C. Gwatkin, agent, and Covey's hotel, no insurance; Mr. Brookes, solicitor, books and papers saved, £1,500; insured on the house belonging to Mr. Brookes, sr.; Post's hotel in Nelson street, insurance £625; Duke street Savings Bank, books and papers saved. On the north-west side of Nelson street, Chas. Robertson, insurance, £525; loss beyond it, £200; Charles Dunlevy, Mirror office, all lost; insurance, £250; Samuel Platt, tavern keeper, insurance on house and stock, £1,125; loss £300 above. Mr. Crapper's foundry, all lost but tools; building insured for £400; H. Macniven, dry goods; stock insured for £100; furniture and stock entirely consumed; William Henderson, dwelling house; insurance £100; John Nasmith, baker, furniture saved; insurance, £400. The external effect of the building when completed by raising the walls a few feet would be very greatly improved. It seems that an insurance to the amount of £5,000 had been effected in England upon the church.

Francis street, east side, containing several offices, shops and small houses, including Messrs. McLean & Jones' chambers; R. Northcote's shop, Swain & Co.'s medicine shop, and Platt's stables. On the north side were Mr. Northcote's dwelling house, Bell & Lemon's tavern, and several empty houses. The loss on the City Hall is estimated at £3,000; insurance on Walter McFarlane's stock in the City Hall, £1,000; building and stock seriously injured, but the £1,750 of insurance will more than cover the loss. Among other objects which fell a prey to the flames in this conflagration was the clock in the belfry of St. James', placed there by the Hon. William Henry Draper, on his retirement from public life several years before.

During the fire Richard Watson, late publisher of the Canadian, and of the Upper Canada Gazette, lost his life in the performance of a friendly act to the proprietors of the Patriot office. Anxious to save some of the types, which no one but a practical printer can properly handle, he rushed up stairs to the highest storey of the office, and, remaining too long, the floor gave way with him. One young man, who was actively engaged in the same occupation, called to Mr. Watson that it was time to go, but he replied that it was time enough yet. This is the last which was heard of him in life. Engines were played on the burning ruins of the Patriot office, and at length, in the afternoon, were found the remains of this unfortunate gentleman, but so mutilated as not to be recognized. The death of Mr. Watson is a subject of universal regret, and it has this distressing aggravation that it leaves a widow and family entirely unprovided for. The journal with which he was connected was not a prosperous one, and the Upper Canada Gazette was about to be abolished when Mr. Watson was appointed printer of the Gazette; at the request of Mr. Stanton, in the year 1844, it was expressly stipulated that no compensation should be given him, if the government found it necessary to discontinue the Gazette or withdraw the emoluments. For twenty years Mr. Watson had the management, as principal and confidential foreman in the government office of the Gazette, and for five years on his own account.

The Vestry meeting of April 9th, 1849, owing to the church having been destroyed by fire on April 7th previously, was held in the Central District school house.

At this meeting the following members of the congregation were appointed a committee for re-building the church: The wardens, Chief Justices J. B. Robinson and W. Draper, Frederick Widder, Peter Paterson, J. G. Hagarty, J. G. Howard, G. Percival Ridout, William Wakefield, Charles Berzy, William Proudfoot, J. E. Small, W. Atkinson, James Brown, Philip M. Van-koughnet, Henry Sherwood, Alexander Dixon, Thomas Helliwell, John Duggan, Sheriff Jarvis, and the Mayor of Toronto. On December 31st, 1897, the only survivor of these gentlemen was Sir. J. G. Hagarty.

After the great fire of 1849 the work of building was again commenced, and the result of it is the St. James cathedral of to-day. The edifice was completed for worship in 1853, from the designs of Mr. F. W. Cumberland, a leading Toronto architect, but many details in Mr. Cumberland's plan remained unrealized for a long time. The tower and spire were absent, as also the fine porches on the east, west and south sides, the turrets at the angles, and the pinnacles and filials of the buttresses.

The corner stone of the present building was laid November 20th, 1850, and the church occupied three years later. The transepts, spires, pinnacles and porches were not finished, however, until 1874. The tower was also built in this progressive style, additions being made until it attained, with the spire, to the top of the vane a height of 310 feet. It is not the highest spire on this continent, as is generally believed, because the spire of the Fifth Avenue Roman Catholic Cathedral of New York city measures 325 feet to the top of the cross; Trinity Church, of that city, runs up 226 feet. The chimes of eight bells cost $12,000, and their sweet music rings out the hours that tell of days rapidly passing by and doubtless carries the thoughts of many a man back to the old English home and its fond memories and tender attachments.

The total length of the building is 193 feet, and its extreme width 108 feet. It cost about $223,000. Of this amount $75,000 remains unpaid. It is built of white brick, with stone mouldings and facings, and combines a modern spirit of adornment with the severe simplicity of the early English gothic in such symmetry and harmony as to make it not only a massive, but a graceful and beautiful structure, and one which is very properly a matter of pride not only to the immediate parishioners, but to the city at large, and it is always visited by those who come to see the special features of this thriving city.

In the churchyard, north-west of the church, is the school-house, where the Anglican Synod holds its sessions. This building, with its furniture, is worth $15,500. A rectory, on Adelaide street, was valued in 1885 at $8,700, and there are valuable park lots connected with the establishment. The assets connected with St. James' cemetery are valued at $40,337.27. The total value of all the buildings and land is about $250,000.

The congregation's clergy comprise the rector, curate and cemetery chaplain. There are fifteen organizations to carry on the work of the church, which are thoroughly organized and faithfully engaged. One by one the links that bind St. James' to the associations of the past are broken by death, and the bulk of the present congregation (1897) have little in common with the early worshippers in the historic building.

The following account of the services in St. James' in 1885 is taken from a newspaper sketch of the church and congregation published in that year. It will be read with interest not only by old, but by present worshippers. The old galleries were then in the church, and the surpliced choir had not been introduced.

"The rector of the parish, Canon Dumoulin, conducted the service as far as the end of the lessons, and from that point, Mr. Hobson, the curate, officiated. The service was read with dignity, and the propriety befitting a service that is so rich and expressive in itself. Familiarity with it on account of its constant repetition engenders a monotonous style of reading that sometimes overlooks the emphasis necessary to develop its beauty, and thus deprives it of that interest in it on the part of the hearer which is essential to its practical benefit. The last sentence of the Lord's Prayer is not used in this service, for the reason that it is not a part of the prayer as Jesus first uttered it. After a preliminary service of three-quarters of an hour, Rev. P. H. DuMoulin ascended the pulpit, to the right of the chancel, and delivered a sermon of 25 minutes' length. He is a gentleman a little past middle life, with stately bearing, a fine presence and an exceedingly rich voice, and in his earlier life undoubtedly possessed the possibilities of oratory. While his sermon on this occasion was not distinguished by any great originality of thought yet it was couched in well-chosen language and brought within the easy comprehension of the 450 listeners. His style of delivery becomes more natural as he loses thought of the surroundings and it is attended with considerable animation and some expressive gesticulation; but the monotone predominates and has a tendency to produce a soothing effect upon the hearer. And this, with the distressingly uncomfortable heat in the building, or, at least, in the gallery, induced a popular condition of somnolency. Many were seen asleep and others resorted to all those little tricks which are used to convey the impression of wakefulness while the prima facie evidence convicts them of the contrary condition.

The following excerpts from the sermon may be somewhat interesting:—

"Let us search and try our ways and turn again to the Lord." This was Mr. Dumoulin's text and from it he deducted, in plain, practical, earnest style, the necessity of the Christian's self-examination.

"There are seasons profitable for spiritual examination. While this is not a cast iron rule or applicable to everyone, yet the public seasons of Lent and Advent are always good.

"Try your condition by your dominant passion. Are you still its obedient and most miserable slave? Is it as powerful now as when you began your Christian ways? These are questions of which every Christian can take stock before his God to-night.

"Try yourselves by the matter of service. There are 15 organizations for work in this church; in which do you work? If you walk about the streets and lanes of this cathedral church and never put forth a finger to help and lift up from sin and degradation and make the poor your brothers and sisters, you haven't heard the voice of Jesus Christ, and your life is not one of service and devotion to your Master. If you can't do anything give something.

"If your spiritual supply is not kept up your spirit will become bankrupt and danger will come.

"There is so much more of conscience than consistency in us that we pass sentence and inflict just punishment on ourselves.

"The object of self-examination is not to dishearten us, but to turn us again to God."

"Some of the pews in the church, which has a seating capacity of about 2,000, are owned as freehold property; others are rented, and those seats in the central aisle and chancel are free at all times to anybody; in this respect St. James' follows an ancient English parish custom. Any stranger has the privilege of taking a seat in the chancel, the very best location in the building. It is a rule to make all the pews free at the evening service; hence the regular worshippers rather give place for "outsiders," and the evening congregations are largely composed of other Church of England people and strangers. The congregation last Sunday evening was very largely of this character; rich people, so far as dress goes, and people in very moderate circumstances, were there; a great many young men were present, and seemed interested in the ritual; a few came in half an hour late, and a few left before the end of the service; the gallery contained many little children, who were soothed to sleep by the monotone running from the chancel down the nave, and even through the musical portion of the service. The singers numbered 25, and were led by a choir-master buried behind the clock and vigorously beating time with the only part of him visible, viz., a kid-gloved hand waving above his head. But it was a reverent congregation; save the usual choir inspection of the people below during prayer there was universal decorum and attention; and as the clear, melodious tones of the reader called forth the people's response, and echo of the united "Amen" of choir and people rose to the vaulted roof and seemed to linger about its graceful curves and lines, a restful and elevated influence uplifted the spirit into a purer atmosphere."

"No criticism of the organist could be made except that of the most favourable kind. He played with precision and taste and with excellent arrangement of stops. The music during the offertory was fine, but the postlude was especially brilliant."

"Correctly speaking, St. James' is not a cathedral, because it has neither the officiating ministers nor the ritualism which properly entitles a church to this name. As the principal and the oldest Anglican church in the city, and as an architectural copy, on a limited scale, of the Salisbury and Lincoln cathedrals of England, it has been given the title. Its historic associations are far-reaching and valuable; its relation to some of the leading citizens of Toronto in the times gone by, and the general style of the building itself, about which are clustered so many memories, invest it with that spirit of reverence we always feel when we stand in the presence of any object that links the throbbing life of the present to the pulseless life of the past."

"This feeling is aroused in the visitor who stands at the entrance of the nave and looks up to the arches 70 feet above his head; a glance along the nave for 112 feet brings the eye to the chancel to the arched dome, richly carved stalls and altars, and its three illuminated and beautifully decorated stained-glass windows. The nave is 44 feet wide, and the body of the church 75 feet; the chancel, the desks and the choir furniture are finished in oak and the other woodwork of the building is pine and grained oak, which gives the church a rather sombre appearance and that yet seems to fall in with the massive stateliness that is so impressive. The style of architecture is early English gothic with additions that materially depart from the simplicity of that ancient style, and yet these departures are so harmonized with the pure gothic that a beautiful effect is produced, and the beholder is not startled by the innovations. The most noticeable contrast is afforded by the magnificent chancel windows, which seem out of place when compared with the severe and simple architectural character of the building.

"The graveyard is long since disused, yet in many parts may be seen slabs of stone and marble, covering bodies long since buried, and when excavations were made for the foundations of the present building, a great quantity of bones was turned up. Very many bodies, however, have been removed to St. James' cemetery, and no burials are now made in the yard, although it is the privilege of a dean to secure sepulture under the church itself. The first dean of this church, Henry James Grasett, who was connected with it as curate and rector 46 years, and who was a man of singularly gentle, scholarly and reverent character, lies buried beneath the communion table in the chancel. The central memorial window was erected as a tribute to him, and testifies the affection and esteem in which he was held. A marble bust of him is placed above the dean's stall, while the north-west memorial window is commemorative of his wife, Sarah Martha, who died in March, 1886.

"Above the bishop's throne is a bust of white marble with a slab of dark stone below bearing an inscription in gilded letters which reads:

"Near this spot rest the mortal remains of John Strachan, first Bishop of Toronto, who departed this life November the 1st, 1867, in the 90th year of his age and the 29th of his episcopate."

"The north-east window is a memorial to Canon Edmond Baldwin, who died May 31, 1870; there is also a marble tablet erected to his memory under the east gallery. A number of memorial tablets are inserted in the walls under the gallery, among them one to Chief Justice Wm. Henry Draper and one to Sir Henry Parker, fifth baronet of Hatburn, Warwickshire. A beautiful inlaid brass tablet near the west door keeps in grateful remembrance the name of Lieut. Wm. Chas. Fitch, killed in action at Batoche, N.W.T., May 12, 1885. It was put there by his brother officers of the Royal Grenadiers. Near it is another bearing the name of Col. George T. Denison. Another brass tablet is especially remarkable because the man who engraved it has given his own name greater prominence than the names of the dead heroes it is designed to honour; still another speaks of Captain J. H. Gamble, a young soldier who fell in her Majesty's service in Afghanistan:

"Standing in this massive church with the immensity of it all about him, with the "dim religious light" falling upon the life-like marble and suggesting the repose of the sleepers beneath his feet it seems to the visitor as if there were a very close relation between the living and the dead.

"Yes, it is appropriate," said an old lady of St. James' church, "and it is pleasant to feel that those who have gone are so near to us."

