WINDSOR POLICE COURT.

Reported for the Daily Dominion.

Tuesday, Jan. 19, 1875.
Court opened at half past ten o'clock, His Honor Judge Caron, presiding.

Michael Lamasney was brought up before His Honor and charged with drunkenness. He pleaded guilty. His Honor remarked that he did not understand how a man could get drunk on election day, as the bars were all supposed to be closed.

Chief Constable Bain said that he could lay another information against him for being drunk. His Honor said that Mike got drunk on the very days that the bars were closed. Fined $1 and $4 costs, or 15 days in jail. He was allowed until next Saturday to pay the fine.

The case of Mary Luke against Catharine Hines; Mary Luke did not appear. His Honor said that he thought she had been tampered with, and said that he had found Hines had given her $5 to go across the river. He postponed the case until the 25th inst. Mrs. Hines having to give bail for her appearance on that day.

STARVATION IN NIAGARA.—A fearful tale comes to us from Niagara, under date of the 16th. Michael Murphy, better known as "Mayor Murphy," late of Dummer street, Toronto, and two of his children, died from starvation and exposure to day. The eldest boy died early this morning, and about noon Murphy and his little daughter expired. A third child is at the point of death. Rumors of the family being poisoned were rife during the day, and at the desire of a number of citizens a coroner's inquest was held, the jury returning a verdict to the effect that Murphy and his children came to their death from starvation and exposure to the cold. That is the tale as told by the telegraphist, but if those dead children, or the dying one, could speak, would not something be revealed which would bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of the people and authorities of Niagara? Without grow careless, or worse, it seems scarcely possible that our persious, three of whose children would starve to death in a town like Niagara. Where the circumstances are here the circumstances are known to the people of this town. What Murphy's name has been, and where he has been, and what he has done, is known to the people of this town.

MR. PATTERSON'S RETURN FOR NORTH ESSEX—HIS MAJORITY 612!

Of course, we take to ourselves some credit for the result of the election. The Daily Dominion labored without ceasing for the success of the Conservative ticket, and there was not a Conservative meeting of any importance held in the Riding at which a reporter from this office was not present. Besides, whatever personal influence we possessed was cheerfully placed at the disposal of the candidate. Independent of the general support given to the party, no less than 40 columns have been written and published by this journal in presenting his claims before the electors. And, in the Town of Windsor, where the election of the day principally lies, his Conservative majority of 204, while it shows that Mr. Patterson's sterling worth and ability is best appreciated where he is best known, also demonstrates the influence of the Daily Conservative organ in this town.

The following is the correct state of the poll, the ballots having been all counted at a late hour last night. In the town of Sandwich there were 30 rejected ballots:

Table with 2 columns: Candidate Name and Majority Count. Includes Patterson's Majority and McCreole's Majority.

This makes Mr. Patterson, as far as heard from, the banner candidate of the Province. He has polled the largest majority of any candidate in the country. Mr. Pardee, the Ministerial candidate for West Lambton, has 610. This, for a young member, is a very great honor, indeed, and in the event of a change of Government, which we confidently anticipate, it would give him strong claims to that seat in the Cabinet, which his knowledge of figures and general aptitude for public business entitles him to.

DEFEAT OF THE MINISTRY.

There has been a ridiculous attempt at an extra issued from the Record Office, claiming for Ministers a majority of seven! The majority is not very great, indeed, considering the shock with which all the loose fish are pressed into the net. For the Conservatives of Essex need be worried at all. The narrow margin of his figures without reading his own list. The net is full.

the other way. Fancy the cheek, for instance, of claiming O'Donohue, of Ottawa, as Ministerial, although every effort was made by that party to defeat him, and another candidate was specially brought out against him. The Record states that it stands: Ministerial, 47; Opposition, 37; Independent, 3. Now, the amusing part of this is that no ministry can work on "independent votes." They must have a working majority of men who have confidence in them.

There is no need of worrying about this, however. The case stands as follows: Algoma is yet to be heard from. Opposition.....44. Ministerial.....42. Which insures the defeat of the Government.

Muskoka is also yet to hear from. But if both it and Algoma should go against us, the ensuing tie would still defeat the Government.

The Last Farewell.

Written for the Daily Dominion BY O. B. JOYFUL. The bell did toll a mournful sound, And many hearts were fill'd with grief, The big tears fell upon the ground, In vain attempts to bring relief.

Departed friend—our joy, our all, Must we consign thee to the tomb, Must our "Grit Cause," in Essex fall, O! can it be—this hour has come!

Farewell dearest—the last farewell, In sorrow we will think of thee, Thy loss to us no words can tell, No signs denote our misery.

Now as we place thee in the grave, Where thou henceforth must ever dwell, We say to thee—"Thou art at rest, O grave! cold gravel why—O! why must it be?"