"In 1872 a fund for the completion of the edifice, in accordance with Mr. Cumberland's plans, was initiated, and in 1873 the building was brought to its present state of perfection. In 1866 the sum of $14,945 was expended in the purchase of a peal of bells and a clock and for their reception in the tower. In 1870, to do honour to the memory of the then recently deceased Bishop—Strachan—the chancel was beautified at a cost of $7,500, by surrounding the spacious apse with an arcade of finely-carved oak, adding seats for the canons, a deaconal stall, a bishop's throne, a pulpit and desk, all in the same style and material, elaborately carved with a life-like bust in white marble of the departed prelate, by Fraser, of Montreal, in a niche constructed for its reception in the western wall of the chancel. Besides Bishop Strachan are also entombed in the chancel Dean H. J. Grasett and his wife. St. James' church is of white brick with stone mouldings and facings. The architecture is early English, modified. The body of the church consists of a nave with low transepts, and, until recently, galleries. The aisles are lighted by triplet windows, and the chancel does not face the east, but turns to the north, the least ecclesiastical of all points of the compass as it was in mediæval times reputed to be the residence of Satan himself. The chancel is apsidal, adorned without by heavy buttresses. Between these are windows with elaborate tracery. The central window has a triple light, and is of rich and luxuriant design. The floral open work roof is an exaggeration of the simple style of first pointed Gothic. The King street entrance has a profusion of ornamentation. The body of the church contains one thousand two hundred and twenty sittings, and there were five hundred additional sittings in the galleries before they were removed during the past year. The spire of St. James' is a credit to the city, and it is no less pleasing to English churchmen to think that from the rude building of 1803 has risen the lovely church of 1889."

Since the foregoing sketch appeared the galleries in St. James' have been taken down and some few alterations effected on the floor of the church also. The choir now occupy the chancel, as do the organ and the organist. The following additional notes may be added respecting the history of St. James'. Rev. Henry James Grasett presided at the Easter meeting of 1847 for the first time as rector, in succession to the Right Rev. John Strachan, D.D., which office he filled for nearly forty years.

On April 24th, 1848, a new font was given to the church, the old one, which had been presented to the congregation by the Rev. W. M. Shaw, M. A., having been sent to Cobourg.

April 9th, 1853, was the date of the Easter Vestry meeting in that year, when a special vote of thanks was passed to J. Tarratt, Esq., of Downton Castle, Shropshire, England, for the gift of a stained glass cleristery window. On May 9th, 1859, a similar vote was passed to Rev. H. J. Grasett, Thomas Gibbs Ridout, Lewis Moffatt, Thomas Dennie Harris, George Taylor Denison and Frederic William Cumberland.

At the Vestry held on April 18th, 1864, a cordial and unanimous vote of thanks was passed to Thomas Dennie Harris for his services as church-warden for twenty-five years. Mr. Harris retired from office that year.

At the Easter vestry meeting, taking place on April 17, 1876, it was reported that the Vienna prize clock, purchased by the committee of citizens of Toronto of all denominations, had been placed in the tower of the church, the vestry duly recorded that they looked upon this act as "a pleasant, practical exhibition of generous Christian liberality on the part of members of other religious bodies in the city, and could not but be hailed by the congregation of St. James' as a delightful recognition of the very agreeable relations which have so long existed between that congregation and the other religious bodies in Toronto."

When the Easter vestry took place in 1882 a vote of condolence on the death of the Very Rev. Dean Grasett was passed by the assembled parishioners, and ordered to be transmitted by the vestry clerk to the family of the late Dean.

In 1888 it was decided by the congregation of St. James' that the whole of the galleries on the eastern and western sides of the building should be removed, and the nave and aisles re-seated. This was done, and the organ placed in the chancel of the church. A surpliced choir was introduced, which took its place in the chancel instead of in the southern gallery, as had hitherto been the custom.

In 1895 covered additions and alterations were made in the adjacent school house, and the rectory was rented to the Children's Aid Society, after having been used as the rectory for more than half a century.

It is somewhat remarkable that, although St. James' has a history of very nearly a century, it has in that time had only five rectors, who were:

Rev. George O'Kill Stuart, 18.0-1811.

Venerable Archdeacon John Strachan, 1811-1839. Consecrated Bishop 1839. Rector 1839-1846.

Rev. Henry James Grasett, 1846-

1882. Rev. Philip Du Moulin, 1882-1896.

Right Rev. E. Sullivan, 1896.

Assistant Clergy — Rev. H. J. Grasett, 1836-1846; Rev. H. Scadding, 1840-1847; Rev. Edmond Baldwin, 1850-1876; Rev. H. J. Boddy, 1858-1863; Rev. H. H. Waters, 1873; Rev. E. Greene, 1876-1884; Rev. W. S. Rainsford, 1878-1883; Rev. Dyson Hague, 1884; Rev. W. Hobson, Rev. J. H. Winterbourne, 1892-1893; Rev. A. H. Manning, 1893; Rev. C. J. Boulden, 1893-1896; Rev. J. C. Mockridge. There were some few others who only remained for a brief period.

The churchwardens of St. James' since 1807 have been these: 1807-08, D'Arcy Boulton and William Allan; 1808-09, Thomas Ridout and William Allan; 1809-10, Samuel Jarvis and William Allan; 1810-11, D. Cameron and William Allan; 1811-12, D. Cameron and John Denison; 1812-15, John Beverley Robinson and H. J. Boulton; 1815-18, Alexander Wood and Thomas Ridout; 1818-23, John Beverley Robinson and H. J. Boulton; 1823-30, J. B. Macaulay; no second warden during this period; 1830-32, J. Washburn and R. Stanton; 1832-41, R. Stanton and C. C. Small; 1841-49, Clarke Gamble and T. D. Harris; 1840-55, Lewis Moffatt and T. D. Harris; 1855-62, Joseph T. Ridout and T. D. Harris; 1862-64, George Duggan and T. D. Harris; 1864-66, George Duggan and Thomas Galt; 1866-68, Clarke

Gamble and George Duggan; 1868-69, G. W. Allan and George Duggan; 1869-72, E. H. Rutherford and Clarke Gamble; 1872-81, J. K. Kerr and Clarke Gamble; 1881-83, Col. C. S. Gzowski and J. K. Kerr; 1883-84, W. R. Brock and J. K. Kerr; 1884-90, W. R. Brock and O. A. Howland; 1890-92, H. J. Grasett and O. A. Howland; 1892-98, H. J. Grasett and R. N. Gooch.

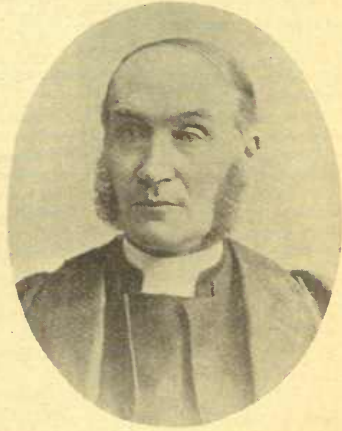

Up to the date of the incorporation of the city the wardens of St. James' were ex-officio on the governing body of the then town of York.

The Rev. Philip DuMoulin was appointed to the see of Niagara as its Bishop in the spring of 1896, and was consecrated in the Church of St. James, where for nearly fourteen years he had been rector, on June 22nd, 1896. The consecrating prelate was the Archbishop of Ontario, Dr. Lewis, assisted by the Bishops of Huron, Algoma and Ottawa. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Dean Carmichael, of Montreal. The scene in St. James' was a most impressive one. There were about a hundred clergymen present, and representative laymen from every part of the province. The congregation was an enormous one, great numbers being unable to obtain admission.

Canon DuMoulin's successor at St. James' was the Right Rev. E. Sullivan, Bishop of Algoma, who resigned his episcopal charge to assume the rectory of St. James'. He preached his first sermon as rector on October 4th, 1896.

The Rev. C. J. Boulden resigned the curacy of St. James' on August 31st, 1896, going to Berthier, Quebec, as head master of St. Alban's school. He was succeeded by Rev. E. C. Wallace, formerly a C. M. S. missionary in the Klondike, and with Mr. Wallace came the Rev. Richard Ashcroft.

Among those who in former and later years have done much in connection with the musical services of St. James' must be mentioned Mrs. Gilkinson, who was organist in the latter "forties" and earlier "fifties." Mr. John Carter, also organist for a very great number of years. Dr. J. Stocks-Hammond, who was a most accomplished musician, as well as a careful and conscientious choir leader. He only lived about twelve months after accepting the post, dying in June, 1897. He was succeeded by Dr. Albert Ham, of Dublin University, who at the time of his appointment to St. James' was organist of the parish church, Taunton, Somersetshire, England. Mr. E.

THE CLERGY OF ST. JAMES, 1798 TO 1899.

G. O'Kill Stuart, Rector, 1798-1811.
H. J. Grasett, D.D., Rector, 1846-82.
E. Sullivan, D.D., 1896-99.
H. Scadding, M.A., Asst., 1840-47.

John Strachan, D.D., Rector, 1811-46.

E. Baldwin, M.A., Asst., 1850-76.

W. Schuch was also a prominent figure for a long time in the choir of St. James', of which he was the master and leader. Under Mr. Schuch's care the choir attained a great degree of proficiency.

Yet a few more words may be said describing the grave yard surrounding the church known since 1839 more familiarly as the Cathedral. Shortly after the first church was commenced it was decided that the ground immediately surrounding the building should be set apart as a graveyard and for that purpose was it used for about 33 years. When St. James' cemetery to the north-east of the city was opened interments entirely ceased in the church yard, while a little later, during the earlier "forties," many of the bodies already buried in the church yard were removed to the cemetery.

Many of the stones which marked the graves in the church yard were removed at the same time as the bodies; of those left some were destroyed at the same time the building was burnt down in 1849, while others have succumbed to the ravages of time, wind and weather. Those tablets still remaining in the church yard inasmuch as they contribute by their inscriptions to the history of the city, present objects of no little note to all those who take an interest in Toronto's past.

Entering the enclosure by the south-western gate the first stone one meets with is immediately under a window on the west side of the church a little to the south of the vestry. It is in memory of Isaac Newton Such and his wife, who died in 1832 and 1834 respectively. The inscription which is extremely laudatory (is entirely in Latin with a quotation in Greek) and is as plainly to be read as when first engraved more than sixty years ago.

Mr. Such was a gentleman — an Englishman, resident in Toronto from the latter "twenties" until his death, who constituted himself a kind of "censor morum" to the community. He was especially severe on the mode of teaching introduced at Upper Canada College (founded in 1829) at the instance of the Principal, the Rev. J. Harris, D.D. By his criticisms he brought down upon himself the wrath of the Rev. Charles Mathews, one of the classical masters at the college. The controversy was short-lived, while Mr. Such's proposals, which were only in advance of the time, have long since been adopted. One of them was the very sensible one, that the Eton Latin Grammar, with English notes, should be substituted for the grammar with notes wholly in Latin. It was opposed, though why it is now impossible to ascertain. Perhaps, for the credit of the intelligence of our predecessors, it is as well the "reasons" are not known.

There are no other stones close to the church on the western side, and but one in the north-western corner, on which the inscription can be read. It is in memory of John Polly, who was the father of a well-known dry-goods salesman, in business on King street forty-five years ago.

On the eastern side of the churchyard, close underneath the wall towards the northern transept, is the stone marking the grave of Frederick Halkett, lieutenant and captain Coldstream Guards, who died at the age of 28, on October 25, 1840.

Captain Halkett was A. D. C. to Sir George Arthur, the Lieutenant-Governor, and his military secretary. He died in Toronto after a very brief illness.

Close to Captain Halkett's grave is that of Simon E. Washburn, who died on September 29, 1837, aged 44 years. His residence was on the north-west corner of Duke and George streets. He was a prominent lawyer in the town of York from 1820 until the time of his death. Two broken stones adjacent to the last named mark the last resting places of "Margaret, the wife of John Hart," died February 2nd, 1837, aged 27, and John Horner Winn, late of London, Eng. This last named stone is undated, though it is probably about 1835. Mr. Winn's daughters were well known school teachers in Toronto 60 years ago. One of them still survives and one was the wife of Robert Britton Denison. She died many years ago, leaving several children.

Another interesting tablet is that to the memory of James Martin Cawdell. It was erected by the Law Society of Upper Canada, to whom Mr. Cawdell was secretary and librarian for several years prior to his death, which took place August 13, 1842.

Yet more memories are stirred by another stone somewhat to the south-east of the Cathedral, the inscription on which is fast becoming obliterated. It is to the memory of Harriet Throckmorton, wife of Dr. Alexander Burnside, a well-known medical practitioner, who resided on Yonge street, on its west side, north of Richmond, for many years. It is not possible now to make the date of her death out accurately, but it appears to be 1839. At Dr. Burnside's death, in 1855, a certain public institution in the city was very greatly benefitted by the provisions of his will. It does not seem too much to suggest that this institution, which has a friend of the doctor's—or, at any rate, one who knew him well—at its head, should put this stone in repair and have the inscription re-cut. The cost would be very trifling.

There are three stones close to the northern end of St. James' which recall the earlier history of the province. These are to the memory of John Monroe, who died May 27, 1830, aged 42; Mrs. Mary Magill, who died October 11th, 1822, aged 55 years, and Charlotte Fothergill, who died November 3rd, 1822, aged 32 years. The first named of these, John Monroe, was a Scotchman by birth, and his place of business was on the south side of King street east, not far from Frederick street. He was a brother of the well-known George Monroe. Mrs. Magill was the widow of Captain Magill, of the Canadian Fencibles. This gentleman must not be confounded with Captain John McGill, of the Queen's Rangers, who lived where now stands the Metropolitan church. Mrs. Fothergill was the wife of Charles Fothergill, the Queen's Printer, and publisher of the Toronto Almanac and Royal Calendar. He also issued a paper known as the Palladium. His offices were on York street. He resided in the eastern portion of the city, at no great distance from where Trinity church now stands. He flourished in Toronto from a little after the close of the war of 1812 until about 1844.

In the north-eastern corner of the church-yard is a stone to the memory of Mary, the wife of Michael Keating, who died on November 24th, 1832, aged 34. This stone is in an excellent state of preservation, and the inscription is almost as clear as when it was first cut sixty-five years since. Mrs. Keating was the proprietor of the British Coffee-house on Front street, a well-known refreshment house in York seventy years since.

Near by Mrs. Keating's grave is that of Lorinna, wife of Stephen Secord, who kept the George and Dragon Inn on the east side of Church street, near King street. She died, aged 34, on December 2nd, 1834. Stephen Secord was a brother-in-law of the famous Laura Secord, whose name is indissolubly connected with the history of the war of 1812, by her famous journey to apprise FitzGibbon of his danger at Beaver Dam.

The stone which marks the grave of William Jackes, who died, aged 71, on August 29th, 1840, is still fairly well preserved. Mr. Jackes was one of the pioneers of York a century since, and many of the family still reside in the city or its neighbourhood.

In the north-eastern portion of the graveyard are stones marking the graves of Emily, the wife of Dr. Mingay, died December 17th, 1834, aged 41; Phoebe, who was Thomas Dandy's wife, and who died in 1839, aged 36, and also that of Mary, the wife of James Jameson, who died April 9th, 1837, at the early age of 26 years. Several children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jameson are interred in the same place. A plain stone in the same locality records that there lies Daniel Ardagh, died January 31st, aged 60. Dr. Mingay was probably attached to the garrison and only a transient resident. No mention of him is to be found in any directories or almanacs of the period. James Jameson was a well known boot and shoe dealer, whose residence and place of business was on the south side of King street east, almost opposite to St. James' church southern door, but a little to the east.

The 13th Regiment of Infantry were evidently quartered in York in 1841, for there is a stone in the extreme north-east corner to the memory of Mary Cragg, who was wife to the Sergeant Master Tailor of that corps. She, at the age of 40, died on October 4th, 1841. Very close to Mrs. Cragg's last resting place is that of Mary Sayre, wife of Mr. Clarke Gamble, who died August 23, 1837, aged 21 years 5 months and 13 days. Mrs. Gamble had been a Miss Boulton. Mr. Gamble, hale and hearty, despite his being almost a nonagenarian, is still amongst us.

A little to the south of the last-named grave is a slab covering a vault, wherein is interred Charlotte, the wife of the Hon. John Henry Dunn, and four of her children. The inscription simply states that the bodies were deposited there in 1870. No specific dates are given, but it is well known that Mrs. Dunn died in the year named.

Near the Dunn vault is the grave of David Stegman, who died in 1834, at the age of 35 years. The last named was a son of David Stegman, who had his place of business on the north side of King street, two or three doors to the east of New street (Jarvis street). David Stegman, the older, was a very prominent man in York in its early days, and was one of the magistrates for the Home District.

Another notable grave was that of Stephen Jarvis, who was born in 1756, and died in 1840, being one of the very last survivors of the U. E. Loyalists. Mr. Jarvis joined the Queen's Rangers under Colonel Simcoe, in 1774, as an ensign, and served all through the Revolutionary war. On peace being concluded, he came to Canada, and subsequently settled in York. He was for many years Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod in the Legislative Council, and subsequently Registrar of the County of York. His residence was in Rosedale, in the old homestead. He was father of the late sheriff, William Botsford Jarvis. His wife, who predeceased her husband by twenty years, is buried in the same grave.

Very near the grave just referred to, is Emily Sarah, the wife of Dr. Widmer, born 1780, died August 31st, 1833. Dr. Widmer at the time of his wife's death, resided on King street, and was in partnership with Dr. Diehl, but he subsequently removed to a large house on Front street east, now No. 222, which is still standing, but in a most dilapidated condition. Dr. Widmer himself died in 1855, and is interred in St. James' cemetery.

There are two stones near here (with all but illegible inscriptions) to the memory of younger members of the Radenurst family, and one to John Kidd, who died in 1841, aged 42.

Mr. Kidd was the Governor of Toronto jail. One of his daughters, married to a prominent citizen and city official, now resides in Toronto (1897).

Another stone close to those last named marks the grave of a man as notable in his time as was Stephen Jarvis, already referred to. It is that of Thomas Ridout. The following is the inscription it bears:

"Sacred to the memory of the Honourable Thomas Ridout, of Sherbourne, Dorsetshire, England, late Surveyor-General of this Province, and member of his Majesty's Legislative Council, who departed this life on the 8th February, 1829, in the 75th year of his age."

Mr. Ridout's descendants to the fifth generation now reside in Toronto and in many different parts of the Dominion. Though it is sixty-eight years since he died, there are still living in Toronto two or three people who can remember him. Next to Mr. Ridout's grave is that of his son John, whose death occurred on July 12th, 1817, when he was but 18 years of age. His life, though short, had been eventful, for he had been a midshipman in the Provincial Navy during the war of 1812, and had distinguished himself in action.

He fell in a duel, fought in a field on the west side of Yonge street, near where Elmsley Villa subsequently stood. This was almost the last duel fought in Canada.

Near by the grave of Mr. Thomas Ridout is the slab covering the grave of William Butcher, formerly of Walspole, Norfolk, England, who was killed on October 21st, 1839, while engaged in erecting the steeple of the church (St. James), which was destroyed by fire ten years later. Butcher, who was 27 years of age, fell from the spire to the roof of the church, a distance of 70 feet, and was taken up dead.

Next to this grave is that of Jane, the wife of John Jefferson, who died aged 39, May 29th, 1837. Mr. Jefferson was a private citizen, and a member of St. James' congregation.

With only a few trifling exceptions, this concludes the story of the stones and their inscriptions in St. James' churchyard. It is to be lamented that the records of where many of the pioneers of the city were buried in the first twenty years of its existence appear to have been utterly lost. As regards scores of the old-time worthies, "no man knows their sepulchre," not even their direct descendants, while the graves of some who did noble service for their king and country are not marked by even the slightest memorial. Sic transit gloria mundi.

Ecclesiastical records to many people present a most fascinating study, as they generally throw a somewhat different light on historical incidents than that in which these are often portrayed by secular historians. Records of births and baptisms, of marriages and of deaths to be found in all church archives, though in the great majority of cases bare statements of fact, are interesting to read, as they carry the readers back, in imagination, at least, to the times when their ancestors were in the flesh, busy as themselves in the pleasures and responsibilities of life.

Our Ontarian ecclesiastical records are none of them of much greater antiquity than a century; in Kingston they date from 1786; in Niagara from about the same date, and in Toronto, formerly York, from 1807. The following records of baptisms, as they are entered in the vestry books of St. James' church, Toronto, will recall to the memory of many, people who once played a prominent part in the affairs of the province:

1. On the 24th day of March, 1807, William, son of Lewis and Margaret Bright, in the presence of the sponsors, William and Sarah Myers and Michael Doyle, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The officiating clergyman in this case was the rector of St. James', the Venerable Archdeacon Stuart, afterwards, in 1811, removed to Kingston. Lewis Bright, named here, was for many years principal messenger in the Provincial House of Assembly. The boy William was in after life a prominent Toronto business man.

2. On Sunday, the 5th day of April, 1807, was baptized Anne, daughter of Patrick and Sarah Heron, in presence of the sponsors, Hugh Carfrae, Anne Carfrae and Catherine Davis, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Two well-known families are here referred to, the Herons and the Carfraes. Hugh Carfrae had formerly served in the Queen's Rangers, under General Simcoe, and the Heron family were among our earliest settlers. Both the Carfraes and the Herons have, in 1897, many descendants in Toronto.

3. On Sunday, the 5th day of April, 1807, was baptized William, son of John and Elizabeth Belford, in presence of the sponsors, Robert Molineaux and William Hill, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

4. On Sunday, the 26th day of April, was baptized Catherine, daughter of Samuel Smith, Esq., and Jane Smith, in presence of the sponsors, Alexander McDonell, Esq., Anne McDonell and Jeanet Cameron, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Mr. Samuel Smith was administrator of Upper Canada in 1818, during the absence on leave of Sir Peregrine Maitland, the Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. McDonell had been a member of the Provincial Legislative Assembly, and represented Glengarry at this date (1807).

5. On Sunday, the 10th day of May, was baptized Jane Ann, daughter of ---- and Jennina Davidson, in presence of the sponsors, Anne Powell, Rachel Crookshank and William Allan, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The families of Chief Justice Powell, of Caer Howell; of Hon. G. Crookshank, of Front street west, and the Allans, of Moss Park, here are represented. In this entry, by some oversight, the name of the child's father has been left blank in the register.

6. On Sunday, the 7th day of June, was baptized Joseph Kendrick, son of Forbes and Jane Mitchell, in presence of the sponsors, Joseph and Sarah Kendrick, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

7. On Sunday, the 21st day of June, 1807, was baptized, John, son of John and Rachel Ostere, in presence of the sponsors, Jacob Keffor and John and Rachel Ostere, by me, George O'Kill Stuart. N. B.—The child aged four months and six days.

John Ostere was an ex-soldier of the Queen's Rangers.

8. On Sunday, the 21st day of June, 1807, was baptized Sarah, daughter of John and Dorothy Fox, in presence of the sponsors, John Doggett, Mary Lamsdale and Dorothy Fox, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

9. On Sunday, the 25th day of October, 1807, was baptized John, son of George and Elizabeth MacDonald, in presence of the sponsors, Michael and Catherine Doyle, with Daniel Stewart, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

10. On Sunday, the 29th day of November, in this church, George O'Kill, son of George O'Kill and Lucy Brooks Stuart, in presence of the sponsors, Alexander Wood and Duncan Cameron, born on the 12th day of October, 1807, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The child here registered was a son of the rector. Alexander Wood and Duncan Cameron were well known residents in York, and zealous Anglicans.

11. On Sunday, the 6th day of December, was baptized William, son of D'Arcy Boulton, Esq., and Elizabeth Boulton (born on the 1st day of December, 1806), in presence of the sponsors, John B. Robinson and Hannah Jarvis, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

It is hardly necessary to make any comments on this entry, all the parties being so well known then and now. This Mr. Darcy Boulton was the builder of "The Grange."

12. On Sunday, the 6th day of December, was baptized in this church Benjamin, son of Thomas and Jane Haynes (born the 1st day of November, in the year 1807), in the presence of the sponsors, Thomas Haynes and John Hunter and Anne Hunter, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

This concludes the entries for 1807. Commencing in 1808 the first entry is:

13. On Wednesday, the 13th day of January, 1808, was baptized Charles Robinson, son of Stephen and Mary Howard (born the 9th day of September, 1808), in the presence of the sponsors, John Robinson, D'Arcy Boulton and Sarah A. Robinson, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

This is the first reference to the Heward family, long prominent residents in York and Toronto.

14. On Sunday, the 17th day of January, 1808, was baptized in this church Catherine, daughter of Valentino and Hannah Fisher (born the 7th day of November, 1805), in the presence of the sponsors, Joseph and Catherine Shepherd, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

15. On Sunday, the 17th day of January, 1808, was baptized in this church Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph and Catherine Shepherd (born the 31st day of May, 1807), in presence of the sponsors, Valentine and Hannah Fisher, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

It will be noticed in these two preceding notices that Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd acted for Mr. and Mrs. Fisher's child, and vice-versa.

16. On Sunday, the 8th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized in this church Daniel, son of Daniel and Margaret Tiers, in the presence of the sponsors, Edward Wright and John Bassill, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Daniel Tiers was the proprietor and builder of the once well known "Red Lion Hotel," Yorkville.

17. On Monday, the 6th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized in this church James Jarvis Scott, son of William and Mary Myers, in the presence of the sponsors, William Jarvis and Thomas Scott, Esq., by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

18. On Sunday, the 3rd day of April, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized Joseph, son of Peter Pettler and Catherine his wife, in the presence of the sponsors, Francis and Mary Belcour (born August 4th, 1806), by me, George O'Kill Stuart, minister.

19. On Wednesday, the 6th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized in this church Mary, daughter of Joseph and Ann Haines, in the presence of the sponsors, Charles Cameron and Ann Haines and Henry Clark, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

20. On Sunday, the 10th day of April, 1808, was baptized in this church Catherine Daggett, daughter of -----, in the presence of the sponsors, Eleazar Daggett and Catherine Moody, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The name of the parents has been omitted in the register.

21. On Sunday, the 1st day of May, 1808, were baptized in this church Peter, John, David, Sarah, Elizabeth, Rachel, children of Peter and Sarah Long, in presence of the sponsors, Albert Hagerman and Charlotte Tiebout, by me, George O'Kill Stuart. N.B.—The six children in the above registry are the offspring of parents who are Africans.

22. On Sunday, the 1st day of May, was baptized in this church, Eliza, daughter of Albert and Nancy Long, in presence of the sponsors, Charlotte Tiebout and Albert Hagerman, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

N.B.—It is to be noted that the Eliza in the above registry is the offspring of parents who are Africans.

Why the archdeacon should go out of his way to note in the register that these were coloured children, it is very difficult to understand.