"Have you got a little Indian there?" said the engineer, as we passed a young squaw with a papoose, standing at a depot on the Pacific Railroad, "No," said she, "half Indian, half Injuneer!"

An American lawyer engaged in a case tormented a witness so much with questions that the poor fellow at last cried for water. "There," said the judge—"I thought you would pump him dry."

A Horrible Crime.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17.

Last Tuesday afternoon, while a little girl nine years old, daughter of J. B. Morgan, of Urbana, Ohio, was returning home from school she was enticed into the woods by a man who disguised her person in a most horrible manner. The villain then commenced hailing a fire with the intention, it is believed, of killing and burning the child, when a hunter came up and asked what he was doing there. He made some reply which satisfied the hunter, who went away. The wretch then told the girl that as a man had seen him he would have to take her home. He went part of the distance with her and left. She reached home in the evening in such a condition as to be unable to give any account of the affair. The next morning she gave the authorities a description of the author of the crime, and telegrams were sent in all directions to arrest him, the city Council offering a reward of $500 for his capture. Wednesday, a man answering his description was arrested at Marysville, Ohio, and brought to Urbana, and identified. He made a full confession, giving his name as G. W. Ellery, of Buchanan, Michigan, and said he was twenty-two years old. After the examination, a disposition was shown by the crowd to hang the prisoner at once, and the authorities had considerable difficulty in getting him to jail. Thursday night an effort was made to take him from the jail, but was prevented by the guards. This morning at an early hour, a band of masked men numbering about forty went to the jail, captured and bound the guards, battered down the doors and took the prisoner out and gave him a few minutes to pray, and hung him to a tree in front of the court house. A large crowd gathered, but the lynchers had posted a strong guard, and the feeble effort made to interfere with them was unsuccessful. After all signs of life had ceased in the suspended body, the lynchers quietly dispersed. The body hung an hour before the coroner came and cut it down. Public opinion is decidedly in favor of the vigilante. The little girl is in a fearful condition, and it is thought she cannot recover.

A Newark Love Story—The Verdict in the Plummer-Compton Breach of Promise Suit.

The breach of promise suit of Miss Grace E. Plummer of Newark against Charles W. Compton of the same city, which has occupied three days' time in the New Jersey Supreme Court, was concluded last evening. Both litigants are well known in Newark society.

Miss Plummer demanded $25,000, and testified that the courtship covered a period of one year and four months. In this time Mr. Compton had given her a diamond ring, written love letters, kissed her at every meeting, hugged her on the parlor sofa, and slept on her shoulder; had addressed her parents as "Father" and "Mother" Plummer, and had, one evening in March, 1874, asked her to be his wife, and she had consented. Her testimony was mainly corroborated by Mrs. Plummer, Miss Grace's mother, and Charles Plummer, her brother, and Mrs. Emily Plummer, the brother's wife.

Mr. Compton said in defence that he had regarded Miss Plummer as a sister, not a sweetheart. The ring was only a loan, and his attentions were not more assiduous than toward other young ladies. He admitted that he did not kiss all of his lady acquaintances, but said that he had kissed every lady member of the Plummer family. He denied having asked Miss Grace to be his wife, and when he called in May for the diamond ring, and she asked why he had made the request, he was surprised to know that she had regarded it as an engagement ring. The jury returned a verdict giving Miss Plummer $5,000.

PLUCK AND LUCK.—Bays, be plucky if you would be lucky! While ten men watch for chances, one man makes chances; while ten men wait for something to turn up, one turns something up; so while ten men fail, one succeeds and is called a man of luck—the favorite of fortune. There is no luck like pluck, and fortune most favors those who are most indifferent to fortune.

The Hempstead Hanging.

The colored murderers, Lewis Jarvis and Albert Jackson, were hanged in the Queens county jail yard in Hempstead Saturday. On the morning of Jan. 28, 1875, Peter Maloney, a man employed by Mr. Samuel Jones, of South Oyster Bay, went to the well to draw water, and being unable to pull up the bucket he locked down and saw a man's body below. It was the body of Mr. Jones, a rich and somewhat eccentric old farmer, about 70 years of age, who had lived alone in the house. The rooms within had been ransacked, but much valuable property in the form of bonds and securities had not been touched. It was therefore inferred that the murderers were ignorant men, certainly not professional burglars. It was ascertained that the murderers first set fire to some brushwood near the house, and then, when the old man, seeing the flames, ran out to extinguish the fire they entered the house and awaited his return. The blood-stained walls, the discarded furniture, the trampled grass outside, and the mutilated corpse in the well told the rest of the story. The old farmer, as he returned to the house, was clubbed and stunned, and then dragged to the well, and the marks of bloody fingers on the woodwork at the top showed where he clung for his life, and the braised and fashed hands told of the blows that finally forced him to relax his hold. He tried more than once to climb out of the well, too, as was attested by the torn finger nails and the marks of blood on the side of the well. But several large stones were hurled down upon him, and a heavy chopping block was dropped upon his head, that probably killed him.