23. On Sunday, the 15th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized in this church, Jane, daughter of William and Cecilia Shar, in presence of the sponsors, John Higgins and Jane Brooke, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

24. On Sunday, the 29th day of May, was baptized George William, son of George and Anne Skeldon, of His Majesty's 49th Regiment, in presence of the sponsors, George Crookshank, William Allan, Esq., and Rachel Crookshank, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Mr. William Allan, of Moss Park, is one of the gentlemen here mentioned.

25. On Sunday, the 10th day of July, was baptized in this church, Henry, son of Henry and Mary Jackson, in the presence of Isaac and Margaret Mitchell, (born the 6th February, 1808), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

26. And on the same day, John, son of Isaac and Margaret Mitchell, in the presence of the sponsors, Henry Jackson, Charles Cameron and Thomas Armworth and Sarah Cameron (born the 8th day of June), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

27. On Thursday, August the 4th, was baptized Mary, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Forfar, in presence of the sponsors, Mary Thompson and John McBeath (born Thursday, the 14th January, 1808), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

28. On Sunday, the 7th day of August, in the year 1808, was baptized in this church Saltern Hill, son of James and Angelica Givins, in presence of the sponsors, Alexander McDonnell, Esq., and Duncan Cameron, Esq. (born on the 21st day of April, 1808), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Saltern Givins, whose baptism is here recorded, was for a great number of years rector of St. Paul's Anglican church, Toronto.

29. On Sunday, the 7th day of August, in 1808, was baptized in this church James, son of Michael and Catherine Doyle, in presence of the sponsors, Joseph Shaw, Green Despard and Susan Ross (born the 16th day of January, 1808), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

30. On Sunday, the 7th day of August, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized James Robertson and Charles Henry, twin brothers, and sons of William and Margaret Stanton, in presence of the sponsors, D'Arcy Boulton, sr., Esq., D'Arcy Boulton, Jr., Sarah Boulton, Lucy B. Stuart, Commodore John Steel and Nancy Ridout, by me, George O'Kill Stuart. Born March 1st, 1807.

Mr. William Stanton was the King's Printer in York. Lucy B. Stuart was the wife of the Archdeacon, and Commodore John Steel, an officer of the Royal Navy on service in Canada.

31. On Sunday, the 18th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized in this church, Nancy, daughter of Lewis and Margaret Boulton, in the presence of the sponsors, Thomas Deary and Maria Cameron, Margaret Bright instead of Jane Hunter (born the 16th of May, 1808), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

32. On Sunday, the 2nd day of October, in the year 1808, were baptized in this church, Augusta Deborah and Sarah Maria, twin sisters, daughters of Parshall and Rhoda Terry, in presence of the sponsors, William and Hannah Jarvis, Maria Lavinia and Augusta Honorina Jarvis (born 22nd day December, in the year 1796, aged 11 years and upwards), by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Parshall Terry was an ex-lieutenant in Butler's Rangers. Of these two children, Augusta died early in the forties. Sarah became the wife of Edward W. Thomson.

On Sunday, the 11th day of December, 1808, was baptized in this church, Hannah Eliza, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Waugh, in presence of the sponsors, William Halloway and Elizabeth Halloway, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

On Sunday, the 18th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1808, was baptized Allan, son of Alexander McDonnell, Esq., and Anne McDonnell, in presence of the sponsors, Duncan Cameron, Esq., Allan McLean and Isabella McLean, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The spelling of the names in these registers is often defective. McDonnell ought to read McDonell.

On Sunday, the 16th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1809, was baptized in this church George D'Arcy, son of D'Arcy Boulton, Jr., Esq., and Sarah Boulton, in presence of the sponsors, D'Arcy Boulton, sr., Esq., D'Arcy Boulton, Jr., Esq., and Lucy B. Stuart, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

These were the Boultons of Holland House, already referred to several times.

The register does not appear to have been entered up at the time of the baptism in all cases. Many entries were evidently made from private memoranda.

The mode of entering now alters.

Child's name, Alfred Hale; parents, Alfred and Philinda Barrett; sponsors, Henry and Mary Hale; when baptized, 21st November, 1807.

Alfred Hale was an hotel-keeper on the north-west corner of King and Jarvis streets. He afterwards removed to Thornhill.

Child's name, Amanda Simon; parents, Simon and Margaret Druyard; sponsors, Francis Rolannoin and Mary Oreshaw; when baptized, January 20th, 1803.

Child's name, James Henry; parents, Jonas and Rachel Sykes; sponsors, James Everson and Elizabeth Burns; when baptized, January 30th, 1808.

Child's name, Margaret; parents, Alexander Marshall and Mary; sponsors, Lewis Bright and Margaret Bright; when baptized, January 1st, 1809.

This child was the daughter of Alexander and Mary Marshall.

Child's name, Eliza; parents, Charles and Sarah Cameron; sponsors, Phillip Haynes and Ann Haynes; when baptized, February 1st, 1809.

Child's name, Anne; parents, Henry and Mary Jackson; sponsors, Charles and Sarah Cameron; when baptized, April 2nd, 1809.

Child's Name, John; Parents, John & Elizabeth Meredith; Sponsors, John Cais (or Cais) & Jane Haynes; When baptized, April 2nd, 1809.

The seven preceding entries appear to have been entered from some other record, probably a private memorandum book of Dr. Strachan's.

Child's name, Hiram; parents, Jacob and Cynthia Smith; sponsors, William Casted and Elizabeth Cameron; when baptized, June 4th, 1809.

Child's name, Elizabeth Jane; parents, John and Frances Murchison; sponsors, Sarah Bowkett and Jane Brooke; Joseph Hunt; when baptized, June 4th, 1809.

Mr. John Murchison resided on the south-east corner of Duke and George streets. He was an early business man in the town of York, and one of the first seat holders in St. James'. Sarah Bowkett was the wife of Captain Bowkett, of the lake service. Their residence was a cottage on the north-west corner of King and Yonge streets.

Child's name, Benajah; parents, Benajah and Margaret Rouse; sponsors, Joseph Clock and Susannah Anderson; when baptized, June 23rd.

Child's name, Elizabeth; parents, Joseph and Mary Wilcox; sponsors, Susannah Anderson and George Anderson; when baptized, June 23rd.

In all probability this name should be Willcocks. Their is no Wilcox to be found in my records of the period, and Joseph Willcocks was well known.

Child's name, Mary Ann; parents, Joseph and Ann Harvey; sponsors, John Dalton and Sarah Heron; when baptized, July 16th, 1809.

Child's name, Charles; parents, Peter and Catherine Pottier; sponsors, Madeline Belcour and Jean Deblain; when baptized, July 16th, 1809.

Child's name, John Brooks; parents, Rev. George O'Kill Stuart and Lucy B. Stuart; sponsors, William Jarvis, Esq., Charles Stuart and Hannah Jarvis; when baptized, July 16th, 1809.

William Jarvis, here mentioned, was Provincial Secretary.

Child's name, William; parents, James and ——— Ross; sponsors, ——— Wallis and Thomas Moseley and ——— Clinger; when baptized, August 13th, 1809.

Child's name, George and William; parents, John and Elizabeth Elison; sponsors, none; when baptized, February 1st, 1810.

There were two children baptized. Whether twins or not, the register fails to state.

Child's name, Lucy; parents, Abraham and Elizabeth VanHorne; sponsors, none; when baptized, February 10th, 1810.

Child's name, Elizabeth, Nancy, John, Barbara; parents, John and Elizabeth Fearholder; sponsors, Albert Spring and Barbara Spring; when baptized, February 12th, 1810.

Here were four children baptized and registered under the one heading.

Child's name, William Green; parents,

James and Ellen Fenwick; sponsors, Hugh C. Thompson and Mary Thompson; when baptized, March 7th, 1810.

The spelling here is again at fault. Thompson ought to be Thomson.

Child's name, William and James: parents, Thomas and Elizabeth Williams; sponsors, Elizabeth Halloway, John Doggett, Samue. Faircloth and Thomas Tibbs; when baptized, May 6th, 1810.

Here again are two children registered in one entry. Elizabeth Holloway was a connection of the first light-house keeper on Toronto Island.

Child's name, Elizabeth: parents, Francis and Judith Brock; sponsors, none; when baptized, May 14th, 1810.

Child's name, Badger Roblns an adult; parents, sponsors or witnesses, Frederick Herrick and Elizabeth Herrick; when baptized, June 30th, 1810.

Child's name, Euphrosyne Helen; parents, William Firth, Esq., and Anne Firth; sponsors, none; when baptized, November 25th, 1810.

Child's name, William John: parents, John and Sophia Martin; sponsors, William Firth, Esq., and Ann Firth; when baptized, March 11th, 1808.

Child's name, George & Henry: parents, John and Hannah Haache; sponsors (none); when baptized, February 12th, 1811.

Child's name, James; parents, Isiah and Rachel Wilmot; sponsors (none); when baptized, 10th June, 1810.

Isiah Wilmot was a relative of John Ross, the undertaker who interred Brock. He lived near the corner of Peter and Front streets.

Child's Name, Sophia & Henry, were born 23rd October, 1809; Parents, William Stanton.

Note by Dr. Strachan: "Stanton twins born 23rd October, 1809. Sponsors, John Beverley Robinson, Sarah Boulton, Isabella Jarvis. June 10th, 1810."

Child's Name, Mary: Parents, Charles & Sarah Cameron; Sponsors, Mary & John Bury; When baptized, Feb. 14th, 1811.

Child's Name, John; Parents, Richard & Anne House; Sponsors, Matthew Mounting, John Kirby & Elizabeth Meredith; When baptized, September 15th, 1811.

Child's Name, Jane; Parents, Thomas & Sarah Waugh; Sponsors, William Halloway & Sarah Jobbitt; When baptized, Sept. 15th, 1811.

Child's Name, Mary Catherine Eve; Parents, Abraham & Elizabeth Oort; Sponsors, Isaac Cook, Abraham Cook, Mary Bellinger; When baptized, October 23rd, 1811.

The Oorts were of Dutch extraction, and afterwards settled in Markham.

Child's Name, Thomas; Parents, Thomas & Elizabeth Collier; Sponsors, William Lane, David Henderson & Mary Flynn; When baptized, November 11th, 1811.

Child's Name, Lucy Jane; Parents, Geo. O'Kill Stuart & Lucy Brooks Stuart; Sponsors, John B. Robinson, Eliza H. Jarvis & Marianne Campbell; When baptized, May 31st, 1812.

Marianne Campbell, here mentioned, was the wife of Mr. Justice Campbell, whose home was on Duke street.

Child's Name, Eliza Ann; Parents, Samuel Ridout & Eliza Ridout; Sponsors, John Small & Eliza Small; When baptized, June 7th.

Mr. Samuel Ridout was sometime sheriff of York. He died June 6th, 1855, aged 77.

Child's Name, William Henry Robinson; Parents, D'Arcy Boulton & Sarah Boulton; Sponsors, Peter Robinson, Arch. McLean & Eliza Jarvis; When baptized, June 7th, 1812.

Mr. Peter Robinson, mentioned in this entry, was the founder of Peterboro'.

Child's Name, Sydney Smith; Parents, Thomas, Hamilton, — Hamilton; Sponsors, Thos. Deary & Sarah Deary; When baptized, June 7th, 1812.

Child's Name, Sarah; parents. — Stebbings and — Stebbings; sponsors, none.

The date of this baptism is not entered.

Child's name, William; parents, Michael and Mary Keffer; sponsors, John and Rachel Oester; when baptized, June 14th, 1812.

Child's name, Francis Harris; parents, Stephen and Mary Heward; sponsors, A. McLea, Robert Stanton, Isabella Jarvis; when baptized, 14th June,

Mr. F. H. Heward, whose baptism is here recorded, was long a well-known resident in Toronto.

Child's name, Sarah, an adult and African; parents not given; witnesses, Margaret H. Shaw and Sophia Shaw; when baptized, June 21st, 1812.

The sponsors of Sarah, "an adult and African," the Misses Shaw, were daughters of Major-General Aeneas Shaw, who resided at Oak Hill, in the north-west portion of the city.

Child's name, John James; parents, Benoni and Hannah Lanxon; sponsors, Peter Ernst and John Wyckhart; when baptized, February 11th, 1812.

Child's name, Eleanor; parents, Thomas and Elizabeth Forfar; sponsors, none; when baptized, March 14th, 1812.

Child's name, Lewis, Samuel, John; parents, Samuel and Mary Wilmot; sponsors, Quetton St. George and — Miles; when baptized, March 18th, 1812.

Child's name, Harriet Ann Pentz; parents, John Johnston, Lieutenant in the Canadian Regiment, and his wife Catherine Johnson; sponsors, none; when baptized, March 25th, 1812.

Child's name, Matilda; parents, William and Esther Barber; sponsors, Benjamin Cozens and Susan Ross; when baptized, April 22nd, 1812.

Mr. Benjamin Cozens, one of the sponsors referred to here, is credited with having erected the first house in York. It is only right to add that more than one person claims this honour.

Child's name, James Alexander and Margaret Leah; parents, Col. Samuel Smith and — Smith; sponsors, William Allan, Hannah Jarvis, Augusta N. McCormick, Duncan Cameron; when baptized, June 24th, 1812.

These were the children of Colonel Smith, afterwards Administrator of the Province.

Child's name, Helen McPherson; parents, Colonel McPherson and Mrs. McPherson; sponsors, none; when baptized, June 21st; born, April, 1812.

This entry was made some months after the baptism.

Child's name, Mary Ann; parents, George and Mary Duggan; sponsors, Frances Murchison and — Murray; when baptized, June 29th, 1812.

Few people were better known in Toronto than was Colonel George Duggan. He was a strong supporter of St. James', and in 1818 gave a row of poplar trees to be planted in front of the church, and greatly resented their necessary removal many years later. He resided on the south-east corner of George and King streets.

Child's name, Mary Duggan, an adult; witnesses, Frances Murchison and — Murray; when baptized, June 29th, 1812.

Child's name, Francis Gore; parents, William and — Stanton; sponsors, John Robinson, Augusta McCormick; when baptized, June 29th, 1812.

This child of Mr. Stanton's was called after the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Francis Gore. The male sponsor should be described as John B. Robinson.

Child's name, Isaac Brock; parents, William and — Stanton; sponsors, A. MacLean and — Selby; when baptized, June 29th, 1812.

Child's name, William Eneas Fuller; parents, Major Thos. Richard Fuller and his wife Mary Fuller; sponsors, Major-General Eneas Shaw and Margaret Shaw; when baptized, August 2nd, 1812.

The names here are all familiar in Canadian history. Major Fuller, like Major-General Shaw, had served in the revolutionary war, and also in that of 1812.

Child's name, Elizabeth Kean; parents, Michael Kean and Elizabeth Kean, alias Hunt; sponsors, Francis Elizabeth, alias Bowland Hulloran, Richard Company, Eleanor Company, alias Hunt; when baptized, November 15th, 1812.

Child's name, Charles Grigg; parents, John Grigg and Eliza Grigg, 41st Regiment; sponsors, John Scott, William Fox and Elizabeth Scott; when baptized, December 20th, 1812.

Child's name, William Needham; parents, William Needham and Catherine Needham, of the Artillery; sponsors, Daniel Sweeney, James Giver and Martha Sweeney; when baptized, December 20th, 1812.

Child's name, Samuel McMurray; parents, Bradshaw McMurray and Mary McMurray; sponsors, Joseph Shaw, Daniel B. Walls, Jane Walls; when baptized, December 27th, 1812.

Child's Name, Louisa Stebbins; Parents, Amasa Stebbins, Catherine Stebbins; Sponsors, Rudolph Post, Elizabeth Post; Date, 29th August, 1814.

This entry is the first in which the family of Jordan Post is referred to in these records. They resided on the south-east corner of King and Bay streets.

Child's Name, Mary Louisa; Parents, Joseph Renaud, Mary Louisa Rneau; Sponsors, Justin Berthray, Lisette Berthray, Joel Judd; 2nd Sept., 1814; Born 1st Sept. 1814.

Childs Name, Catherine; Parents, William Shaw, Elizabeth Shaw; Sponsors, Ann Glennon; 8th September, 1814; born 2nd October, 1812.

Child's Name, Alextian (sic); Parents, Joseph Abbit, Christian Abbit; Sponsors, Christian Abbit; 11th September, 1814.

Child's Name, John Presley; Parents, Patrick Benson & Catherine Benson; Sponsors, Helener McLaughlin, Mary Himes, Stephen Bellair; 24th September, & Born 17th., 1814.

Child's Name, Thomas Ralph Hamilton;

Parents, Christopher Hamilton, Col. in the Army & Frances Hamilton; Sponsors, Ann Powell, William Drummond Powell & Thomas Scott, Chief Justice; Date, 28th September, Born 25th August, 1814.

There is evidently a mistake here in the name William Drummond Powell. It ought to be William Dummer.

Child's Name, William Benson; Parents, Esekiel Benson & Ann Benson; Sponsors, Haynes Bennet, Hannah Meley, 1st October, 1814.

Child's Name, Robert Keirman; Parents, George Keirman, Quarter Mr. 8th Regt., Ellinor Keirman; Sponsors, Patrick Hartney & Ann Hartney; 3rd October, 1814.

Child's Name, Isabella; Parents, Patrick Hartney, Barrack master, Mary Hartney; Sponsors, Edward Hartney, Sarah Devry & Frances Murohison; 20th November, 1814.

Frances Murchison was wife of Mr. John Murchison, who resided in Toronto until his death, in 1870.

Child's Name, Margaret; Parents, Patrick Mullins, private in the 89th Regt., Catherine Mullins; Sponsors, John Jones, Sergt. 89 Regt., Catherine Sunnet; 20 Nov., born 13, 1814.

Child's Name, Mary Ann; Parents, James Millar, Colour Sergt. 2 Batt. 89 Regt., Mary Millar; Sponsors, Alexander Lang, Colour Sergeant 2nd Batt. 89th Regt., Catherine Dun & Elizabeth Warran; 24th Novr.; Born 12th Novr., 1814.

Child's Name, James Outor; Parents, James Houten, Mary Houten; Sponsors, Thomas Shorden, Corporal, 89 Regt., 2nd Batt., John McCormick; 1st Decr.; Born 20th of November, 1814.

Child's Name, Frances Amelia; Parents, Lieut. Col. Maule & Frances Maule; Sponsors, Star Jarvis, William Jarvis & Betsy & Isabel Jarvis; 5th December, 1814.

Spelling here is again at fault in the name of Star Jarvis. It ought to be Starr.

Child's Name Dorothea McGregor Lampson; Parents, Hannah Lampson, Benoni Lampson; Sponsors, Henry Clune, Hannah Cummins; 11th December, 1814.

A note is added to this entry by Dr. Strachan: "Sent the above to Dr. Mevill in my annual letter."

Child's Name, Ann Elizabeth Fitzgerald; Parents, Dennis Fitzgerald, Officer in the 41st Regt., Maria Fitzgerald; Sponsors, Mary Fitzgibbon, Daniel Brooks; 14 December, 1814.

Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon, one of the sponsors, had been a Miss Washburn, sister of Simon Washburn. Daniel Brooke, not Brooks, was the ancestor of a family, in 1897, still members of St. James' congregation.

Child's Name, Eliza; Parents, Forbes Mitchell, Glengary Regt., & Jean Mitchell; Sponsors, James Webber; 22 December, 1814.

Child's Name, Elizabeth; Parents, Thomas Early, 89th Regt., Mary Early; Sponsors, Thomas Edwards, Bridget Milken; 24th December, 1814; Born 16th.

Child's Name, Mary Ann; Parents, Patrick Gilliker, corporal 6th Regt., Mary Gilliker; Sponsors, Catherine Ury, William Small, Small, 6th Regt., Corporal John Riley, 6th Regt.; 24 December, & Born 18, 1814.

Child's Name, Daniel Godfrey; Parents, Dennis Kelly, Color Sergt. of 41st. & Dolly Kelly; Sponsors, Stephen Iron & Mary Bannister; 9 January, 1815.

Child's Name, Enoch; Parents, Thomas Price, Corporal 89th Regt., & Elizabeth Price; Sponsors, Joseph Broadbent, Sergt., Elizabeth Millar; 9th January, 1815.

Child's Name, John Cochrane; Parents, Robert M. Cochrane, Capt. of the Glengarry Regt., & Harriett Cochrane; Sponsors, James Lynar, Esq., Lieut. William Levar, 103 Regt., & Mrs. Grace Fawcett; 13th January, 1815.

Mrs. Fawcett was the wife of Lieut. Fawcett, an officer of the Imperial service.

Child's Name, Jean; Parents, Timothy Dillon, 89 Regt., Prl. Helen Dillon; Sponsors, Mary Arkirk & Michael Macklem; Date, 15 Jan'y, 1815.

It is all but impossible to decipher the names in this entry. Mary Arkirk may be incorrect, the writing in the original being so bad.

Child's Name, Jean; Parents, Lewis Bright, Margaret Bright; Sponsors, Bernard McGulre, Sergt. Major Glen Regt., Ann McGulre; Date, 15th January, 1815.

Child's Name, John Raffol; Parents, Antony Raffol, Glen Regt., & Josette Raffol; Sponsors, Francis Duke, Margaret Shlor; Date, 15th January, 1815.

Child's Name, Mary; Parents, John Diver, Mary Diver; Sponsors, Jacob Clock, Stephen Whitney; Aged 17, and just going to be married.

This last sentence is in the place of the date. This was probably in February or March.

Child's Name, Catherine; Parents, Jacob Snyder & Hannah Snyder; Sponsors, John Campbell; Date, ~~Apr~~ 1 month, baptized 12th April, 1815.

Child's Name, Chas. William; Parents, Thomas McCormick, Esq., Augusta McCormick; Sponsors, James Hamilton, Robert Nichol, Esq., Maria Lavinia Hamilton, York.

Child's Name, Leonard; Parents, Leonard Marsh & Mary Marsh; Sponsors (none); When baptized, York Township, 1 May, 1815; 1 5 months old.

Child's Name, George; Parents, Charles & Louisa Riamount, private in Canadian Regt.; Sponsors, Claude Carter, Mary Waggoner; When baptized, 30th May, 1815; Born, 15th May, 1815.

The Canadian Regiment so often referred to in these registers was the Canadian Fencibles, organized during the war of 1812.

Child's Name, John Bedanois; Parents, John Bedanois, private in Canadian Regt., & Maria Louise Bedanois; Sponsors, Alexander Galabois & Mary Bedanois; Born 10 April, 1815; baptized 10 June, 1815.

Child's Name, Holou; Parents, Andrew McGlashen & Alison McGlashen; Sponsors, the father stood alone, the mother dead; the child three years old; baptized 1 July.

The name of Mrs. McGlashen, namely, Alison, is correct, it is not Alicia, as might be supposed.

Child's Name, John; Parents, John Bowman, Mary Bowman; Sponsors, William Miller, David Knight; One year old, 2 July, 1815.

Child's Name, Mary; Parents, David Ferrier, Mary Ferrier; Sponsors, Mary Knight; One year old; baptized 3 July, 1815.

Child's Name, John Adamson; Parents, John Adamson, Sergt. G. L. I., Christina Adamson; Sponsors, James McLean, Mary Quall, Samuel Wood; Date, 19 May, 1816.

Child's Name, Margaret Mowat; Parents, William Allan, Esq., Leah Allan; Sponsors, Jane Gamble, Isabella Horne, Chas. Richard Horne; Date, 30th May, 1816.

Chas. Richard Horne is a mistake. The Christian names ought to be reversed. Dr. Horne was for many years surgeon in the Glengarry Light Infantry, and on the disbandment of that corps in 1817 entered into business and became editor and publisher of the York Gazette, continuing until 1821, when he became principal teller in the Bank of Upper Canada. During the rebellion of 1837 his house at Yorkville was burned by the insurgents, to whom he had made himself obnoxious. His wife, Isabella, was a daughter of Dr. Gamble and a sister to Jane Gamble, also to Mrs. Allan, referred to in this entry.

Child's Name, Charles Richard; Parents, Charles Richard Horne, Surgeon, Isabella Horne; Sponsors, William Allan, Esq., Leah Allan, John Gamble; Date, 30 May, 1816.

Dr. Horne's names are again misplaced in this entry, as in the last. John Gamble was engaged in business in York with Mr. T. W. Birchall, afterwards resided at Pine Grove, and for many years was a member of the Provincial Parliament.

Child's Name, Mary; Parents, Robert Cochrane, Capt. Glengary Regt., & Harriett Cochrane; Sponsors, Lieut. Kemble, Glen. Regt., & Mrs. Kemble; Date, 26 May, 1816.

Child's Name, Mary Lizzie; Parents, Darcy Boulton & Sally Boulton; Sponsors, Elizabeth Berner & Peter Robison; Date, 29 May, 1816.

The original writing is extremely difficult to decipher. There is scarcely any doubt that Peter Robison means Peter Robinson.

Child's Name, Stephen; Parents, Abraham Phoenix, Eleanor Phoenix; Sponsors, William Hodkeson; Date, 6 August, 1816.

Child's Name, John Joseph; Parents, John Murchison, Frances Murchison; Sponsors, Barbary Murcheson, John H. Campbell, Duncan Murcheson; Date, 13 August, 1816.

Child's Name, William Secord; Parents, John Secord & Janet Secord; Sponsors, Joseph B. Clench, Abraham Secord & Serena Clench; Date, Ancaster, 5 June, 1816.

This is the family to which the famous Laura Secord, of Beaver Dams fame, belonged. Joseph B. Clench was also a member of a Niagara family.

Child's Name, Elizabeth Marsh; Parents, Lieut. Col. Maule, Mrs. Maule; Sponsors, William Henry Robinson, commissary General, Catherine Robinson; Date, 6 July, 1816.

Many of the descendants of Colonel and Mrs. Maule, in 1897, still reside in or near Toronto.

Child's Name, Hercules Burwell, Isaac Brock Burwell & Alex. Burwell; Parents, Mahlon Burwell, Sarah Burwell; Sponsors, John Purvis, Stephen Backus & Lydia Paterson; Date, Port Talbot, 9 June, 1816.

Mahlon Burwell was not a Toronto man at this date, but resided at Port Talbot. He was a Government land surveyor, duly licensed and appointed 25th April, 1805.

Child's Name, William Henry, Robinson Arnold; Parents, Thomas Arnold, Commissary, Mary Arnold; Sponsors, Lt. Col. Nath. Coffin, Adjt. Genl. Militia, James Coffin, Asst. Com.; Date., August 18, 1816.

Thomas Arnold was an official in the commissariat department, Colonel Coffin was A. G. of militia in Upper Canada for a lengthened period. He resided on Front street, in the house at one time occupied by Captain Bonycastle. R. N.