After some time Jackson said that he was an accessory after the fact. Jarvis on the night of the murder having told him of it. This story was materially corroborated by Jarvis's wife, who, however, ostracized Jackson as well as her husband. When the older criminal heard what had been disclosed he broke down, and confessed that he participated in the murder, but he charged the greater part of the crime upon Jackson.

The Grand Jury indicated both prisoners, and on the 21st of November, 1874, Jarvis was put on trial. Judge Pratt sentenced him to be hanged on the 15th of January, 1875. A few days later Jackson was sentenced.

Shortly after 11 o'clock on the day appointed, about 200 persons were admitted into the large jail yard, in which twenty-one policemen under Capt. Wiegman of Brooklyn, and about the same number commanded by Sergeant Darcy of Long Island City surrounded the scaffold. A very large crowd pressed against the outer side of the wooden fence, an eye being visible at every hole, and in many instances those were unable to find knot holes at holes for themselves. Inside few of the spectators were able to keep their feet, falls were numerous, and occasionally the wind blew a man across the yard and through the cordon of policemen.

AN AFFALING SPECTACLE.

Finally the ministers, the sheriff, and some of the deputy sheriffs stepped forward to shake hands with the culprits. Jackson bowed and smiled, and Jarvis recovered himself sufficiently to wish them a last farewell. Then the caps were drawn over their faces and the sheriff stepped into the little plank structure in which the weights were hanging. The dead silences that followed was broken by the sharp blow of the axe as it descended upon the rope and Jackson was jerked into the air. His body assumed an almost horizontal position, and he fell back with a dull thud to the end of the rope. Menonite Jarvis, under the other end of the cross beam, was raised with a violent shock three feet from the ground; then the rope broke and he fell back upon the platform. The deputy sheriffs hardly knew what to do in the emergency, and the spectators stood paralyzed. Exclamations of horror filled the air, and all attention was directed toward Jackson. Jarvis had fallen on his feet, and was standing alone with the broken rope hanging from his neck. He was half strangled, and when a deputy sheriff approached him his voice was heard under the black cap begging the officers to loosen the rope. This they did, and his body began to sink. A policeman supported him, and he was again placed beneath the beam; but though his head had fallen on his shoulders and his neck was bent under him he still spoke.

"DON'T MURDER ME."

he said, and then, as the noose was again adjusted about his neck, "Oh, don't make any mistake this time."

Meantime, within two feet of him, Jackson was moving convulsively, but not violently. His legs trembled, and he was occasionally drawn up, and his chest heaved slightly, but his sufferings were soon over, and in a few minutes his body hung motionless. The noose having once more been adjusted around Jarvis's neck, a deputy sheriff was about to attach it to the rope from the cross beam; but the weights were again dropped, and the rope was jerked out of the officer's hand flying upward and leaving the culprit still standing on the platform supported by a policeman. Both men were raised from the ground at 11:28 A. M. At 11:30 the noose was finally adjusted and Jarvis, uninjured except by the shock, was slowly drawn into the air. There he began to struggle, though not so violently as might have been expected. At 11:42 he was dead. Jackson died at 11:34.

The bodies were then lowered into polished and ornamented coffins bearing the words: "Lewis Jarvis, died Jan. 15, 1875. Aged 50 years." Albert Jackson, died Jan. 15, 1875. Aged 24 years." Jackson's sisters took away their brother's remains, and those of Jarvis were taken off by his wife.

A Horrible Outrage.

One day a respectable dressed man carried a well-known child, unflung up, and apparently sick, into French's Hotel. He placed the child on the stair and began to talk to it in a rough unkind way. The attention of the guests was attracted, and then gathered around. "You are able to walk up-stairs by yourself," said the man, "and I won't carry you." The poor child began to sob worse than before, and the brutal man gave it a severe thump on the side of the head. The child began moaning piteously. The indignation of the by-standers was excited, and one of them said to the man: "Is that your child?" "What's that to you?" the man answered, "I won't tell you." "He's my father," the child sobbed; "and he's killed—my—mother—just as he's going to—kill—me." The man doubted his fit and made as if he was about to give a savage blow. One of the by-standers interfered and said, "Say, if you don't stop this, I'll call a policeman. I never saw such a brutal father in my life."

The man began to fumble in his pocket, and the child cried out: "Take care; he's got a knife. He's going to stick you."

Sure enough he produced a knife and opened it. The crowd slipped away one by one, except two.

"If I am to be arrested, the man said, "it will be for something," and thereupon he plunged the knife into the body of the child. The child shrieked "I'm murdered," and the crowd rushed to the spot. The man quietly raised the child to his arms, and removing his hat said:

"Gentlemen don't be alarmed. This is a wooden child. I am only a ventriloquist. The crowd went away with astonishment—N. Y. Sun.