Child's Name, Joseph, Walter, Mary, Hannah, Catherine Ann, Paterson; Parents, Leslie Paterson & Lydia Paterson; Sponsors, Mahlon Burwell, Sarah Burwell; Date, Port Talbot, 9 June, 1816.

Child's Name, William, Leslie, Catherine, Richard, Mary Ann & John Pearce; Parents, John Pearce & Francis Pearce; Sponsors, Leslie Paterson & Lydia Paterson; Date, Port Talbot, 9 June, 1816.

Child's Name, Andrew Backus, Joseph Backus; Parents, John Backus & Ann Backus; Date, Port Talbot, 9 June, 1816.

Child's Name, Nelson Parker, Hyder Parker; Parents, Stephen & Ann Parker; Date, Port Talbot, 9th June, 1816.

Child's Name, John & James Harrison; Parents, Lovel Harrison, Margaret Harrison.

Child's Name, Amelia, John, Rebecca, Alexander Ross; Parents, Alexander Ross, Rebecca Ross; Date, Port Talbot, 10 June, 1816.

Child's Name, Margaret, Dorothy, Robert, Sarah Mitchell; Parents, John Mitchell, Jean Mitchell; Date, Port Talbot, 10 June, 1816.

Child's Name, James, John, Charles, George Keane; Parents, Edward Keane, J. Keane; Date, Port Talbot, 10 June, 1816.

Child's Name, Alexander Goyt, a young man, on the 6th & 7th of June stopped at the Indian village on the Grand River, & baptized 74 Children & A adults.

Dr Strachan was evidently on a missionary tour through a portion of the archdeaconry, which included the whole of Upper Canada. A few days later he is at "Yonge street," which means anywhere on that street between York and Penetanguishene.

Child's Name, Jacob; Parents, Michael Keifer, Mary Keifer; Sponsors, Elizabeth Keifer; Date, 14 July, 1816.

Child's Name, Charlotte; Parents, John Berthray, Mary Clarke; Sponsors, Norbel Dupuis, Jan Dupuis; ate, 16 July, 1816.

Child's Name, Thomas, Elizabeth Mulholland; Parents, Henry Mulholland, Jane Mulholland; Sponsors, Richard Heron, Harriett Heron; Date, Yonge Street, 27 July, 1816.

Two children were here entered. The Herons referred to were probably a family residing in Markham.

Child's Name, George, Jane, William Hill; Parents, William Hill, Margaret Hill; Sponsors, George Bond, Margaret Hill; Date, 27 July, 1816.

Child's Name, Elizabeth, Thomas, Nancy; Parents, Richard Heron, Harriett Heron; Sponsors, Eben. White, Grace McIntosh; Date, 27 July, 1816.

These two entries, three children in each, were also on Yonge street.

Child's Name, Margaret; Parents, Francis Lee, Priscilla Lee; Sponsors, Peter Whitney, Margaret Whitney; 27 July, 1816.

Child's Name, Michael, Dye; Parents, Michael Whitman, Mary Whitman; Sponsors, Michael Dye, Mary Dye; 27 July, 1816.

These two last entries conclude the Yonge street list, which included ten children.

Child's Name, Mary Scarlet Thompson; Parents, Edward Thompson & his wife Sarah Maria Thompson; Sponsors, Eliza Lee, John Scarlet, Mary Scarlet; Date, 8 October, 1816.

Child's Name, Edward Christopher Scarlet; Parents, John Scarlet, Mary Scarlet; Sponsors, Sarah Maria Thompson, Edward William Thompson, William Hands; Date, 8 Oct., 1816.

In these last two entries the spelling is wrong. Thompson should be Thomson, and Scarlet Scarlett. E. C. Scarlett died in 1895, and was interred in St. James' cemetery. John Scarlett was a well-known Government official at this date, who resided near the Hummer. He died in 1866, at a great age. His wife, Mary, was a sister of E. W. Thomson, who died in 1865.

Child's Name, William Christian; Parents, Ann, Henry Stover; Sponsors, William Waggoner, Christian Smith; Date, 29 January, 1817, Markham.

Child's Name, Anna Sophia; Parents, Sophia Smith & Christian Smith; Sponsors, William Waggoner. Anna Steyer; date, 29 January, 1817, Markham.

Child's Name, Henry Quanze; Parents, Frederick Quanze, Elizabeth Quanze; Sponsors, Catherine Langhest, George Langhest; Date, 8 February, 1817, Markham.

Child's Name, Phoebe Helmaker; Parents, John Helmaker, Mary Helmaker; Sponsors, Frederick Quanze & Elizabeth Quanze; 8 February, 1817, Markham.

Child's Name, Isalah Whitesides; Parents, Samuel Whitesides, Dolly Whitesides; Sponsors, Isalah Wilmot, Rachel Wilmot; Date, 8 February, 1817, Markham.

Child's Name, Mary Ann Helmkey; Parents, Ann Helmkey & Frederick Helmkey; Sponsors, Ann Lena, Mary Helmkey; Date, 8 Feb., 1817.

Child's Name, Mary Fitzgibbon; Parents, Capt. Fitzgibbon & Mary Fitzgibbon; Sponsors, John Sexton, Phoebe Baldwin, Margaret Fitzgibbon.

This was the child of the well-known hero of Beaver Dams, in the war of 1812.

Child's Name, Mary Isabella; Parents, Capt. Fitzgerald, Sally Ann; Sponsors, Date, Born 1 January; Baptized 5th September.

This entry is a doubtful one, as it is partly scored through in ink.

Child's Name, Thomas Abbott; Parents, — Abbott, 37 Regt.; Mrs. Abbott; Sponsors, George Anderson, James Millar, Catherine Burke; Date, 16 Feb., 1817.

Child's Name, George; Parents, Thomas Joyce, Elizabeth Joyce; Date, 2 Jan.

Another date is attached to this entry, which it is impossible to make out, and it may mean anything or nothing.

Child's Name, Robert Lackey, a young man, baptized 2nd March, 1817. David Lackey, a young man, baptized 2nd March, 1817.

Child's Name, Salina Serviner; Parents, Thomas Pool-Catherine; Sponsors, Jeremiah Schran, Christianna Abbot; Date, From the Thames, March 3, 1817.

Child's Name, Mary; Parents, Captain Fitzgerald, Mrs. Fitzgerald; Sponsors, Samuel Jarvis, Miss Eliza Powell, Miss Mary Powell; Date, 22 March, 1817.

Capt. Fitzgerald was an officer in the Glengarry Light Infantry. He had married Sally Ann, daughter of Lieut.-Col. Chewett, 3rd East York Militia.

Child's Name, Sally Ann McGuire Thomas; Parents, Christian Thomas, Sally Ann Thomas; Sponsors, Barney McGuire, Walter Moody, Margaret McGuire, Elizabeth Bright; Date, 31 March, 1817.

Child's Name, Nancy Mumberston, Mariah Wills, William Harrison. These three persons were of ripe years and came voluntarily forward to be baptized; Date, 27 April, 1817.

Child's Name, Catherine Humberston; Parents, — Humberston & Ann Humberston; Sponsors, William Moore, Sarah Moore; Date, 27 April, 1817.

Immediately following the last entry is one of a child's baptism, that of Jane Ann Wills. No parents names are given and no date. James Wills and Ann Humberstone are named as witnesses. The name of Humberston is evidently Humberstone, but has been written as it is here printed.

Child's Name, Joshua Harrison; Parents, William Harrison, Charlotte Harrison; Sponsors, Ulet Wright, Jemima Wright; Date, 18 May.

A note is appended to the foot of this register of Joshua Harrison, that on the same date "Charlotte Harrison, riper years," was baptized.

Child's Name, Richard Lambert Fitzgerald; Parents, Dennis Fitzgerald, Maria Fitzgerald; Sponsors, Francis Jackson, Margaret Jackson; Date, 18 May, 1817.

Child's Name, Angus Duncan; Parents, Alexander McDonell, Mrs. M. McDonell; Sponsors, John Beikie, Robert Dickson, Junior; Date, 23rd June, 1817.

This entry contains the first reference to Mr. John Beikie, sometime sheriff of the Home District, afterwards clerk of the Executive Council. He was a leading militia officer and prominent Freemason. Robert Dickson belonged to Niagara.

Child's Name, Henrietta; Sponsors, Hon. Thomas Clarke, Mrs. Clarke & Miss Ann Smith; Date, 23rd June, 1817.

This last entry is also that of a child of Alexander McDonell's. Hon. Thomas Clark (the name is spelt incorrectly in the register) was a resident of Queens-ton and a member of the Legislative Council, appointed October 7th, 1815. Miss Smith was a sister of Colonel Smith, sometime Administrator of the province.

Child's Name, Eliza Ann; Parents, Thomas Cooper, Mary Paps; Sponsors, Frederick Fredack & Elizabeth Fredack; Date, 25 June, 1817.

Child's Name, Margaret; Parents, John Doyell, Margaret Doyell; Sponsors, Ann Sharp, Jean Stewart; Date, 26 June, 1817.

Child's Name, Eliphabet Henry Cummins Barrett; Parents, Alfred Barrett & Phyllida Barrett; Sponsors, James McMullen, Charissa Rushmere; Date, 14 August, 1817; Born, 26 Nov., 1817.

Child's Name, William; Parents, Robert Chambers, private in 70th Regt., Sarah Chambers; Sponsors, Thomas O'Donnel, Samuel Johnson, Susan Chapman, Eliza Best Hollis; Date, 27 August, 1817.

Child's Name, Hannah; Parents, Thomas Hickley, Isabel Hickley; Sponsors, William Washer, Hannah Washer, Sarah Knot; Date, 13 August, 1817.

Child's Name, James William; Parents, — Bridgeland; Sponsors, Mary Weader (or Treader), James Hagner; Date, 13 August, 1817; Born 9 April, 1817.

Child's Name, Robert Wells; Parents, Lieut.-Col. Wells, Mrs. Wells; Date, 25 September, 1817.

This was the eldest son of Lieut.-Col. Joseph Wells, of Davenport. A granddaughter of Colonel Wells, in 1897, occupies the homestead.

Child's Name, Caroline Maule; Parents, Lieut.-Col. John Maule, Frances Maule; Sponsors, John Jarvis, Caroline Maule, Caroline Grant.

Child's Name, Esther Borden Dennison, aged 26 years; John Dennison, Sophia Dennison, witnesses; Date, 16 Sept., 1817.

The spelling here is wrong, it should be Denison. The woman whose baptism is here recorded was the wife of George Taylor Denison, and John and Sophia Denison were her father and mother-in-law.

Child's Name, Charles Thomas Fitzgibbon; Parents, Capt. Fitzgibbon, Ann Fitzgibbon; Sponsors, Thomas Gagy, George Thomas Fred Ireland, Ann Ireland; Date, 3 October, 1817.

Charles T. Fitz-Gibbon, for so the name ought to be written, was in after years an official in the provincial civil service. His widow still survives (1897).

Child's Name, Elizabeth Knott, Hannah Knott; Parents, William Knott, Elizabeth Knott his wife; Sponsors, Sarah Lancaster, Sarah Sheldon, John Ross, Martha Murray, Jane Murray; Date, 30 September, 1817.

William Knott was a sergeant in the York Volunteers, and was with Brock when he fell at Queenston Heights. Of these children registered, Elizabeth married, in 1833, Samuel Rogers, the painter, of Bay street.

Child's Name, Sophia Taylor Denison; Parents, Esther Dennison, George Dennison; Sponsors, Sophia Dennison, Maria Dennison, Thomas Dennison; Date, 30 September, 1817; the child 8 years.

This child, Sophia Denison—not Dennison—married John Fenning's Taylor, her first cousin.

Child's Name, Eliza Margaret Dennison; Parents, Esther Dennison, George Dennison; Sponsors, Sophia Dennison, Eliza Lee, John Dennison; Date, 30 September; the child 5 years old.

These entries are wrong in some of their details. The children baptized were those of George Taylor Denison and Esther Borden Denison, the latter a daughter of Richard Lippincott, whose name was very prominently connected with the war of 1812. Mrs. Eliza Lee was the wife of Dr. Lee, a parliamentary official, and who resided for some time on the south-east corner of George and Duke streets.

Child's Name, Richard Lippincott Dennison; Parents, Sophia Dennison, Geo. Dennison; Sponsors, John Dennison, George Taylor Dennison, and Esther P. Dennison; Date, 30th September; aged three years.

Child's Name, George Taylor Dennison; Parents, Sophia, George Dennison; Sponsors, William Lee, Esq., John Dennison, Sophia Dennison; Date 30 Sept.; aged 15 months.

In both of these entries the name of the mother of the children is entered wrongly. It ought to be Esther Borden Denison. Respecting these two boys in after life, Richard Lippincott Denison resided at Dovercourt, on Dundas street, died 1878; and George Taylor Denison, jr., at Rusholme, also on Dundas street, died 1873. Their father, George Taylor Denison, resided at Belle Vue, on Queen street west, died 1853, and their grandfather, John Denison, first at Castle Frank, then at Petersfield, on Queen street west, near Richmond street, afterwards at Weston, died 1826.

Child's Name, Elizabeth Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, Eliza Lee, John Houghton; Date 6th, 1817.

Elizabeth Playter was the daughter of Captain John Playter, whose residence was to the north-east of the city, over the Don.

Child's Name, Eliza Ann Philpot; Parents, George Philpot. — Philpot; Sponsors, Ann Philpot, Eliza McNabb; date, October, 1817.

The next six entries, numbered from 1 to 6, are all children of John Playter and his wife. The entry of Eliza Ann Philpot's baptism is sandwiched in among them.

1. Child's Name, Emmanuel Playter & Charlotte Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, John Dennison, Sarah Playter, Jane Smith, James Chewett; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

2. Child's Name, William Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, Sophia Playter, William Ellesback; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

3. Child's Name, Amelia Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, Sophia Dennison, Geo. Dennison; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

4. Child's Name, John Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, John Ellesback, Eliza Ellesback; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

5. Child's Name, Richard Ellesback Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sponsors, Richard Ellesback, Hannah Ellesback; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

6. Child's Name, Sally Ann Playter; Parents, John & Sarah Playter; Sarah Ellesback, James Ellesback; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

Parents, William Carroll, Nancy Carroll; Sponsors, Edward Wright, William Hamilton & Jane McIntosh; Date, 6 Oct., 1817.

It is impossible to say what this entry means. No child's name is given.

Child's Name, Anna Henrietta; Parents, Robert Loring, Major in Army, Mary Anna Loring; Sponsors, Thomas Scott, Mrs. Anna Loring & Mrs. Henrietta Loring; Date, 27 Dec.

This last registration is followed by a note in Dr. Strachan's handwriting: "Letter to Rev. A. Hamilton, 2nd January, 1818." Major Loring, as A.D.C. to Gen. Drummond, had served with great distinction in the war of 1812, being taken prisoner at Lundy's Lane. Chief Justice Scott was one of the sponsors.

Child's Name, Elizabeth; Parents, Jacob Snyder, Hannah Snyder; Sponsors, John Richardson; Date, 7 Feb., 1818.

Child's Name, George William; Parents, Philip Haines, Ann Haines; Sponsors, William Nitt, Sen., William Myers, William Cooper, Sarah Deary & James Tibbitt; 10 Feb., 1818.

Child's Name, Mary Ann; Parents, Philip Haines, Ann Haines; Sponsors, Elisa Cooper, Ann Cooper, William Nott; Date, 10th Feb., 1818.

Child's Name, Conrad Gram (30 years old), Thomas Fisher, Henry Fisher, Mary Ann; Parents, Valentine Fisher, Hannah Fisher; Sponsors, Joseph Shepherd, for Conrad Gram, Joseph Shepherd, Catherine Fisher; Date, February, 1818.

Child's Name, Sarah Fisher; Parents, Jacob Fisher, Catherine Fisher; Sponsors, Hannah Fisher, Valentine Fisher.

Child's Name, Catherine Gram; Conrad Gram, Catherine Gram; Sponsors, Catherine Fisher, Jacob Fisher.

The three preceding entries are undated and in a strange handwriting, not that of Dr. Strachan.

Child's Name, John; Parents, David Clock & Diadema Clock; Sponsors, John Clock, Mary Clock; Date, 16 Feb., 1818.

Child's Name, Robert Marsh; Parents, Robert Marsh, Mary Marsh; Sponsors, Martha Swift, John Swift; Date, 15 March; Born, 31st January.

Child's Name, Robert Bruce, Mary Maria; Parents, David Bridgeford, Lucy Bridgeford; Sponsors, James Tutter, Esq., David Stegman, Benjamin Burrand, Maria Stegman; Date, 17 March, 1818.

David Bridgeford had served in the York Volunteers during the war of 1812. David Stegman was a well-known tradesman of York. The name is, like so many more, spelt incorrectly in the register.

Child's Name, Thomas Johnson Grover, Almira, Tryphine, Mary, John, Marian & Peregrine; Parents, — Grover; this family baptised down the Country, but the names sent up afterwards; Sponsors, William Ruttan, Zachous Burnham, Miss Jones; Date, 31 January, 1818.

In all probability, judging from the names of the sponsors, the Grover family resided near Cobourg.

Child's Name, Maitland Grover Fox; Parents, William, Mary Fox; Sponsors, Henry Myers, Patrick Turrell, Mrs. Myers; Date, Feb., 1818.

Child's Name (omitted); Parents, Michael Mealy, Margaret Mealy; Sponsors, Edward Wright & Sophia Wright.

This entry is absolutely unintelligible, no child's name, no date given.

Child's Name, Mary Howard; Parents, Eulac Howard, 70th Regt., sergeant, Elizabeth Howard; Sponsors, Thomas Austin, Elizabeth Christie; Date, 18 June, 1818; Born 13 April.

The date, 18 June, 1818, appears in the register clearly enough, but four entries further on are two entries dated May, 1818, showing that the baptisms could not in all cases be entered up at the time of their occurrence.

Child's Name, Elvira Smith; Parents, Hon. Samuel Smith, administrator Govt., & — Smith his wife; Sponsors, Mrs. Emma Robinson, Miss Mary Powell, John Robinson, Att. General.

Child's Name, Samuel Boise Smith; Parents, Samuel Smith & — Smith; Sponsors, Chief Justice Scott, J. Smith Boise.

Child's Name, Charlotte Augusta Smith; Parents, Samuel Smith & — Smith his wife; Sponsors, Mrs. Chief Justice Powell, Mrs. Ann Strachan, James Baby.

These three last entries, all relating to the children of the Hon. Samuel Smith, are, strange to say, all undated. This is the first entry where Mrs. Strachan, the wife of the rector, appears as a sponsor. James Baby also appears for the first time. He was a member of the Legislative Council and a lieutenant of the county of Kent. The date was probably in May, 1818.

Child's Name, John Lawrence Dennison; Parents, George Dennison; Sponsors, John Dennison, Senior, Thomas John Dennison, Sophia Dennison; Date, 31st May, 1818.

This ought to be Denison.

Child's Name, James Lukin Robinson; Parents, John B. Robinson, Attorney General, Mrs. Emma Robinson, Godfather, etc., Rev. John Strachan, James W. Lukin, Esq., Mrs. Elizabeth Merry; Date, May, 1818; Born in March.

This was the eldest son of Sir John Beverley Robinson, and afterwards the second baronet. He died in 1895.

Child's Name, omitted; Parents, D'Arcy Boulton, Junior, and Mrs. S. Boulton.

This is the whole entry. It appears here as it does in the original record.

Child's Name, Mark Burnham, Elizabeth Burnham; Parents, Zachous Burnham, Mrs. Burnham; Sponsors, Mrs. Goodman, Mrs. Strachan; Date, 2 October, 1818.

Child's Name, William; Parents, Richard Langrail, Hannah Langrail; Date, 8th August, 1818.

Child's Name, John Thomas Ogden; Parents, John & Jane Ogden, York; Sponsors, Benjamin, Hardman, Jones; Bap. 18 July, 1818.

Child's Name, William Dummer Powell; Parents, Grant Powell, Esq., Mrs. Powell; Sponsors, Col. Nath. Coffin, John Powell, Esq., Miss Mary Powell; Date, 9th August, 1818.

Child's Name, William Henry Parker; Parents, James Parker, Maria Parker; Sponsors, William Micklam & Jean Micklam; Date, 13 August, 1818.

Child's Name, Adam; Parents, George Wilson, Margaret Wilson, Emigrants; 1 year old; 7 September, 1818.

Child's Name, Joseph Leonard; Parents, Aaron Leonard, Nancy Leonard; Sponsors, Thomas Deary, Sarah Deary; Date, 15th September, 1818.

Child's Name, George; Parents, James Fitzgibbon, Mary Fitzgibbon; Sponsors, Denis Fitzgerald, Daniel Brooke, Rebecca Kemp; Date, 20th September, 1818.

Daniel Brooke, mentioned here, will be well remembered. He was father of Daniel Brooke, jr., and George Brooke, and has many descendants.

Child's Name, Mark; Parents, Zacheus Burnham & Mrs. Burnham; Sponsors, John Strachan, Ann Strachan, Thomas Ridout; Date, 11th November, 1818.

It is very difficult to understand this entry, comparing it with that also relating to the Burnham family, dated 2nd October, 1818.

Child's Name, Thomas Shaw; Parents, William Shaw, Mrs. Shaw; Sponsors, Patrick Hartney; Date, 27th September, 1818.

Child's Name, --- Carrell; Parents, William Carrell & Ann Carrell; Sponsors, Peter Douglass, William Douglass, Jane McIntosh; Date, 6 Dec., 1818.

In this case the Christian name of the child is left out altogether. It was presumably a boy, but there is no evidence to show that such was the case.

Child's Name, Agnes Emma; Parents, Francis Jackson, Lieut. R. Navy, & Mrs. Jackson; Sponsors, Miss E. Jackson, Mrs. Custbest, John M. Jackson, Esq.; Date, 1 Jan., 1819.

Mr. John M. Jackson, mentioned here as one of the sponsors, resided at Springfield Park, on Yonge street, to the east of where now stands Christ church, Deer Park. He was an Englishman by birth, from Downton, in Wiltshire, and came to York about 1805. Being greatly dissatisfied with the way in which affairs were managed he returned to England and published a pamphlet containing some severe attacks on Canadian officials and official life. He returned to Canada, though, and settled here, Jackson's Point and Jackson's Bay being called after him.

Child's Name, Eliza Ann; Parents, George Duggan, Mary Duggan; Sponsors, John Monroe, Eliza & Nancy Cooper; Date, 31 Jan., 1819.

John Monroe ought to be John Monro, who was a merchant on the south side of King street east, near Frederick street. He died about 1822, and is interred in St. James' church yard.

Child's Name, Sarah Weston; Parents, William Hill, Jane Hill; Sponsors, James McMullin, Milliesin McMullin; Date, 14 Feb., 1819.

Child's Name, Catherine Hartney; Parents, Patrick Hartney, Catherine Hartney; Sponsors, William Cooper, Ann Cooper, Eleanor Hartney; Date, 21st February, 1819.

Captain Hartney was the Barrack master at York for a great number of years. His name appears frequently in these registers.

Child's Name, William Keanny; Parents, Andrew Keanny, Pr. 70 Regt., & Jane Keanny; Sponsors, Thomas Patesfield, Sarah Miller.

Child's Name, Mary Enticott; Parents, John Enticott, Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, Thomas Cooper, Ann Cooper, Sarah Enticott; Date, 14 Feb., 1811.

Child's Name, Amy; Parents, John Enticott, Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, William Cooper, Ann Cooper, Elizabeth Enticott; Date, 14 Feb., 1819.

Child's Name, Margaret; Parents, John Enticott, Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, John Montgomery, Eliza Cooper, Elizabeth Enticott; Date, 14 Feb., 1819.

Child's Name, Sophia; Parents, John Enticott, Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, Charles Denton, Agnes Enticott; Date, 4th Feb., 1819.

Child's Name, John; Parents, John, Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, Thomas Cooper, Charlotte Cooper, John Enticott; Date, 14 Feb., 1819.

Child's Name, Simeon Willm Enticott; Parents, John & Elizabeth Enticott; Sponsors, Chas. Denison, Thos. Denison & Sarah Enticott; Date, baptized 26th December, 1818.

Child's Name, Mary Elizabeth Summersett; Parents, John Summersett, Jane Summersett; Sponsors, Alexander McKenny, Jane Henmy, Mary E. Fingels; Date, 30 April, 1819.

Child's Name, John Higgins; Parents, John Higgins, Janet Higgins; Sponsors, Encas Shaw, Ann Shaw, George Anderson; Date, 30 May, 1819.

Child's Name, Charles Wells; Parents, Col. Wells, & Mrs. Wells; Sponsors, John Wells, Joseph Wells, Elizabeth Harris; Date, 6 June, 1819.

Child's Name, Thomas Ross; Parents, Jam s Ross, Elizabeth Ross; Sponsors, Robert Ross, Mary Mizeley; Date, 6 June, 1819.

Child's Name, James Mizeley; Parents, Thomas Mizeley, Mary Mizeley; Sponsors, Robert Ross, Elizabeth Ross; Date, 6 June, 1819.

Child's Name, Jane Fitzgerald; Parents, Dennis Fitzgerald, Maria Fitzgerald; Sponsors, Richd. Brooke, Jane Brook, Elizabeth Brooke; Date, 20 June, 1819.

Child's Name, William Stevenson; Parents, William Stevenson, Margaret Stevenson; Sponsors, George Duggan, Ellen McSweeney; Date, 20 June, 1819.

Child's Name, Mary Elizabeth Denison; Parents, George Denison, Esther B. Denison; Sponsors, Chas. Denison, Eliz. Plater, Elizabeth Denison; Date, 27 June, 1819.

The name here spelt Plater, should be Playter.

Child's Name, John Williams, Parents, Father absent, a soldier, Mother dead; Sponsors, John Ross, William Nott, Ann Nott; Date, 27 June, 1819.

Child's Name, Francis Thomas; Parents, William Knaggs, Sarah Knaggs; Sponsors, Thomas Bright, Robert Bright, Sally Bright; Date, 7th July, 1819.

Child's Name, Isabella; Parents, William Allan, Esq., Sarah S. Allan; Sponsors, Rachel Gamble, Ann Eliza Smith, Robt. Dickson; Date, 18 July, 1819.

Here, again, is a palpable error in Mrs. Allan's Christian name, which was Leah, not Sarah.

Child's Name, Harriet Sarah; Parents, Samuel Ridout, Eliza Ridout; Sponsors, Harriet Ridout, Eleanor Cuxwell, Geo. Ridout; Date, 18th., 1819.

Child's Name, Samuel George Ridout; Parents, Samuel Ridout, Esq., Eliza Ridout; Sponsors, John Radenhurst, Thomas O. Brent, Elizabeth Huber; Date, 18 July, 1819.

Samuel George Ridout lived on Lot street (Queen street east). He was successively sheriff and registrar for the Home District. Died June 6, 1855, aged 77.

Child's Name, Naomi Cronk; Sponsors, Samuel Ridout, Esq., Eliza Ridout, Mindnell Cronk.

The names in this entry are so very badly written in the register that it is quite impossible to say if they are given correctly. No date to this baptism.

Child's Name, Frances; Parents, Simon Kerion, Esa Kerion.

This entry is copied verbatim et literatim from the register.

Child's Name, Mary Ann, Parents, Hannah Earnest, reputed father Francis Lees; Sponsors, James Murray, Rachel Earnest; Date 10 Aug., 1819; almost 3 months old.

Child's Name, James & Mary; Parents, Michael Daley, Mary Daley; Sponsors, Catherine Harvey, Phoebe Kendrick, Thomas Carey, Peter Fitzpatrick.

This is another undated entry and appears to have been copied from some other book.

Child's Name, William John; Parents, Captain & Mary Ann Fitzgerald; Date, Born 27 July; Baptized 5 Sept., 1819.

Child's Name, Grant Powell; Parents, Grant Powell, Elizabeth Powell; Sponsors, Hon. D. Cameron, Miss Jennet Cameron; Date, Born 2nd Sept.; 17 Oct., 1837.

The date of this entry, namely, 1837, is that given in the original. How the error, as it is, occurred, it is impossible to say.

Child's Name, William; Parents, Benjamin Madill, Ann Madill; Sponsors, Elizabeth M. Duff, William Duff, George Campbell; Date, Three months old, 15 Nov., 1819.

Child's Name, Ann; Parents, William Quigly, Elizabeth Quigly; Sponsors, William Young, John Robert; Date, 1 Dec., 1819.

Child's Name, Elizabeth Tester; Parents, Darcy Boulton, Sally Boulton; Sponsors, Mrs. Eli Boulton, Eliza Powell, William Robinson; Date, 12 Dec., 1819.

The second Christian name of this child is so illegibly written in the original that it is difficult to know exactly what is meant.

Child's Name, David Caulwell; Parents, Thomas Caulwell, Margaret Caulwell; Sponsors, David Wood, William Thompson; Date, 19 Dec., 1819.

Child's Name, George; Parents, Thomas Joyce, Elizabeth Joyce; Date, Jan. 2, 1820.

Child's Name, Mary Ann; Parents, Sarah Morrison, Martin Morrison; Sponsors, James Bertry, Sarah Armstrong; Date, 12 Jan., 1820.

Child's Name, Margaret Andrews; Parents, William & Jane Andrews; Sponsors, George Stewart, Flora Burk; Date, 9 Jan., 1820.

Child's Name, Mary Ann Dexter; Parents, Elijah & Christiana Dexter; Sponsors, Alexander Burward, Kate Stebbins, Papst; Date, 16 Jan., 1820.

Child's Name, David; Parents, Conrad Clarke, Leanny, Clark; Sponsors, David Clarke, Diadena Clarke; Date, 10 Feb., 1820; nearly 3 years old.

Child's Name, George Simeon; Parents, Conrad Clarke, Leanny Clarke; Sponsors, George Anderson, Mary Anderson; Date, 10 Feb., 1820; 14 months.

Child's Name, Conrad Clarke; Parents, David Clarke, Diadena Clarke; Sponsors, Conrad Clarke, Leanny Clarke; Date, 10 Feb., 1820; 3 months.

Child's Name, Catherine Fox; Parents, William Fox, Mary Fox; Sponsors, John Lake, Mary Freeman; Date, 13 Feb., 1820.

Child's Name, Mary Ann Margaret; Parents, Major Loring & Mary Ann Loring; Sponsors, George Crookshank, Esq., Mrs. Justice Campbell; Date, 27 Feb., 1820.

Child's Name, Jane Wilson; Parents, David, Susannah Wilson; Sponsors, James Thompson, Mary Thompson; Date, 27 Feb., 1820.

Child's Name, William Henry Kells; Parents, Thomas, Jane Kells; Sponsors, Mary Kells, Hugh Davis, Charles Girty.

No date is appended to this entry in the original.

Child's Name, William Humphrey; Parents, Francis, Elizabeth Humphrey; Sponsors, Robert Brunn, Elizabeth Beeley; Date, 12 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Nancy Fawcett; Parents, Nancy Fawcett; Sponsors, Thomas Summers, Jane Elliot; Date, 12 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Catherine; Parents, Henry Philips & Nancy Philips; Sponsors, Elizabeth Wilcox, George Rosenbrugh; Date, 16 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Eliza Jane; Parents, John Siz, Elizabeth Siz; Sponsors, Jean Pingle, Jean Jordan, Jacob Pingle; Date, 17 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Ann; Parents, Ennis & Ann Shaw; Sponsors, William Higgins, Jane Tyler; Date, 20 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Eliza Sophia; Parents, Thomas & Maria Dennison; Sponsors, John Dennison, Elizabeth Sophia Dennison; Date, 20 March, 1820.

Thomas Denison resided at Weston, where he died and where he is interred. He was a brother of George T. Denison, of Bellevue, and the second son of John Denison.

Child's Name, Jane Fox; Parents, Thomas Mary Fox; Sponsors, Brian Gibbons, Bridget Haley; Date, 20 March, 1820.

Child's Name, Mary Beaty; Parents, George & Fanny Beaty; Sponsors, Robert Robinson, John McCormick, Margaret McCormick; Date, 31 March, 1820.

Child's Name, James McGuire; Parents, Bernard & Margaret McGuire; Sponsors, Robert Nelson, Catherine Bright; Date, 2 April, 1820.

Child's Name, John B. Robinson; Parents, John Robinson, Esq., Emma Robinson; Sponsors, Stephen Heward, Esq., Darcy Boulton, Esq., Mrs. Howard; Date, 13 May, 1820.

This was the Hon. John Beverley Robinson (second son of Chief Justice Robinson), sometime Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. Died June, 1896. Interred in St. James' cemetery.

Child's Name, Margaret Sparks; Parents, John & Sarah Sparks; Sponsors, John Banfield, Susan Squires, Margaret Kennedy; Date, 7 May, 1820.

Child's Name, Clement; Parents, James, Mary Hutchinson; Sponsors, Isaac Hutchinson, Jacob Hutchinson, Mary Charter; Date, 16 May, 1820.

Child's Name, Michael Wilson; Parents, Walter, Sally Wilson; Sponsors, James Hutchinson, Thomas Moore, Mary Hutchinson; Date, 16 May, 1820.

Child's Name, Thomas Hutchinson; Parents, John Hutchinson, Elizabeth Hutchinson; Sponsors, William Simson, George Hetherington, Emma Hetherington; Date, 11 June, 1820.

Child's Name, George Pelgrave; Parents, John & Frances Murchison; Sponsors, K. K. Murchison, D. Murchison; Date, 2 July, 1820.

Child's Name, Rebecca; Parents, John Bird, Mrs. Bird; Sponsors, Thomas Mier, Luenna Enaly, Mary Ann Swan; Date, 2 July, 1820.

Yet other most interesting records connected with St. James' are those contained in the Marriage registers, which extend from 1800 to 1896, both years inclusive. In these registers are many thousand entries, and in the earlier ones more especially are found the names of those who helped to build up Canada West and make our city what it is to-day.

In many cases the entries are signed in the original by one or other of the contracting parties, sometimes by both, with a mark. In every such case the mark has been omitted, but that is the only deviation which has been made from the original. The first entry is in 1800, and is as follows:

1. On the ninth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, were married by license Jepe Bennett and Catharine Hoover, of the township of Vaughan, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister, Missionary at York.

2. On the twenty-sixth day of October, one thousand eight hundred, were married Edward Turner, of His Majesty's Regiment of Queen's Rangers, and Mary Robinson, after publication of banns, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

3. On the thirtieth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, were married by license Daniel Tiers and Margaret Stuart, of the town of York, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister, Missionary at York.

4. On the twenty-sixth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one, were married by license Samuel S. Wilmot and Mary Stegmann, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister, Missionary at York.

This name, Mary Stegmann, is variously spelt, sometimes Steggman, again Stegman.

5. On the twentieth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one, were married by license, John Caen and Catherine La Pointe, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

6. On the twentieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one, were married Joshua L. Cozens and Susannah Page, by license, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

7. On the fourth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one, were married by license James Ruggles, Esq., and Esther Dunham, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister, Missionary at York.

Mr. Ruggles, mentioned here, was one of those who some years later were drowned in the wreck of the Speedy, off Brighton, Ont.

8. On the sixth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married by license, David MacGregor Rogers, Esq., and Sarah Pleyter, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister.

9. On the seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, Adam Empey and Anna Hoover, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister and missionary.

10. On the twenty-fourth day of April, in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married by license Joseph Harrison and Mary McDougall, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

11. On the sixth day of June, One thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, Thomas Bolton Soldier and Susannah Hoover, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

12. On the twenty-fourth day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after the publication of Banns, Thomas Johnson and Hannah Dennys, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

13. On the fifth day of September, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and two, were married by License, Elsha Beman and Mrs. Esther Robinson, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Miss.

14. On the sixteenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married by License, James Elliot and Jenny Thompson, by me George O'Kill Stuart.

James Elliot was one of the first settlers in Scarborough, and is buried in St. Andrew's churchyard, in that township. His wife was the second daughter of Archibald Thomson, also of Scarborough. The name of the bride is spelled incorrectly in the register. Many of James Elliot's descendants still live in Scarborough and Toronto.

15. On the twelfth day of October, in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married by License, Augustine Bofton and Sarah Eugenia Wilcox, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

16. On the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, Zecharias Galloway and Mary Smith, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

17. On the seventeenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, Nathan Chapman and Susannah Fagher, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

18. On the seventeenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, John Berry and Mary Cameron, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

19. On the eighteenth day of November, in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after the publication of Banns, Peter Ruheen and Mary Muir, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Miss.

20. On the sixth day of December, in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, William Pearce and Elizabeth Johnson, an african woman, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister, Miss.

21. On the tenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married by License, Samuel Heron and Sarah Conott, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

22. On the twenty-second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, were married, after publication of Banns, John Arnold and Elizabeth Miles, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

23. On the thirtieth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, Thomas Ward and Mary Playter, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

24. On the tenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, Frederick Herrick and Catherine Van Seyes, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

25. On the tenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, John Dehart and Anna Van Seyes, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

26. On the twenty-second day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, Isaac Mitchell and Margaret Hooton, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

27. On the eighth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, George Rippebarrack and Catherine Clock, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

The name of the bridegroom is in the register exactly as it appears here.

28. On the fourteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, Joshua Leach and Mary Dexter, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

Joshua Leach was a well known master carpenter, and built the first pulpit in St. James' church.

The earlier marriage registers are all numbered. Through a clerical error, though, on the part of Dr. Stuart, the numbers jump from 28 to 31, leaving out the two intermediate ones.

31. On the seventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, Jonathan Hale and Margaret Carey, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Missionary.

32. On the eleventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, Joseph Shepherd and Catherine Fisher, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Jonathan Hale (31) and Joseph Shepherd (32) were both prominent men in York's early days. The former was for some time pathmaster, and as also did Joseph Shepherd, filled other public offices.

33. On the nineteenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, Henry Hale and Catherine Stewart, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

34. On the first day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, Joseph Johnson and Catherine Gowers, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister & Miss.

Joseph Johnson was also a Scarborough man. Some of his family afterwards lived near Weston, Ont.

35. On the nineteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, Francis Pollard and Sophia Hale, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

36. On the fourth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, Thomas Smith and Hannah Cornwall, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister and Miss.

Hannah Cornwall was one of the Cornell family. Some of the latter spell their name as it appears in the register, others Cornell.

37. On the third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, John Disiere and Marianne Berhoe, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

38. On the twenty-sixth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married by License, William Warren Baldwin, Esq., and Pheobe Wilcox, by me, George O'Kill Stuart, Minister.

This was the well-known Dr. Baldwin. He resided first at the north-west corner of Front and Frederick streets, then at Russell Abbey, afterwards at Spadina House, still later on the north-east corner of Front and Bay streets, where he died in 1844. The name of the doctor's bride is spelt incorrectly; it should be Willcocks.

39. On the twenty-ninth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, were married, after publication of Banns, George Kremer, of Markham, and Mary Strode, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

40. On the third day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, were married, after publication of Banns, John Smith and Rebecca Chapman, by me, George O'Kill Stuart.

Note.—Since the account of St. James' Church was written and printed the death occurred of the Right Reverend Edward Sullivan, D. D., Rector of St. James. The event took place on Friday morning, Jan. 6th, 1899, at 5 o'clock, after an illness of rather more than three weeks. The funeral was on Monday, January 9th, from St. James' Cathedral, where the body lay in the chancel in state from 10.30 a. m. until 1.30 p. m. The deceased was habited as he lay in his coffin in his Episcopal robes and all around were floral tributes from members of the congregation, the clergy and friends of the deceased. The service was taken by the Right Reverend Bishop Sweatman, assisted by the Reverends G. C. Wallis and R. Ashcroft, assistant clergy of St. James'. The interment was at St. James' Cemetery beside his late daughter, Miss Kathleen Sullivan, who died December 29th, 1897.
